ALIENS FACE CLEAN-UP

Deportation for Dry Violators

Woodcock's Plans Call for Drive Against Offending Foreign Element

Jones Law, Which Provides Way for Such Removals, will be Invoked

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—A campaign against alien violators of the prohibition statutes and the invocation of the Jones law to bring about felony convictions and deportation hold a major place in the program of the reorganized enforcement bureau.

The plan fits in smoothly with the general policy of concentrating on the larger operators in an effort to shut off the supply of intoxicating beverages at its source.

Although reluctant to estimate the proportion of immigrant offenders, directing officers of the war on illicit liquor are firmly of the opinion that aliens provide the leadership and the rank and file as well, a majority of the great rum-running gangs.

CHICAGO CITED

In proof of this contention, they point to Chicago and other cities in which a foreign element controls the activities of the underworld.

The possibilities of the Jones law in bringing about deportations were pointed out by President Coolidge when the measure was approved by Congress and were cited then as his principal reason for signing the bill. Since that time, however, they have been largely overshadowed in prohibition discussions by the heavy penalties provided.

The law makes a distinction between minor and major, or felonious, violations of the dry statutes which carry a maximum punishment of five years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine. An alien convicted of a felony is deported at the conclusion of his prison term.

CHIEF RELIANCE

To obtain convictions of this magnitude, the bureau is relying large... a staff of 200 specially trained investigants responsible only to the ... They are charged ... ferreting out the wholesale liquor conspiracies involving territory which overlaps the administrative ... district.

The investigators are men who

BEE EXCURSION PLANS UPSET

Swarm Takes Possession of British Railway Train; Signalman Saves Day

AMERSHAM (Eng.) Aug. 2. (AP)—A swarm of bees this afternoon took possession of a passenger train entering the station here and routed passengers and trainmen alike. The bees settled thickly in nearly every compartment.

After considerable delay and many vain efforts to shoo the bees away, a signalman near by, who is a beekeeper in his spare time, induced the swarm to move into one of his hives. It was only then the train could proceed.

Junks to Block Siang River Imprisoning Destroyer Loaded With Aliens

Chinese Communist Army Digging in for Battle With Nationalists

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—Plans of Communists to block the Siang River and thus force the United States gunboat Palos to remain in the upper reaches of the stream in the vicinity of Changsha were reported today to the Navy Department.

The gunboat, laden with Americans evacuated from the city last week when it was destroyed by Communists and bandit hordes, relayed the report to the Yangtze River patrol which in turn communicated it to the Navy.

The message said:

"Reported if water falls attempt will be made to block river five miles down stream by granite-loaded junks."

Another communication said: "Unreliable" reports told of the e-

BOMB 'LIAR' QUIZ ENDS

Young and Board Hear M'Donald

Mooney Case Recanter Tells of Drinking Whisky in Week of Parade

Carnahan Scores Witness Who Admits He Falsely Identified Pair

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 2. (AP)—The hearing of John MacDonald's story of "lies" told in the Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings trials in 1916 was concluded before Gov. Young and the advisory pardon board ended here late today after the Baltimore witness was closely questioned for more than three hours.

Under questioning by Lieut.-Gov. Carnahan, chairman of the board, MacDonald admitted for the first time in a public statement he had been drinking whisky daily for a week before the Preparedness Day parade July 22, 1916. He said he got out of a San Francisco hospital about a week or ten days before the parade, after having undergone an operation.

DRINKING ADMITTED

MacDonald admitted drinking while testifying as a witness in the Billings and Mooney trials, but said he did not drink until court was over each day.

Carnahan, by questions, led MacDonald through an account of his actions on the day the parade was bombed, and on the following days when he identified Billings and Mooney as having placed a suitcase at Steuart and Market streets, just before the explosion.

MacDonald said his identification of the men in 1916 was a lie, but that all the rest of his grand-jury testimony dealing with his actions while watching the parade was true.

DRAMA AT HEARING

The hearing was concluded with a touch of tense drama during which Lieut.-Gov. Carnahan and Edwin V. McKenzie, San Francisco attorney representing Billings, took the witness to task for admittedly falsely identifying Billings and Mooney as the men responsible for the San Francisco bomb blast in 1916.

"You told us you knew positively these were not the men," Carnahan

Small Group of Friends Sees Former President of Mexico Take Young Bride

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2. (AP)—Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former President of Mexico, and Miss Leonor Llorente, 25-year-old voice student, were married at 2 p.m. today at the former President's Santa Barbara ranch near here.

The marriage was simple and was attended by only a small group of close friends of the pair, including a few high government officials. It was a civil marriage performed by a court official.

The couple planned to spend their honeymoon at Teruacan Hot Springs resort in the State of Puebla.

The bride, besides being a promising voice student, studied law and dentistry at the national preparatory school. She is a native of Yucatan, but came here several years ago and resided with her mother. She is widely known in the American colony.

The witnesses of the marriage were the bride's mother, Ramon Solido, a close friend of the former President; T. A. Robinson and Mrs. Robinson, who is a daughter of the former President by a previous marriage; Robinson's brother, Alfredo, and Riva Palacio, Secretary of the Interior.

Gen. Calles is 52 years of age. He has several married children and two grandchildren whose parents are the former Ernestina Calles and her American husband, Mr. Robinson. Calles's first wife died in Los Angeles three years ago.

Turks Believe They Have Discovered Sarcophagus of Constantine the Great

ISTANBUL (Turkey) Aug. 2. (AP)—A beautifully carved marble sarcophagus believed by Turkish archeologists to be that of the Emperor Constantine the Great, founder of Constantinople, has been discovered in a garden of the Janissary Museum.

Workmen turned up the sarcophagus while digging an entrance to the huge Byzantine cistern beneath the museum and the St. Sophia Mosque, which soon will be opened to the public.

The Turkish authorities are confident the tomb is that of Constantine.

Comptroller - General to Rule on Protest After Study This Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—Comptroller-General McCarl plans a decision on Arizona's protest against expenditure of the $10,660,000 appropriated for initial work on Boulder Canyon Dam next week.

The Interior Department, to which the protest was referred for comment, returned it to the Comptroller-General without presenting it to Secretary Wilbur, holding no new contentions were presented.

Rudolph L. Golze, Comptroller counsel, said a study of the protest will be completed next week but that no vouchers have been submitted against the allotment.

The protest was filed by K. Berry Peterson, Arizona Attorney-General. It challenges the legality of the appropriation, contending conditions of the Swing-Johnson Act have not been met.

WIND FANS IDAHO BLAZE TO NEW FURY

Forest Fire Considered Conquered Breaks Lines; One Fighter Injured.

LEWISTON (Idaho) Aug. 1. (AP)—A heavy wind churned the 1500-acre Coolwater fire in the Selway National Forest outside control lines and the blaze is running wild to the westward tonight.

The blaze jumped several miles of trenching which earlier today was believed to have been holding it in subjection and several smaller fires were set by flying embers. The large fire was traveling westward down river in heavy timber.

Since yesterday 300 men have been on the front and a crew of sixty more, sent from Orofino and Winchester, was expected at midnight.

The first casualty is Martin Rivers, Lewiston, hit by a falling tree. An arm was broken and he was possibly hurt internally.

AERIAL LINE BIDS NEAR

Two Routes Will End Here

Transcontinental Service for Mail and Passengers will be Launched Soon

Number of Companies Plan to Submit Propositions on the 25th Inst.

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Announcement was made by the Postoffice Department today that bids will be reopened the 25th inst. for two new transcontinental air-mail routes having Los Angeles as their western terminal.

One route will run from New York City via Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Columbus, O., Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Amarillo, Tex., (or from St. Louis via Tulsa to Amarillo) and Albuquerque, N. M., to Los Angeles, a distance of approximately 2350 miles.

ANOTHER ROUTE

The other will run from Atlanta, Ga., via Birmingham, Dallas, Fort Worth and El Paso and undesignated additional stops in New Mexico and Arizona to Los Angeles. The length of this route is 2008 miles.

The new continent-spanning routes are to be operated under the terms of the Watres Act, enacted at the last session of Congress. The contracts for mail will be awarded on space-mileage basis, instead of on a poundage basis as under the Kelly Act. A number of the established air transport lines are expected to submit bids and competition for control of the new routes is declared to be extremely keen throughout the entire industry.

TERMS SPECIFIED

Bids will be accepted only from companies which have had at least six months' experience in both night and day operations over a route 250 miles or more in length. Accommodations may be provided for from seven to ten passengers in each plane depending on the volume of mail carried and each plane must carry two-way radio apparatus and latest safety devices.

The Postoffice Department expects an average speed of 100 miles an hour over the routes, after making allowance for delays caused by unfavorable weather and mishaps. The contracts will be for four years.

The announcement did not state when operations over the new routes will commence as this will depend to some extent on what companies are selected.

Japan Empress Expects Fourth Visit by Stork

(Copyright, 1930, by New York Times)

TOKIO, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—The Empress is expecting a fourth child next February, according to reports credited by the Japanese newspapers to the court physician. These tidings have been received with much joy by the nation, which hopes a boy will be born to succeed to the throne. The Empress is now staying at the Imperial villa at Hayama.

Three children have been born to the Emperor and Empress, all girls. Princess Teru, the eldest, is now nearly 5 years of age. The second child, Princess Hisa, was born on September 10, 1927, but died in 1928 from influenas. The third daughter, Princess Taka, is 2 years of age.

DULUTH (Minn.) Aug. 2. (AP)—William A. McGonagle, 69 years of age, president of the Duluth, Missaba and Northern Railroad, and acting head of the Duluth Iron Range Railroad, and one of the Northwest's pioneers and distinguished figures, died at his home here today.

HEAT DEMON HANGS ON

Drought's Toll Mounts High

New Searing Blasts Sweep on Middle West, with Hope of Any Rain Remote

Another Death Added to List; Crops Fast Perishing and Wells Running Dry

BY JOHN P. GALLAGHER
"Times" Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—A new heat wave with temperatures above the 100-mark descended on the dry and seared Middle West today. Assistant Forecaster Day, after a searching scrutiny reported tonight that there is not a drop of rain or a breath of cool weather in sight and he predicted more hot weather in August than there was in July.

Peoria reported 100 deg. There was one death from the heat at Gary, Ind.

The Mississippi River is at a record low stage. Miles of sand bars line both shores. Small streams and wells, which have functioned throughout heat waves in previous years and so far this year have gone dry. The shortage of water and reports of disease are among the more serious phases of the drought.

Terrific heat returned to Nebraska today when the mercury jumped from 89 deg. Friday to 107 deg. in Omaha this afternoon. Reports tonight indicated higher temperatures in other parts of the State. The government forecast tonight says it will continue warm with possibly scattered thunderstorms in the north Mississippi Valley, but no rain is promised in Nebraska and Iowa.

DAMAGE HIGH

Telegraphic reports to Omaha from various sections of the State place the corn damage as high as 25 per cent. Farmers all over the State are preparing to feed their wheat to live stock because of the apparent shortage in corn and the State university agricultural department in a statement today recommended to farmers that wheat be used for feed. Many Nebraska cities and towns report a shortage of water.

The corn fields of Kansas and Missouri drooped proportionately as the mercury again stretched upward today, repeating an almost daily process of the last month. Less than half a corn crop is predicted for these States following the hottest July since 1901 and the driest since 1918. Today the top reading was 102 deg. in Kansas City and 108 deg. in some parts of Kansas, with street thermometers much higher. The characteristic southwest wind came off the plains as from a furnace door.

MEAN TEMPERATURE

The mean temperature in this region the past thirty-three days has been six degrees above normal. July consisted of a series of three heat waves of from one week to ten days' duration, each broken by cooling north winds but very little rain. After the first ten days of the month, however, humidity has been of very small percentage and the heat less oppressive.

Figured in dollars the heat has cost millions of dollars in damage to the corn crop and to garden products. The Kansas wheat crop, also short this year owing to dryness and other unfavorable conditions, was for the most part harvested before July 4, last, when the "fireworks" started in earnest.

CHICAGO SWELTERS

Chicago's official maximum today was 96 deg. A maximum of 100 is possible over the Sabbath, the weather forecaster declared tonight. Lack of rain and the burning heat of the past three weeks have done great damage to Kane county (Ill.) crops, especially corn, according to County Farm Adviser Kelly. The corn crop will not be a third of the average yield, he said. Small grains have been hit as hard as corn, which is so badly burned that heavy rains now would do no good. The temperature in Aurora this afternoon mounted to 99 deg.

While most of this section was

Mexican Deaf Mute Jailed and Daughter of Stevenson Held in Phoenix Hotel

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Aug. 2. (AP)—Stephen Nieto, 20-year-old deaf mute, apprehended in Mesa, Ariz., near Phoenix today, with June Elwood Stevenson, runaway daughter of Elwood A. Stevenson, superintendent of the California School for the Deaf and Blind at Berkeley, is in the County Jail here tonight. Sheriff Wright said he received a telegram late today from California authorities saying officers are en route to Phoenix to return the youth to the Coast on a statutory charge.

The Stevenson girl disappeared from her Long Beach (Cal.) home last Tuesday. Two days later it was learned she and Nieto were traveling through Southern California together and had been seen in Yuma, Ariz.

Miss Stevenson is being held in a Phoenix hotel pending arrangements for returning her to her parents.

The couple were arrested in Mesa a short time after Phoenix officers found they had been registered at a Phoenix hotel under the name of Fields. Nieto, a former student at the institution where the girl's father is superintendent, had in his pocket when arrested a newspaper account of the search being conducted for him and his companion.

The girl, after prolonged questioning by police, admitted she and Nieto are not married. She said they planned when they left Long Beach to be married in Yuma. This idea, she said was abandoned on their arrival in the Arizona city when they found, through reading newspapers that Yuma police had been notified to arrest them.

"We then decided," officers quoted her as saying, "to go to Denver and be married there. Nieto is the first boy I ever went with."

Nieto carried in his pocketbook a recommendation testifying as to his good character, which was signed by the girl's father in his capacity as superintendent of the California school for the deaf and blind.

Shaw Describes Father's Toping

LONDON, Aug. 2. (AP)—George Bernard Shaw, with his customary Shavian frankness, in the preface to a new edition to his works, tells the world his father was a drunkard. In the days of his early youth his family suffered social ostracism because of his father's habits, Shaw says.

Flyer and Pilot Reach Harbor Grace on World Dash, With Dublin as Objective Today

HARBOR GRACE (N. F.) Aug. 2. (AP)—John Henry Mears, who twice in a comparatively short lifetime has broken the round-the-world time record only to see it shattered again, is poised here tonight for the longest hop of his latest effort, 1900 miles across the North Atlantic from this airport to the Baldonnel Airdrome at Dublin, Ireland.

Mears dropped out of the skies at 1:35 o'clock, eastern standard time, this afternoon in his red-and-silver monoplane, the City of New York, after a speedy flight from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., in the unusually good time of eight hours and fifteen minutes. The distance is 1180 miles.

With him were two passengers, Henry J. Brown, 31-year-old air-mail pilot, who acquitted himself perfectly in his first long over-water test, and Tallwind II, a terrier and a gift to Mrs. Mears from Mary Pickford.

If all goes well, and there is every prospect tonight that weather tomorrow will be as near to ideal as possible over the dead stretch of the fog-shrouded North Atlantic which they must next negotiate, the flyers hope to be off at dawn.

The world's record for the circumferential journey they have undertaken is twenty-one days, eight hours and twenty-six minutes, and it belongs to the Graf Zeppelin, which made the mark last year. Mears and Brown hope to cut it to fifteen days.

The trim craft circled over this city twice before it came gracefully to a perfect landing. Mears alighted while Brown taxied back to the head of the field and both were given rousing cheers by the large crowd which quickly closed in on them.

The two men posed for about twenty minutes for newspaper and other photographers and then turned their attention to the all-important business of tuning up the plane for its greatest test tomor-

RED TROOPS DIGGING IN AGAINST NATIONALISTS

SHANGHAI, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Authoritative reports from Changsha today indicated that the Communists have returned to the looted city, are digging trenches and making further preparations for a strong defense against government troops.

A report from Hankow said the directing genius of the Communist occupation is Gen. Peng Teh-huis, leader of the so-called Fifth Red Army, which occupied Taeh a few days previously, leaving behind a trail of wanton destruction.

PENG RUSSIAN DISCIPLE

Gen. Peng's army has also occupied Yochow and has been responsible for the firing on foreign shipping and naval craft and it is asserted one of his men was responsible for the recent killing of the American seaman, Elkins, of the U.S.S. Guam.

His army is organized along Communist lines and he is a close disciple of the Red Internationale at Moscow, from where he receives instructions and possibly funds.

Dispatches from the Japanese Rengo News Agency at Hankow tonight said a force of 20,000 Communist troops, under the leadership of the Red generals, Chu Teh and Moatse-tung, are advancing on Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi. As a result Gen. Luti-ping, head of the provincial government, with 10,000 troops, is digging trenches and making preparation to defend the city. A situation of extreme uneasiness exists in the Hankow district where the expectation of a Communist uprising exists despite the claims of the government to the contrary.

LOSS TO BE PAID FOR

C. T. Wang, Foreign Minister, has declared that the Nationalists' government would hold itself responsible for the Changsha affair after restoring order and punishing the perpetrators, the government is ready to make restitution for foreign losses.

Dr. Wang asked patience from the foreign powers, and said he is profoundly sorry to hear that two Europeans were missing, one of whom is reported to have been captured by the Red troops. Dr. Wang said that the government would strive to rescue them.

The Japanese have lodged a protest with the Nationalist government demanding that the Chinese take steps to prevent repetitions of such incidents, and reserving the right to demand indemnity for losses.

Word was received here tonight from Manila that the United States destroyer Pecos left for this port under a full head of steam to stand by to give aid to American citizens at the scene of the Communist uprising.

A Test Every Man Past 40 Should Make

Medical authorities agree that 85 per cent of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a disorder of the prostate gland. Aches in feet, legs and back, frequent nightly risings, sciatic pains are some of the signs—and now a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has written a remarkably interesting free book that tells of other symptoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as inevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 50,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book, to restore their health and strength—and to restore the prostate gland to its proper functioning. Arrange immediately for this book. Call in person if possible, otherwise mail your request to the Electro Thermal Company, Dept. B-154, 203 Van Nuys Bldg., 210 West Seventh St., Los Angeles—the concern that is distributing this book for the author—it will be sent to you absolutely free, without obligation. Simply send name and address. But don't delay for the edition of this book is limited.—[Advertisement.

WON'T LOOK UP

MacDonald did not answer, but sat looking down at his hands.

"Look at me. Look at the Governor and answer that question," Carnahan demanded.

MacDonald did not look up, but mumbled something.

"He said 'No,'" Carnahan said to other members of the board.

McKenzie questioned MacDonald closely after Carnahan was through with the witness. McKenzie drew from MacDonald the admission he "was sorry" when he learned Billings and Mooney were convicted, largely upon his identification of them as the bombers.

"You felt sorry," McKenzie said, "then why did you testify falsely a few weeks later in the trial of Mrs. Rena Mooney?"

"I don't know, Mr. McKenzie," MacDonald replied.

"TOLD TO DO SO"

Carnahan asked MacDonald: "Do you really want us to believe you are the kind of monster that would testify these were the men when you knew positively they were not and deliberately go on the witness stand and swear they were, knowing their lives depended on it?"

MacDonald replied, "Well, I wouldn't have done it if I wasn't told to."

Frank P. Walsh, attorney for Mooney, did not question MacDonald, but after the board had completed its interrogation Walsh addressed the Governor and members of the board, pointing out what he termed were wide discrepancies between the testimony MacDonald gave here and before the Supreme Court in San Francisco.

Walsh endeavored to show that MacDonald was telling the truth before the board because he remembered minute details of his action on the day of the bomb blast back in 1916.

At the conclusion of the hearing Carnahan said the board would "adopt" the record and render its decision some time after the Supreme Court decides its action in the petition of Billings for a pardon. Mooney's pardon petition is before the pardon board.

While the hearing was under way the Capitol was closely guarded by State and city police against possibility of a demonstration. Before the hearing opened word was received by State and city officials that a "number of Communists" were en route to the Capitol from San Francisco.

City detectives and patrolmen were assigned to assist about twenty State police guard the Capitol. All but one entrance was locked and no one was permitted to go above the second floor, on which the proceedings were held.

MIDWEST HIT BY MORE HEAT

sweltering in the heat a terrific storm which preceded a cloudburst today ruined corn and gardens in and near Durham, Wis., south of Eau Claire. Merchandise stocks were heavily damaged when the water filled store basements on the main street following the downpour. Many country roads were washed out.

RECORDS BROKEN BY CONTINUED DROUGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1. (Exclusive)—The following data, compiled by Editorial Research Reports, cover the deficiency in rain during June and July of this year in comparison with previous rainfall deficiencies in the records of the Weather Bureau, which go back for forty or fifty years. The figures for the last few days of July are Weather Bureau estimates based on telegraphic reports.

Ohio—Lowest rainfall in records of Weather Bureau, and 12 per cent below previous record low, in 1894.

Kentucky—Lowest on record, and 25 per cent below previous record low, in 1894.

Indiana—Third lowest on record, and lowest since 1914.

Illinois—Third lowest on record and lowest since 1914.

Missouri—Second lowest on record, and lowest since 1901.

Tennessee—Lowest on record, and 55 per cent below previous record low, in 1901.

Oklahoma—Fourth lowest on record, and lowest since 1914.

Mississippi—Lowest on record, and 45 per cent below previous record lows in 1901 and 1924.

Louisiana—Lowest on record and 22 per cent below previous record low in 1924.

Arkansas—Lowest on record and 60 per cent below previous record in 1896.

Texas—Lowest on record and 10 per cent below previous record lows in 1914 and 1924.

The following data cover the month of July, 1930, only:

Kansas—Third lowest on record, and lowest since 1917.

Iowa—Third lowest on record, and lowest since 1894.

Nebraska—Second lowest on record and lowest since 1917.

North Dakota—Second lowest on record and lowest since 1894.

South Dakota—Lowest on record.

In the agricultural States most seriously affected by the present drought the rainfall during July, 1930 (the last several days estimated) has been the following percentages of the normal July rainfall:

Arkansas, 17 per cent; Oklahoma, 19 per cent; Tennessee, 20 per cent; Missouri, 22 per cent; Texas, 23 per cent; Illinois, 30 per cent; South Dakota, 30 per cent; Iowa, 32 per cent; Kentucky, 34 per cent; Ohio, 36 per cent; North Dakota, 38 per cent; Nebraska, 41 per cent; Mississippi, 44 per cent; Louisiana, 46 per cent; Kansas, 47 per cent; Indiana, 53 per cent.

The average deficiency from the normal in these sixteen States has been 67 per cent during July.

CRAIL'S RECORD UNIMPRESSIVE

Few of His Vast Number of Bills Enacted

Scant Aid Given Projects of Local Interest

Voted Against President on Pension Measure

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Tabulation of the respective records of members of Congress in the matter of introducing bills, and of a number of introduced measures which failed of enactment, developed the fact here today that Representative Crail of the Tenth California District is the undisputed champion of the first division and at least a near-champion in the second.

Representative Crail introduced 403 bills during the session just closed, a record which is pronounced by veteran attaches of the House as unsurpassed and destined to stand for some time to come. However, in the matter of gaining approval of his multitudinous legislative proposals, Crail's championship is of the cellar variety, as but two of his fifty-nine general bills were carried to final enactment, and but thirty-one of his 343 private bills became law.

Altogether 14,003 bills and resolutions were thrown into the House hopper during the session, the average for each of the 435 members being thirty-two. Crail exceeded his share more than twelve-fold, which is no mean feat in any legislative body.

TWO-TIME CHAMPION

Crail now has been champion bill introducer two Congresses in a row and the way he is going indicates that he will hold on to the belt as long as his constituents keep him in Washington.

To retain the baseball metaphor, the Los Angeles Representative batted .035 per cent on his general bills and slightly under 9 per cent on his private measures.

Of Crail's fifty-nine general bills, twenty-seven were for broadening the laws relating to hospitalization of war veterans, for pensions, for appropriations for soldiers' homes or other purposes connected with veterans. Not one of these twenty-seven measures was reported out by the committee.

Some of Crail's bills had merit and might have been gotten through Congress if their sponsor had made any kind of a fight for them. However, he is not active in the House and has achieved a reputation for introducing bills and then letting them shift for themselves, usually a fatal policy. Other members of the California delegation and even members from other States have frequently been requested by Crail to look after his bills.

ENEMIES MADE

Crail made enemies on the floor during the recent session by opposing a bill by Mrs. Edith Rogers of Massachusetts for the printing of books for the blind and consequently was unable to obtain action on his own bill along the same line.

Mr. Crail has not raised any dust in this Congress working for projects in which Los Angeles and Southern California were interested. For example, during the hearings before the Army Engineering Board on the Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor development, he appeared briefly, stated that he was "in favor of the project," excused himself and left Representative Evans of Glendale to carry the Congressional argument before the board, which Evans did so successfully with the assistance of Senator Shortridge that the engineers recommended the improvement made the way Los Angeles wanted it. There were two hearings and each time Crail attended only for a few minutes.

NOT INTERESTED

Again, expressing himself as "not interested" in the matter, Representative Crail attended none of the hearings in the Camp Kearny-Sunnyvale dirigible base controversy, leaving the burden of making the Southland's fight on Representative Evans and others.

Crail's contributions to the tariff revision were minor in character. Representative Evans again teaming up with Senator Shortridge to get into the bill the higher rates desired by Los Angeles and Southern California.

When the House passed on the initial appropriation for Boulder Dam Crail asked permission to extend his remarks in the record and under this courtesy repeated a performance he had given twice before in his Congressional career of having his remarks inserted in the running debate just as though he had taken part in it, even inserting "applause" where he thought it appropriate. This is not a violation of any formal rule but is regarded as a distinct violation of the ethics of the House, and some years ago a New York member narrowly escaped expulsion when he practiced the deception.

ACTION OVERLOOKED

In the last Congress when Crail had inserted in the debate an undelivered speech on Boulder Dam which should have been printed in the appendix, his action was the subject of discussion at a meeting of the California delegation and there was talk among House leaders of disciplining him. However, the incident blew over and his latest and third offense apparently escaped attention in the confusion attending the last days of the session.

Crail wound up his record for the session just ended by voting to override President Hoover's veto of the veterans' pension bill as first passed and then absenting himself when a vote was taken a little later on the substituted measure which the President approved. He was the only member of the California delegation who failed to support the President on the compromise bill.

GUNMEN COMPLETE TASK OF SLAYING

Jack Zuta

LINGLE "SQUEAL" GANGSTER SLAIN

Chicago Machine Gunners Catch Up with Zuta

Capone Enemy Mowed Down in Resort Dance Hall

Victim's Body Showed Scar of Previous Attack

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Gangland machine gunners finally caught up with Jack Zuta, "master mind" of the Joe Aiello-George (Bugs) Moran gang, last night and filled his body with bullets.

The gunmen stormed a hotel at Delafield, Wis., herded a score of terrified dancers into a corner and in business-like fashion completed a project which missed fire in downtown Chicago a month ago. The killing is viewed as an aftermath of the slaying of Alfred L. (Jake) Lingle, Tribune reporter.

Zuta had on his body evidence of the attempt on his life the night of July 1 as he was being driven north in State street in the automobile of Lieut. George Barker—a flesh wound where a bullet passed across his abdomen.

Zuta was killed by five men believed by witnesses to be Italians. Five men were in the car from which a hail of bullets was sent into Lieut. Barker's car and intended for Zuta.

SWITCHED ALLEGIANCE

Zuta had become an associate in the gambling projects of the Aiello-Moran combination after he severed friendly relations with the Capone gang. His arrest on July 1 was immediately prior to the arrest of Frankie Foster in Los Angeles. Foster, once a Moran-Aiello lieutenant, had transferred his allegiance and his gun prowess to the Capone forces about the time Zuta switched his allegiance the other way.

There was more than a suspicion that Zuta had done some talking in the short time he was in custody on July 1—there was practically an admission. If he had not, the understanding is, there would have been stiff resistance to the petition for a writ of habeas corpus for his release.

BODY RIDDLED

Richard Rutzen, the proprietor of the hotel in which Zuta was killed, was in the combination bar-room and soda fountain with Emil Hoefs, bartender, when five men entered, single file, each carrying a weapon; one a machine gun, the others rifles, shotguns or pistols.

Zuta was on the dance floor, a porch-like affair away from the hotel proper. He was putting nickels in the mechanical piano. As he turned to face the five men a bullet passed through his upper lip, breaking several teeth. He tried to run, but fifteen more bullets were fired into his head and body, the killers continuing to shoot after he was down and dead.

SWING'S IDEA LAUGHED AT BY MEXICANS

Editors Sarcastic Over Proposal for Purchase of Lower California

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Both of Mexico City's leading newspapers, Excelsior and El Universal, publish prominently Congressman Swing's statement to Mexican newspaper men in Los Angeles in which he suggests the feasibility of Mexico acquiring Honduras in return for Lower California, which he says should be sold to the United States, but with biting sarcasm in their headlines indicative of the editors' feelings in the matter.

Excelsior asserts "the American Congressman has lost his reason." "This is a project worthy of an insane person." El Universal exclaims: "The Republic of Honduras and a large sum of money for Baja California? It matters little to Honduras that it is an independent republic. The California Congressman's idea that Mexico can sell a portion of its territory to the United States is absurd."

row. A local aviation mechanic took the ship in hand and began a detailed check for possible flaws.

Mears set a world's record in 1913 by girdling the globe in thirty-five days, twenty-one hours and thirty-six minutes. Again, in 1928, he made a new mark of twenty-three days, fifteen hours, twenty-one minutes and three seconds. On that trip he was accompanied by C. B. D. Collyer. The men used an airplane to cross Europe and Asia but steamers on the oceans.

The next year the Graf Zeppelin still further lowered the mark.

The Mears-Brown flight tomorrow will be the first west-to-east crossing attempted in 1930. Maj. C. S. Wynne-Eyton of England, who was to have made the first try on July 10, last, crashed on July 6 at St. John's during a test flight, and was injured. His plane was demolished and the flight abandoned for this year at least.

Mears said tonight he is confident of success. The plane he is using is a Lockheed Vega cabin monoplane. He hopes to cross the Atlantic in fourteen hours. The plane used up 175 gallons of fuel on the way here and will take on 430 gallons more for the jump across the ocean.

He said if the weather conditions hold good the first peep of dawn will see the City of New York off on its jaunt to Ireland.

Air Corps Quits Being "Circus"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—The Army Air Corps is through participating in municipal airport dedications in cities of less than 50,000. The dedication displays are breaking up military training and tactical development, so Assistant Secretary Davison has ordered they be discontinued.

"We regret taking this step," he said today, "but airport dedications are becoming so numerous that the Army cannot possibly meet the demands for planes and pilots for exhibition flights. If we did not put a brake on this activity, the military usefulness of our pilots would be impaired and the air corps would be transformed into a flying circus."

WOMEN PILOTS SHUN AIR RACES

Group of Notables Objects to Low-Power Planes

Pacific and Dixie Derbies Both to be Ignored

Resentment Felt Because Advice Not Asked

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—A group of women flyers has taken its stand in favor of high-powered planes.

As a result, a number of headliners in last year's women's air derby were described today by Lieut. Carl Harper, a technical adviser for the "99" Club of Women Flyers, as having decided not to compete in the two derbies, inaugurating the Chicago national air races.

Those who have declined to compete, he said, are Elinor Smith, Freeport, N. Y.; Amelia Earhart, New York; Mrs. Mae Haizlip, St. Louis; Mrs. Blanche Noyes, Cleveland, and Ruth Nichols, Rye, N. Y.

POWER LIMITED

They have taken this stand, he explained, because the Dixie Derby starting the 22nd inst. from Washington is limited to 100-horsepower planes and the Pacific Derby starting the 17th inst., from Long Beach, Cal., to 200-horsepower planes.

Mrs. Louise McPhetridge Thaden, Pittsburgh, last year's winner, will not race because of the recent birth of a son. Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell, who placed second, has entered the Pacific Derby, which starts from her home city.

BASIS OF REFUSAL

Last year's derby was the first of its kind and the flyers who say they will not race this year base their refusal upon assurance they say was given them they could help map out the events for the Chicago classic.

Since then, however, the limitations which have been drawn up for the forthcoming derby are such as will bar the high-powered planes owned by many of them and they are described as unwilling or unable to obtain lighter ships.

Of the number listed as refusing, Miss Earhart, noted trans-Atlantic flyer, placed third last year; Miss Nichols was forced out in the last lap, while running third, and all but Miss Smith competed.

ENTIRELY NEW COLLEGE PLANT AWAITS STUDENTS

ROCHESTER (N. Y.) Aug. 2. (AP) An entire new college, costing $10,000,000, will see its first students when the University of Rochester opens its eighty-first year this fall.

Dotted with eighteen new buildings, the men's college will have a campus of eighty-seven acres, probably the first time in American collegiate history an entire college has been built at one time.

Dominating the group is the $1,500,000 library, with an initial capacity of 676,000 volumes, which may be increased to 2,000,000.

The quadrangle about which the major buildings are placed is graded so that floors below the entrance level are flooded by sunlight.

President Rush Rhees, who headed the work, is completing his thirtieth year at the school.

George W. Todd, Rochester manufacturer, led the drive for funds, while George Eastman, millionaire philanthropist, was the largest giver.

MENCKEN TO BE MARRIED NEXT MONTH

Baltimore Editor will Wed Alabama Girl on September 3

MONTGOMERY (Ala.) Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Mrs. John Anton Haardt of this city today announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Sarah Powell Haardt, to H. L. Mencken of Baltimore. The wedding will take place September 3, next.

Mencken will be 50 years of age on September 12. After graduating from the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, he went into newspaper work when he was 19 years of age. He joined the staff of the Baltimore Sun in 1906 and when the Evening Sun was founded in 1910 he associated himself with the late John Haslup Adams, its first editor. It was in the period immediately following that he began his daily column "The Free Lance."

In 1908 he began his work as literary critic of the old Smart Set and began the association with George Jean Nathan, dramatic critic, which culminated in 1924 in the establishment of the American Mercury under joint editorship.

Greenland May Bar Landing of Atlantic Flyers

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 2. (AP)—Rumors were current here today the German trans-Atlantic flyers, Wolfram Hirth and Oscar Weller, who, en route to America, reached Iceland yesterday, will be refused permission by the Greenland administration to land on that territory.

Greenland is the next scheduled stop of the young airmen in their small single-motored monoplane. The Greenland officials are said to consider their attempt "suicidal," in view of their relative inexperience and slender resources.

In case of a refusal, the young Germans intend to fly direct to Labrador.

ATTEMPT AT THEFT COSTS LIFE OF BOY

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 2. (AP)—The attempt to steal an automobile battery for a second-hand machine which he and two youthful companions planned to purchase jointly today cost the life of Fred Mangold, 14 years of age, of Sacramento. The boy died at a hospital here from gunshot wounds in the head inflicted by a shotgun in the hands of Garfield Olsen at the latter's automobile wrecking establishment. Vernon Riggins, 15, and Joe Marquering, 16, both of Sacramento, were held as Mangold's accomplices.

Former Broker Blows Off Head

VICTOR (Colo.) Aug. 2. (AP)—Arthur Carnduff, 67 years of age, former member of the Bonbright & Carnduff brokerage house at Colorado Springs at the time of the gold camp excitement and a widely known mining man, ended his life here today by blowing off his head with a stick of dynamite which he placed under his hat.

Strange Fluid Charges Batteries Instantly

A simple, harmless fluid which automatically recharges automobile, radio and other wet batteries instantly, is being offered on trial to users by Harry Elliott, Suite 51-H, Eighth and Park sts., Des Moines, Iowa. This remarkable fluid also increases the life of batteries and enables them to hold their charge indefinitely. Dead batteries charge themselves as if by magic. Old batteries act like new. No trouble—no battery expense—can be used instantly by anyone. Mr. Elliott wants agents and is making a free offer. Write him today.—[Advertisement.]

FITTS AWARDED IMPORTANT AID

United Veterans Back Him in Preference to Young

Both Personally Appeal to State Covention

Technicalities Powerless to Stave Off Action

OAKLAND, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Byron Fitts of Los Angeles won an indorsement of his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination here today under circumstances expected to weigh heavily in his campaign. The United Veterans of the Republic, in State-wide convention, picked him for their support after he and Gov. Young had pleaded their cause personally on the convention floor within twenty-four hours of each other; despite the fact the organization indorsed the incumbent Governor four years ago, and despite a concerted move on the part of administration adherents to stampede the meeting after failing in an attempt to flood it with Young supporters.

The convention went into session yesterday. It was addressed last night by Fitts. It was addressed this morning by the Governor.

SENTIMENT APPARENT

Despite the freshness of the Governor's presentation it became apparent the majority convention sentiment was for Fitts for indorsement.

Led by Senator Inman of Sacramento, one of Gov. Young's staunch supporters, a move then started to nullify the Fitts sentiment by resorts to technical squabbles over the rules of the convention and the interpretations to be placed on the U.V.R. constitution regarding voting.

Hurry calls were sent out to known Young adherents to get to the meeting. In some instances, use of an airplane was suggested if necessary so absentees could reach the convention floor before the vote was taken. Inman then moved that all present be allowed to vote and balloting began at once.

VOTING RESTRICTED

Among known administration men present were Allen Bixby of the Veterans' Welfare Board, James Collins of the Department of Professional Standards, Earl J. Ensen of the Department of Institutions, Fred Rebergall, superintendent of the State Home for the Blind at Oakland; Larry Gross of the State Narcotic Bureau, Richard Linman, Jr., attorney; Chris Fox, Secretary of the State Crime Commission; Franklin Potter, attorney, and Keith Collins, former secretary to the Governor.

Despite the maneuvering, the voting was restricted to accredited delegates and Fitts won his indorsement by acclamation.

At the time, he was addressing an American Legion frolic at Neptune Beach. He was informed of the action after flying across the bay to San Francisco and immediately wired his gratitude to the convention.

SUPPORTERS OF YOUNG AND ROLPH BOLT MEETING

OAKLAND, Aug. 2. (AP) — Delegates pledged to Gov. Young, followed by those pledged to Mayor Rolph, bolted the convention of the United Veterans of the Republic held here today to indorse gubernatorial candidates.

The Young delegates started their exit after Senator Inman, Sacramento, had charged the convention was "packed" by supporters of Fitts. Thomas McManus, Bakersfield, in charge of registration, said 120 men were registered for Fitts after the 10 a.m. deadline. Before this, it was asserted, there was a majority for Young.

E. Neal Ames, National Commander of the organization, denied any attempt to "pack" the convention had been made.

"The Young proponents," he said, "wished to record the majority of the actual membership on the floor. The constitution provides delegates may vote according to the total amount of their unit."

After the Young and Rolph delegates walked out those remaining indorsed Fitts. The Young supporters, meeting separately in the same hotel, formed a new organization called "the United Veterans' Political League of California" and determined not to indorse any candidate.

Geologist Finds Old Craters in Alaska Active

SEWARD (Alaska) Aug. 2. (AP)—Bringing word that Amiakchak and Veniaminof, two of the least-known craters on the Alaska peninsula, hitherto believed dormant, are active and apparently have recently erupted, Rev. B. R. Hubbard arrived here today after three months' exploration in that isolated region. He is head of the geology department, University of Santa Clara.

He said explosions were indicated rivaling those of the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, which periodically have altered the precipitous contour of the shore line there, and added that volcanoes in the famous valley are dying out. He was accompanied by Roderick Chisholm.

NEW LEADER ELECTED

SAN JOSE, Aug. 2. (AP)—Luther Dubois, Woodland, was named president of the California Agricultural Association, a section of the California Vocation Association, at a meeting here today.

BEAUTY TITLE CONTEST OPENS

Forty Girls Vie for World Honor at Galveston

'Queen of Universe" to be Picked at Event

"Miss United States" will be Chosen Tomorrow

GALVESTON (Tex.) Aug. 2. (AP) The chosen beauties of this country and from foreign nations began matching their charms this afternoon in the international pageant of pulchritude.

Hardly had thirty-six of the forty contestants been introduced at a ballroom luncheon than they were made ready for a decorated float parade on the beach late today. At the luncheon, each received a "diploma" signifying she had been selected to represent her locality in the competition to determine who shall be the 1930 "beauty queen of the universe."

Most of them had short hair and all were dressed either in afternoon or sports costumes. A couple or so were without stockings.

No bathing costumes will be worn until tomorrow's float parade at 4:30 p.m., and the first title winner, "Miss United States," will be selected Monday night. For the universal title, Miss United States will contest with seven foreign entries.

Meanwhile, a mix-up which had caused some trouble, involving the question as to who should be Miss San Antonio, was settled with the official and final announcement that Miss Florida Edwards would be distinguished. She was designated as the official entry of the Mayor of San Antonio, and although Miss Peggy Summers had been reported at headquarters en route in an airplane to deny the designation, she had not appeared.

Byrd Expedition Expert Marries Michigan Girl

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) Aug. 2. (AP) A romance which started on the campus of the University of Michigan six years ago, culminated here tonight in the marriage of Laurence McKinley Gould, geologist of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, and Miss Margaret Rice of Ann Arbor.

The marriage was performed in the garden of the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rice. Only the immediate families of the couple were present. Rev. H. P. Marley of the Unitarian Church of Ann Arbor officiated.

Following the wedding the couple left for a ten-day tour of Canada. They will go later to New York, where Prof. Gould will complete his work on the findings of the Byrd expedition.

ANGELS THUMP ACORNS, 20 TO 7

Seraphs Emerge Victorious in Free-Hitting Tilt

Wrigleyites Swat Visiting Twirlers With Gusto

Numerous Boots by Oakland Fattens Local Score

BY BOB RAY

Before a crowd of 3962 fans, the smallest to see a night game at Wrigley Field, Los Angeles last night handed Oakland a 20 to 7 walloping in a game that was just as interesting as the score would indicate.

The Angels hammered three Oakland hurlers to riwenty hits and sewed up the game in the first two innings, scoring three in the first and seven in the second. The Oaks played terrible ball being guilty of seven errors all of which helped the Seraphs pile their total.

Berly Horne started on the mound for Los Angeles and probably would have suffered a trimming for the big lead handed him. The Oaks touched Horne for seven runs in the seven innings he woked before being lifted for a pinch hitter, Augie Walsh finished for him. Jim Edwards, Herb McQuade and Pearson were the three Oakland hurlers.

Johnny Moore hit a home run with the bases filled in the second inning while Verges homed with one on in the Oaks's seventh. Fred Haney with four hits in five times up and Ray Jacobs with three out of three lead the Angel attack.

Oakland started off with a run in the opening inning when Martin walked, took second on Verges's single to left and after Arlett had popped out counted on Lombardi's base knock to center. The Angels came right back with three in their half of the round, chasing Jim Edwards to the showers while collecting the trio of tallies.

Sigafoos began the round by reaching first on Deviveros's error. After Statz had filed out, Dittmar singled to left. Schulmerich forced Dittmar at second, but Dean let the ball drop out of his hand as he was about to throw to first, and Sigafoos came home on the error. Jacobs, Haney and Moore followed with successive singles to chase Schulmerich and Jacobs over the plate and drive Edwards to the showers. McQuaid disposed of Skiff for the third out.

The Oaks continued to play ragged ball in the second inning and the Angels bunched four potent hits with three Oak errors to drive across seven more runs. They ran up a ten-to-one lead with the rally. Fenton dropped Verges's throw for a two-base error on Horne to start the wild inning and Sigafoos followed with a triple to right, Arlett playing the ball somewhat in the manner of a washwoman. Statz fanned, but Dittmar singled to left, scoring Sigafoos. Schulmerich hit down to Dean, whose throw was missed by Devivero and the runners went to second and third on the error.

MOORE HITS HOMER

A walk to Jacobs filled the bases. Martin then dropped Haney's short fly for another error, Dittmar scoring and the bases remaining loaded. Johnny Moore capped the rally by hitting a home run into the middle of the bleachers and trotted over the plate behind Schulmerich, Jacobs and Haney to make it seven runs for the inning.

Doubles by Martin and Verges with a pair of infield outs gave the Oaks two runs in the third.

Statz opened the Angels' third with a single, stole second, went to third on Dittmar's out and brought the Los Angeles' run total to 11 by counting on Schulmerich's sacrifice fly to Martin. The Oaks pecked Horne for another run in the fourth. A double by Devivero and Uhalt's single registered the counter.

Oakland scored again in the fifth when Griffin who had replaced Arlett in right field doubled and counted on Lombardi's single. The Angels came right back with three in their half, singles by Statz, Schulmerich, Jacobs and Haney with an error by Griffin bringing the local club's total to fourteen.

McQUADE LIFTED

McQuade was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth, Pearson taking the mound for Oakland.

Johnny Verges hit a home run over the left field fence with one on in the seventh to give the Oaks two runs and make the score 14 to 7.

The Angels nicked Pearson for three runs in the seventh. Four hits including Ray Jacobs' triple off the top of the center field fence and an error by Dean brought over the runs. Parker batted for Horne and singled in this inning. Augie Walsh was the Angel hurler when the Oaks came up in the eighth.

The Angels scored their final three runs in the eighth with aid of only one hit. A double by Dittmar, two walks, a couple of wild pitches and an infield out doing the damage.

Indians Down Missions Again

SEATTLE (Wash.) Aug. 2. (AP)—The Seattle Indians continued their slaughter of the Missions tonight, letting them down to a 5-to-0 shutout. It was the fourth consecutive win for the Tribe, and gave them all but the opening game of the series. The Indians scored three runs in the third inning and two in the seventh. Zahniser kept the Missions' seven hits well scattered. Knott was replaced by Darrough in the eighth.

Sharp Victor in Auto Race

Jimmy Sharp continued his winning ways last night out at the Legion Ascot Speedway by winning all three of the races in which he was entered. Sharp has not lost a main event since night racing was first introduced here three weeks ago. Francis Quinn finished a close second to the young San Pedro dare-devil in every race and was followed by Mel McKee, who took a third in each of the three events.

In the main event Sharp set a new track record of 18m. 15 2-5s. for the forty laps. Quinn led the field for thirteen laps in this race but relinquished the lead when he was outmaneuvered on the north curve by Sharp. Jimmy's other two triumphs were registered in the Helmet Dash and the first ten-lap race. Sharp scored a clean-cut win in the Helmet Dash, and then staged a Garrison finish to pass Quinn on the seventh lap of the ten-lap affair to barely nose him out at the finish.

One of the largest crowds of the year was on hand when the first race got under way.

Dewey Skipworth and Fred Cooper collided on the south turn to furnish the big thrill of the evening. Neither of the drivers were hurt.

40-lap main event—Won by Sharp; Quinn, second; McKee, third. Time, 18m. 15 2-5s. (New track record.)
Italian Helmet Dash—Won by Sharp; Quinn, second; McKee, third. Time, 37 4/5-100s.

10-lap race—Won by Reisler; Hinckley, second; Skipworth, third. Time, 5m. 14s.
10-lap race—Won by Jacques; Cooper, second; Mansell, third. Time, 5m. 18s.

SOVIET WOMAN POLE EXPLORER

Feminine Scientist Member of Red Expedition

Fifty Men Her Associates for Long Winter

Lone Tent in Snows Haunted by Beasts of Region

FRIDTJOF NANSEN LAND (Formerly Franz Joseph Land, U.S.S.R.) Aug. 2. (AP)—In a tiny tent on the northernmost fringe of this remote and desolate Arctic island, which may almost be called the roof of the world, today sat the world's first woman Arctic explorer.

She is Miss Nina Petrovna Demney of Leningrad and she is just 28 years of age. She is a member of the soviet Arctic expedition that arrived here today from Archangel aboard the soviet icebreaker Sedov.

STUFF OF HEROINES

Miss Demney, ignoring warnings that no woman could survive the rigors and privations of life in the frozen Arctic, insisted upon braving the perils of the polar regions with the veteran male explorers who compose the present expedition, led by the well-known professor, Otto Schmidt.

While this dispatch announcing their arrival was being transmitted by wireless from the icebreaker across the icy wastes of the polar ocean to Archangel, Miss Demney, who is second in command of the expedition, was giving orders to the men of a party that is to restore the hut on Cape Flor left thirty-three years ago by Frederick G. Jackson, first English explorer to chart the former Franz Joseph Land.

HER OWN FAIR HANDS

Miss Demney will place near the Jackson hut, as a memorial of the present expedition's visit, a red flag of the soviets which she made with her own hands.

Muffled up to her ears in thick furs, this intrepid woman, who is the first of her sex ever to put foot on the top of the world, looked every inch an explorer. She is sturdy, strong and self-confident and apparently fears nothing. She is a graduate of the Leningrad Geographical and Topographical Institute, and by the brilliance of her studies thoroughly earned the right to accompany the expedition as second in command.

NATURAL HABITAT

Among the fifty men comprising the crew of the Sedov and the expedition she is the only woman but she finds it natural that women should undertake the heavy labor and exertion of exploring.

"Why shouldn't women emulate the example of Amundsen, Nansen, Scott, Byrd and other Arctic explorers?" she asked.

"Women owe as much to polar research work as men and are just as well equipped mentally and physically to undertake it."

WILD ASSOCIATES

Not far from Miss Demney's tent polar bears, seals and penguins roam around the Sedov in search of food. Miss Demney will remain here with her male colleagues throughout the autumn and winter mapping, exploring and studying the huge archipelago of Fridtjof Nansen Land, lying within the shadow of the North Pole.

Miss Demney is an active member of the Communist party and secretary of the northernmost Communist nucleus in the world, which was recently established here.

NOTED TURFMAN DIES WHILE SURF BATHING

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) Aug. 2. (AP)—Samuel Ross, 70 years of age, prominent hardware merchant of the film of Barber & Ross of Washington, D. C., and noted race-horse owner, was fatally stricken with a heart attack while in the surf off Fredericksburg avenue, Ventor, today.

He was taken from the water by lifeguards and was pronounced dead a half-hour later. W. H. Lippscon, 45, Ross's son-in-law, was rescued from the water and revived. The two had gone in swimming shortly after breakfast. They got into difficulty and were being carried out by the current when the lifeguards went to their aid.

PRESIDENCY SOUGHT BY MINISTER BRIAND

PARIS, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Foreign Minister Briand has announced that he will be a candidate for the Presidency next year when President Doumergue's term expires. The veteran Foreign Minister long ago announced his intention to retire from the Quai d'Orsay and quit active politics next year. Next month's debate in Geneva at the League of Nations over the federation of Europe is expected to mark M. Briand's final appearance in international politics, and if it is successful the popular acclamation of France is expected to send him to Elysees Palace.

INQUIRY ORDERED IN DEATH OF CYCLISTS

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2. (AP)—Authorities of Vera Cruz today ordered an investigation into the death of three young bicyclists struck by a train from Mexico City. Officials say the youths were slain and robbed by bandits who placed their bodies on the track.

SOVIET PARLEY MOVE ADVISED

United States Urged to Find Recognition Basis

New York Lawyer Addresses Politics Institute

Another Morrow Proposed to Heal Red Breach

WILLIAMSTOWN (Mass.) Aug. 2. (AP)—Recommendations the United States work out a basis for negotiations through which the soviet government can be recognized by the United States government and that "a new Dwight Morrow" be given a chance to see what he can do in Russia were made today by Paul D. Cravath, New York lawyer.

Speaking before the Russian conference of the Institute of Politics, which crowded the hall to capacity, Mr. Cravath said:

"I think we should take advantage of the first opportunity offered to sit around a table and discuss this primary problem—is there a basis on which the United States can recognize the soviet government? I would not seek the opportunity—but the offer might come.

SOVIET ENTRENCHED

"We all agree the soviet government is firmly intrenched in Russia and will be there for years to come. I think we will agree it is willing and able to perform its national obligations. It has done so."

Drawing a parallel between the facts the United States did not at first recognize the Mexican government and it has not accorded recognition to the soviet regime, Mr. Cravath said: "It might be well that another Dwight Morrow be appointed ambassador to the soviet. With the soviet officials he might work out problems to a satisfactory conclusion. So I say when the time comes, let us give a new Dwight Morrow a chance to see what he can do."

CHINA SEIZED

George E. Sokolsky, editor of the Far Eastern Review and an American citizen of Russian extraction, told the conference Communists have taken possession of China on behalf of soviet Russia.

"For six years soviet Russia has used China as the springboard of the world revolution," he declared. "If soviet Russia persists in the role, there can be no hope for peace in China."

He quoted from a Bolshevik paper reporting on the "favorable" situation in China and tending to show leaders of workers and peasants are working under the direction of the Communist party and that "this army is invincible."

FAIR AT ODDS

The question of employment of convict labor by the soviet union in the production of export material brought brisk disagreement between Peter A. Bogdanov, chairman of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, and Paul Scheffer, Washington representative of the Berliner-Tageblatt.

Mr. Bogdanov attacked a statement by Mr. Scheffer to the effect that thousands of convicts on Soloveski Island and the contiguous archipelago were forced to cut trees at the point of revolvers "which can shoot."

He declared there are no forests on Soloveski Island and cited the recent decision of the Russian state treasury to lift the embargo on several cargoes of Russian pulpwood as proof the United States government is satisfied convict labor was not utilized in their production.

FRANKNESS ADVISED

Admiral Sir Herbert Richmond, K.C.B., former president of the Royal Naval War College, addressing the conference tonight on "Principles of Naval Disarmament," advocated that every nation make a plain declaration of policy as to the size of navy needed for its security.

"It is the most complete fallacy to imagine that what are called 'battles' can only be fought by ships of vast size," he said. "No more decisive battle can be fought by fleets of 50,000-ton ships than by fleets of 1000-ton ships."

BERLIN WILL HOLD GREAT RADIO SHOW

BERLIN, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—The ten days from the 22nd to 31st inst. have been chosen for this year's great radio show on the exposition grounds in the western part of Berlin. It will be held this year for the first time in connection with the talking-machine industry. The exhibits will cover the whole field of radio and phonographic accomplishments, including the manufacture of records. There will also be a department devoted to the history and development of both radio and phonograph.

STANDARD OIL WILL ENTER TIRE BUSINESS

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and affiliated companies, serving a vast territory in the United States and the whole of Canada, will enter the automobile tire business two weeks hence, it was disclosed today by F. H. Bedford, Jr., a director of the company. The tires will be handled through the thousands of filling stations maintained by the companies interested.

PANAMA-PACIFIC PLANS TO STAND

Program for New Liners to be Carried Through

Coast Agent of Holding Unit Makes Announcement

Asserts Sale of Fleet will Not Halt Expansion

BY WALDO DRAKE

Three new $7,000,000 turbo-electric liners will be built for Panama-Pacific Line's intercoastal express service next year regardless of the reported sale of the International Mercantile Marine Company to the Astor interests, it was announced yesterday by Leo E. Archer, Pacific Coast manager for I.M.M. Mr. Archer returned home from New York yesterday morning aboard the Panama-Pacific liner California after conferences with P. A. S. Franklin, I.M.M. president, relative to construction of Panama-Pacific Line's fourth, fifth and sixth California-New York speedsters.

LEO E. ARCHER

"Continued success of the three liners, California, Virginia and Pennsylvania, has instilled such confidence in I.M.M. executives that I am confident plans for construction of three more sister ships, giving weekly sailings, will soon be announced publicly," said Mr. Archer. "They will be sisters of the Pennsylvania, 613 feet long."

New York advices yesterday reported that the Roosevelt Steamship Company, headed by Kermit Roosevelt, Vincent Astor and John M. Franklin, son of P. A. S. Franklin, have acquired control of all International Mercantile Marine Company ships and properties from the Morgan interests and that in the resultant reorganization the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads will figure prominently. New policy, it is reported, will be to dispose of all foreign-flag tonnage in the I.M.M. fleet, developing it as a distinctly American-flag enterprise.

Mr. Archer said that this has long been the plan of Mr. Franklin and that with this in view he has already placed all foreign-flag units of the I.M.M. fleet under control of Frederick Leyland & Co., Ltd.; these including the ships of the Red Star, Atlantic Transport and Leyland lines, all in trans-Atlantic trade. Mr. Franklin will remain as president of I.M.M. under new ownership.

NEW MASTER ON LINER CALIFORNIA

Capt. Robert J. Sullivan, chief officer, came in as master of the Panama Pacific liner California from New York yesterday, relieving Capt. J. V. Richardson, vacationing in New Jersey. Sullivan, at the age of 36 years, is one of the youngest liner masters in the merchant marine. He hails from Searsport, Me., a seaport which has given more mariners to the sea than any other five cities in America, and has held his master's papers since 1919.

CAPT ROBERT J. SULLIVAN

The liner brought 537 passengers and 6000 tons of freight, including many miniature golf courses, 277 autos and 168 tons of Panama bananas. Travelers included Joseph E. Hopper, minute clerk for the Los Angeles City Council; Rev. John Burke, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference of Washington, D. C.; Frank G. Williams, Perndale banker returning from a trip around the world, and P. A. Dempsey, coach of winning American Olympic crews a decade ago.

Forty bales of Japanese silk arrived on the Norwegian motorship Corneville of the Klaveness Line yesterday, and were dispatched from the Lasco dock to New York by a special car over Union Pacific and Pennsylvania Railroad lines. Ships at that line have brought earlier shipments this year, and expectations are the movement will increase in volume. Mitsui & Co. also has sent silk shipments through Los Angeles and last week the Osaka Shosen Kaisha motorship Kinai Maru brought the first of what promises to be regular consignments.

The Corneville brought 1500 tons of general cargo from across the Pacific, including a dozen huge pythons, nine of which were discharged here for exhibit at Venice.

A 135-foot bunkering barge was launched at the yards of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation at 3:30 p.m., yesterday, Miss Elcy Florian, daughter of Richard Florian, president of Western Oil and Refining Company, breaking a beribboned bottle over the craft. The company, which will own the barge, was represented also by A. W. Taylor, vice-president in charge of production; A. A. G. Scherbel, secretary; L. J. Hart, assistant to the secretary. Shipyard officials attending were A. C. Stelle, secretary-treasurer and Herman Haubold, superintendent.

Commercial ships entering Los Angeles during the week ended last night numbered 174, a gain of one over the previous week, according to the Marine Exchange. Of them passenger carriers totaled seventy-two, cargo ships fifty-nine, tankers thirty-four and lumber carriers nine. Lumber receipts fell from 18,398,000 to 15,913,000 board feet, while oil shipments dropped from 2,811,203 to 2,824,868 barrels.

The Dollar liner President Adams is due from New York this forenoon on her twenty-second voyage in the globe-girdling service. She will disembark twenty-five of her seventy-five passengers, discharge 1500 tons of freight and sail westward tomorrow noon.

News of Ships and Sailings at Pacific Ports

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2. (AP)—Anticipating a heavy movement of California fruits to eastern markets, Europe and United Kingdom, several lines in the trade have announced the addition of extra tonnage.

The Italian flag Libera Line, operating from the Pacific Coast to Mediterranean ports, is placing the steamer Livenza, as extra vessel, on berth during October.

The joint service of the Hamburg-American Line and North German Lloyd announced the sailing of four extra steamers on both lines, they are the Jupiter, Bismarck and Wilhelm, and will provide space for 2000 boxes of fruit.

Lieutenant-Commander R. W. Bates, U.S.N., sailed from here today on the liner Malolo for Honolulu, where he is to take charge of the hydrographic office for the next two years.

Bates has been chief engineer of the U. S. cruiser Richmond for the past two years. He is well known in west coast shipping and naval circles.

SEATTLE, Aug. 2.—Millions of dollars worth of products of Alaska and Siberia and more than 1400 passengers arrived here today and tonight by four ships, the most interesting of which was the Nanuk, the motorship Nanuk, base of the long search for American, Canadian and Russian fliers missing since the flight of famous aviator Capt. Ben Nielson and Earl Borland, killed in Siberia.

The Nanuk brought $1,000,000 worth of fury from North Cape, Siberia. Nielson and Borland died in an attempt to take to the ship when it was ice locked there to take the furs to Alaska for transhipment.

From the deck of the new Alaskan liner Aleutian, sailing here today from Yonne, who piloted the plane carrying the bodies of Nielson and Borland about 1000 miles to Fairbanks, Alaska, for a crew at the little ice-covered craft which was his home for a month at North Cape.

PORTLAND, Aug. 2.—The new lighthip Fire Island, recently built here, will leave Tuesday morning at 7 for her station at the entrance to the Columbia River, at the Tongue Point buoy station near the mouth of the Columbia River.

The ship will be in command of Capt. Jacob Nelsen, master of the Columbia River lightship, who will relieve the crew of the district after delivering the Fire Island on the east coast.

The Fire Island will call at San Francisco and San Diego.

TACOMA, Aug. 2.—A heavy shipment of Tacoma-made doors was loaded today aboard the Isthmian liner Steel Inventor, which called for the Orient. The vessel took 20,000 besides general freight.

BROADCAST PREFERENCES GIVE BAFFLING PROBLEM

Satisfying Diversified Tastes Task That Taxes Radio's Best Minds; Humane Appeal Always Sure

BY JOHN S. DAGGETT

Diversified tastes in the matter of radio programs constitute a kaleidoscopic problem discounting any cross-word puzzle that ever was invented.

If you doubt this statement, take the radio dial any day and mark what you think is the feature program of offerings hour by hour. Have your neighbor do likewise, and then compare the selections.

Many factors enter into an attempted solution of this puzzle. While many people believe that the radio is tuned in solely for purposes of entertainment, it is my opinion that the human side of life carries the greatest appeal and will hold the largest and most consistent audience. A recent illustration of this was found in news items read relative to the three thoroughbred dogs and two pedigreed cats whose deaths were stipulated by the will of their owner. Responses by telephone, letter and personal contact made it very clear that the humanitarian phase of the case had struck deeply into the hearts of listeners-in. In other words, the news items relative to this case meant more to them and awakened a more profound interest than jazz tunes or other forms of entertainment.

HUNGER OF THOUSANDS

There are thousands of radio-set owners who are hungry for something. In many cases they do not know exactly what that something is, but I would judge that it is the desire for human appeal; that which will inspire, sustain confidence, alleviate worry and pain, and bring sunshine out of a dark sky. Confidently, more people are interested in what radio can do for them toward health and happiness than they are in its entertainment possibilities. At present, entertainment predominates, for the reason that programs bearing on the vital phases of life are generally relegated to the morning and afternoon hours, when the audience consists primarily of women and is far smaller than during the evening hours. The latter are monopolized by entertainment. Reversing the situation, designating the deeper influences for the night periods, would be a drastic move, but ultimately it would place radio on a higher standard.

MASTER-CONTROL IDEA

One broadcast station cannot possibly cater to all phases of public interest. It is to be hoped that the day will come when a master control in radio will designate services to be performed by the 600 broadcast stations in this country. Is it not ridiculous to have seven broadcast stations in a city, all broadcasting dance music at the same time?

Why should it be necessary to have five stations broadcast a football game in our local Coliseum? Clearly it is a waste of time, money and energy. It will so continue, however, until broadcasters get together and systematize the wasteful methods that exist at present. The idea was attempted several years ago by what then was known as the Broadcasters' Association of Southern California, but rivalry and petty jealousies nullified the endeavor.

DIRECTOR NEEDED

A great university assigns its professors to given periods of discussion. One never finds five professors all talking on the same subject at one time. In the same way, the national university of radio, destined some day to become an international university, needs a director. On such a basis it would be quite possible to cover innumerable phases of life and its problems.

Except in very rare cases, religion has been relegated to Sunday. Why? There are thousands who are hungry for the religious touch daily on the air.

Listeners-in who want to hear the blow-by-blow account of a prize-fight can and should be appeased, but it is a fact that there are as many other groups who are searching the dial for literature, classical music, inspirational poetry and drama, popular music and ballads, health hints, dietetics and home service suggestions, business conditions by stock and trade market reports and many other phases of life too numerous to mention. There is but small place in this curriculum of the air for politics, mud-slinging or controversial topics.

Is the problem too complex for solution? Not if the public will exercise the same determined daily interest that it should in the schooling and bringing up of its children to the highest type of American citizenship. Their demands will be met by the broadcasters of the future.

ON THE SABBATH DIAL

KHJ at 8:30 this morning brings from far-away London a talk by Lord Robert Cecil on the naval treaty. Inasmuch as the treaty has passed both houses in England and awaits the royal signature, it is apt news and should have your dial. Lovers of sacred music will find CBS Cathedral Hour at 12:30 noon will please them. A program featuring the religious music of Mozart by the Columbia Symphony Orchestra, the Cathedral Choir and soloists will sustain the half-hour. In vivid contrast come The Gauchos at 1 p.m. with thirty minutes of Argentine and Spanish music, while the softer classics and semiclassic compositions will be heard at 1:30 when Hulda Dietz, as gtest artist, is featured in an instrumental ensemble. At 4 p.m. Jesse Crawford comes from the East in a delightful half-hour of organ repertoire. For variety, dial Prof. Lindsley in a dramatic reading at 6:30 tonight. Wesley Tourtellotte will play the incidental organ music for this reading.

KFI at 9:30 this morning offers Everton Stidham, baritone, a male quartet and Pryor Moore's orchestra in classic and semiclassic music and song. At 5:15 tonight Atwater Kent Hour sends another encore program —this time of Gilbert and Sullivan productions. Featured will be the singing of Wilfred Glenn, basso of the Revellers Quartet. Among his numbers will be the famous Major-General's Song" from the "Pirates of Penzance." If you want to try a playlet, dial the Sarah Padden Players at 8:15 tonight.

KECA points to 7:45 p.m. when the KECA string ensemble, with Lenore Killian, contralto soloist, should please you.

HILL BILLY LEAVING

KNX takes you to Westlake Park at 2 p.m. for two hours of the Sunday concert. At 7 tonight Horse Fly and His Wranglers bid for your dial with songs of the cattle country, while 9 o'clock finds Calmon Lubovisky in violin recital. Lubovisky will play the famous "Devil's Trill" by Tartini. Compositions by local composers will also be featured on this hour.

KFWB romps in with the double-header ball game at 1:30 this afternoon. At 8 p.m. introduces a new series of musical continuities—"Hearts Around the World" with musical interludes by the Salon Orchestra.

KMPC tells us that Hubert Wal-ton, songster with the Beverly Hill Billies leaves for Arkansas today. Hubert takes off at 3 p.m. from the United Airport. At the field today Hubert and the Hill Billies will stage an hour and a half show with Hubert singing "Methodist Pie" and other mountain ballads. The public is invited. The show will start at 1:30 — and it's all free.

Bill Sharpie's gang are tendering him a birthday party at the studios of KTM from 7 to 9 Sunday morning. It should be extra good—and Bill says he has one of Al Jolson's leading women, a real singer, and Pierre White, the Singing Rogue, formerly of Roxie's Gang. Happy Birthday, Bill.

KTM wants to hold your dial from 3:30 to 4 this afternoon with a sacred concert featuring Esther Fricke, organist, and Stewart Bair, baritone. The Santa Monica band at 8 this evening will feature P. M. Leibson, operatic tenor.

KMTR finds "Vibrant Melodies" at 9:30 p.m. a program of unannounced old melodies. There will be vocal interludes and a vibra harp solo. At 10 p.m. they open an old trunk and drag out the old but sweet songs of long, long ago.

PASSION PLAY POPULAR

OBERAMMERGAU (Germany) Aug. 2. (AP)—Passion Play attendance is exceeding all estimates with 101,000 recorded up to June 20 and the heaviest two-thirds of the season to come. A total of 300,000 has been expected.

WHIPPING POST ADVOCATED

Texan Urges Lash for Men Who Treat Wives Brutally

WACO (Tex.) Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Revival of the old whipping post method for dealing with husbands who beat or unmercifully use their wives is advocated by O. O. Larnce, humane society superintendent here. Larnce says he has come in contact with some cases in the past few months where nothing but a good back lashing would meet the situation properly. Fines fall on the wrong persons, he argues.

KENTUCKY VOTE APATHETIC ONE

Only Six of Districts Take Part in Primary

Congress Contests Center on Local Issues

Ballots Put Away and will be Counted Tomorrow

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) Aug. 2. (AP)—Voting today in Kentucky's primary election in which only six of the State's eleven districts participated was unusually light, less than half of the registered voters in the six districts going to the polls to express their preferences for the various Congressional candidates.

The new election law functioned smoothly, and no disorders were reported. The new law provides the ballots not be counted until the next week day after the election.

Tonight the ballot boxes were locked and taken to the county Courthouse, where they will be guarded until Monday, when county election boards will begin tabulating the votes. The law prohibits a precinct election officer from touching a ballot after it is marked, the voter placing it in the box himself.

Mrs. Marie Haller, opposing Representative Newhall in the Sixth District, is an avowed wet. Kentucky's other two women candidates for Congress, both Republicans, campaigned as drys. They are Congresswoman Katherine Langley, Tenth District, and Mrs. Minerva Allen, opposing Representative Blackburn in the Seventh District.

Judge William Lewis and Representative Finley were the leading candidates in the Eleventh District Republican primary, and William J. Fields, former Governor and former Representative, and Fred M. Vinson, Representative ousted in the Hoover landslide, were the principal Democratic candidates in the Ninth District.

Senator Robsion, Republican candidate for both short and long terms to succeed himself, was unopposed in the primary.

DOUBLE-HEADED TROUT LIVES

Freak Sets New Record For Longevity at Shasta Hatchery

MT. SHASTA, Aug. 2. (AP)—A two-headed Lochleven trout at the Shasta fish hatchery is now 16 months of age. Capt. H. G. Lambson, hatchery superintendent, said it was the first time on record a trout freak of this kind had lived more than forty-five days.

Estranged Husband in First Case Given Grilling

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2. (AP)—One of two women whose bullet-riddled bodies were found in separate localities in this part of the State within the past twenty-four hours, today was identified as Mrs. Christina Lorenzo Colletti, 18 years of age, Cleveland bride of a month. Her body was found beside a lonely road near Berea, Cleveland suburb.

The body of the other woman, found yesterday in an oats field near Wadsworth, was identified late today by her mother as Agrappina (Dolly) Kosicski, whose 2-year-old child was found abandoned in Wadsworth a few hours before her body was found.

Shortly after Mrs. Colletti was identified by a sister, police took Tony Colletti, 21, her estranged husband, to headquarters for questioning. They found a .38 and a .32-caliber revolver in his home.

G.O.P. GAINS IN ORANGE COUNTY

Republicans Lead Democrats Nearly Four to One

Total Registration Increase About 3000 Since 1928

Mark of 49,937 Indicates 7500 Population Gain

SANTA ANA, Aug. 2.—An increase of more than 3000 voters in two years, indicating a population gain of about 7500 for that period, was shown for Orange county today in registration totals for the August primary election, which reached 49,937. The increase over the registration for the 1928 primary was 3043, the 1928 figure being 45,894. Totals were announced by County Clerk J. M. Backs, who prepared them for a statement forwarded today to Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan.

Today's statement shows an increase of 10,038 since the last registration report, filed in June. This was 38,899.

By reaching nearly 50,000 the primary registration this year is but 2160 short of the full registration for 1928, compiled for the November election of that year, when a mark of 51,097 was set. Backs expects the 1928 total to be exceeded by several thousand before the November election this year.

The gain in registration this year was largely recruited to the Republican ranks, which now constitute approximately three-fourths of the total registration instead of the customary two-thirds. Defections from the Democratic and Prohibition ranks to those of the G.O.P. have been noted by registration officials for several weeks as voters flocked to join the hectic gubernatorial campaign being staged by the Republicans.

Instead of holding a lead of slightly more than three to one over the Democrats, as before, Orange county Republicans now have a lead of nearly three and one-half to one. The totals are: Republican, 36,285; Democrat, 10,410; Socialist, 187; Prohibition, 489; decline to state, 1566.

YUCAIPA HAS MANY REGISTERED FOR PRIMARY

YUCAIPA, Aug. 2.—Yucaipa has 799 registered voters and every one is warmed up over the election. Of course, the people in the valley are going to help nominate a Governor on the 26th inst. but there is about ten times as much interest in the local race for justice of the peace and constable as there is in who is going to preside at Sacramento the next four years.

Locally, Constable A. B. Ward, who is a candidate for re-election, has three rivals for the office in Wright W. Edwards, C. C. Davies and C. F. Glasgow. And L. G. Cobb is candidate for justice of the peace against Judge H. E. Richardson, who is seeking re-election. The race is a friendly one, but none the less active on that account, and all the candidates are seeking support of their friends.

South Market Now Opened to Motor Traffic

INGLEWOOD, Aug. 2. — The west side of South Market street, between Arbor Vitae and Kelso streets, was opened to traffic this morning, it was announced by City Engineer Willis S. Peffer, who has had the work in charge.

The east side of the street, as recently improved, was opened June 15, last, so that traffic down this main boulevard through the city is now provided with adequate driving room, as the highway is completed 117 feet wide, including the right of way of the Los Angeles Railway.

This right of way has been leveled with the street and poles removed. Ornamental lights have been installed along the highway. The work was done by George H. Oswald of Los Angeles, who was awarded the contract on a bid of $71,393.74.

WOMAN VICTIM OF AUTO CRASH BETTER

ONTARIO, Aug. 2.—Severely injured in an automobile crash at G street and Sultana avenue, Miss Thelma Culver was reported practically out of danger today at her home 2219 North Palm avenue. Miss Culver was a passenger in an automobile of which William L. Van Horn, 139 East Ninth street, Upland, was driver. It was struck broadside by another car driven by Charles E. Anderson of Upland. Miss Culver's right knee was deeply cut and her chest was severely injured.

PREACHER FOUND GUILTY

Jury Holds Joe A. Smith Had Violated State Corporate Securities Act on Eleven Counts

RIVERSIDE, Aug. 2.—Fifteen minutes after they had left the courtroom for deliberation, a jury today returned a verdict holding Joe A. Smith, Four Square Gospel preacher, and song leader, guilty of eleven separate violations of the California Corporation Act in connection with the sales to church people of stock in a mining venture in Los Angeles.

He was specifically charged with failing to obtain a permit for the sale of the stock. Within the shadow of San Quentin penitentiary, Smith was led back to the County Jail by deputy sheriffs while his attorneys mapped a plan for his release.

Notice of the first skirmish was given by Attorney Josiah Coombs when he had the 11th inst. set as the date for a hearing on a motion he will file for a new trial. Coombs also casually mentioned an appeal, this coming after a motion for a new trial in regular order of things. Superior Judge Morton, in whose court the case had been on trial for three days, announced sentence will be pronounced the 11th inst.

The sad-faced defendant showed no reaction in the slightest when the court clerk read the word guilty on the verdict form.

Shortly after court had adjourned county authorities made public a letter from the Holiness Church Association of California seeking information regarding Smith, and explaining that his wife and children are virtually destitute in Chicago.

Play Dates Announced by McGroarty

TUJUNGA, Aug. 2.—The management of the John Steven McGroarty Summer Festival of Plays announced today the agreed-upon schedule of performances as follows:

"El Dorado"—Opens Saturday night, the 9th inst., followed next day by a Sunday matinee. Performances every evening during the week with matinees Saturday, the 16th inst. and Sunday, the 17th inst.

"La Golondrina" — Opens Monday night, the 18th inst., with an evening performance and followed by performances each evening except Sunday evening and matinees on Saturday, the 23rd inst. and Sunday, the 24th inst.

"Osceola" — Opens Monday night, the 25th inst., performances every evening during the week except Sunday evening, and matinees Saturday, the 30th inst. and Sunday, the 31st inst.

"Babylon" — Opens Monday evening September 1, followed by performances every evening during the week except Sunday evening, and matinees Saturday, September 6 and Sunday, September 7.

All arrangements for special party transportation for those not desiring to use their own cars can be made through any of the offices of the Motor Transit Stages.

Reservations for seats can be made at the Pacific Electric Subway Terminal station, 423 South Hill street, telephone MUtual 2029.

Santa Barbara Registrations Show Increase

SANTA BARBARA, Aug. 2.—County Clerk D. F. Hunt today announced that 21,675 persons in Santa Barbara county have registered for the August primary elections, an increase of 2201 over the number registered in the primaries in 1928. The cities' registration is 12,815, an increase of 2092 over that of August, 1928.

A total of 15,528 Republicans registered, showing an increase of 1975. Democrats gained thirty-one since 1928, the new total being 4441. Other party affiliations for the 1930 and 1928 primaries following Socialist, 1928, 65, and 1930, 80; prohibition, 123 and 104; and declined to state, 1322 and 1521. Prohibitionists were the only affiliation showing a decrease. Elections in 1928 were for the choice of President with a consequent increase in normal registration, but this year's registration indicates an even greater registration than that of the Presidential year.

Kadner Head of Valley Grocers

INGLEWOOD, Aug. 2.—The Centinela Valley Grocers' Association, in meeting here Tuesday evening at Sciots' Hall, elected A. E. Kadner of this city president of that body, which was recently organized for the mutual benefit of all grocers in the valley.

Kadner is a vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce here. A dinner and entertainment is planned for the evening of Wednesday, the 13th inst.

TWO SETS OF TWINS BEGIN TREE SITTING

RIVERSIDE, Aug. 2.—Two sets of twins, 9 and 6 years of age, for two days have been perched in a big pepper tree on North Orange street, attempting to smash existing tree-sitting records. The youngsters, Edward and Alice, 9, and Dorothy and Ray, 6, are the children of Mr. and Mrs. George Russell of North Orange street. The family also boasts another pair of twins in Agnes and Gladys, 18. In addition there are four other children. Mrs. Russell is in charge of the tree-sitting attempt and is entering upon her duties with apparent gusto and earnestness. A casualty marred today's peaceful calm when Richard Trujillo, 8 years of age, a neighbor's boy, who had come to gaze upon the tree-sitters, fell from a hammock on which he was reclining and broke his left arm. The tree-sitters were greatly excited by the unfortunate event but remained at their posts.

BURGLARY SUSPECTS HELD

Three Men Under Arrest in Glendale Believed to be Implicated in Series of Thefts There

GLENDALE, Aug. 2.—Arrest of three men on suspicion of burglary and their subsequent asserted confessions to detectives, are said to have cleared up the mystery of a number of thefts that have been under investigation here recently. The three suspects, Robert and James Colson, brothers, and Byron D. Gilmore, all of 708 East Lomita avenue, are said to have admitted robbing the Kopper Kettle Tea Room on North Brand Boulevard, and the Goodyear Inn on Glendale avenue and Chevy Chase Drive.

They deny that they were implicated in any other robberies, but Detective Lieutenant Charles P. Blake is working on the theory that they may be able to furnish information that will lead to the solution of several other burglaries.

Robert Colson is said to have offered a friend $10 for the loan of a revolver, which, he said, he planned to rent for $20 to some other man who was planning "to pull a job."

On learning of the arrest of the Colsons and Gilmore, the owner of the gun informed the detective bureau of the incident. Although the three arrests are believed to have checked the epidemic of robberies, enlargd police patrols are questioning vagrants and others who are unable to give a clear account of their actions.

Angler Wins in Battling Two Fish on One Line

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Aug. 2.—After waging a battle for twenty-five minutes with two yellowtail on one line, one weighing twenty-four pounds and the other sixteen, Sam Clapp, realty broker of this city, landed his prizes on Billy's barge. He cast his line again and some monster snapped it in two.

Clapp, accompanied by C. C. Wilson, Charles Gores and H. M. Bradley, all of this city, left for the barge on the 5 p.m. boat. The fishing was good until 11 p.m. They caught 150 pounds of barracuda, returning at 7 a.m. the next day. Lawrence Watson, hook-up boy on the boat, caught 100 pounds of barracuda before breakfast and came in on the same boat. Lester Martin, 16 years of age, of Fresno, and Charles Pahland, 18, of Whittier, visitors at the beach, caught seventy-five pounds of bonita, barracuda, calico bass and perch after three hours' fishing on the barge. H. M. Phillips of this city and C. A. Jones of Taft were rewarded with fifty pounds of barracuda after three hours of fishing. Fishing is good from the pier also.

Warning Given on Bridal Date

SANTA ANA, Aug. 2.—Consult the marriage license officials before sending out the wedding invitations. Otherwise the "three-day" marriage law may provide embarrassing moments.

County Clerk J. M. Backs cited the experience of a Fullerton couple who had mailed invitations to their wedding for a certain date, only to discover when they called that day for their marriage license that they must wait another day.

Backs explained that the law provides there must be a lapse of three full days between the date the notice of intention is filed and the date the license is issued. That means that the license is issued on the fifth day, counting the filing of the notice as one day.

Hat Blown Off Causes Crash

HUNTINGTON PARK, Aug. 2.—E. Steuer of State street, was driving his automobile near his home, when his hat blew from his head. He stopped the car and left to recover the "sky piece." Orville Tracy of Haywood street, was also driving in the same direction, but he failed to notice Steuer's car in the street until he struck it.

Tracy was cut about the arm and bruised on the mouth, and Mrs. Tracy suffered a cut on the nose and body bruises.

ELKS OF VALLEY TO EAT TURKEY DINNER

SAN FERNANDO, Aug. 2.—A turkey dinner will be one of the features of the third anniversary meeting of San Fernando Valley Elks' Lodge, No. 1539, scheduled for Tuesday night at Porter Hotel. The dinner will be complimentary to all members of the lodge. At the regular business meeting of the lodge announcement will be made on the new building the lodge is planning to erect. Between 500 and 750 persons are expected to participate in the gathering. All Elks in San Fernando Valley are affiliated with the lodge, making it one of the largest in Southern California.

ONE DAY IN JAIL ENOUGH

SOUTH GATE, Aug. 2.—Henry Richter, who was found guilty of violation of the Wright Act this week and fined $500, of which $350 was suspended, and who then went to the County Jail, only spent one day in the bastile, as he was not overpleased with his confinement. He paid his fine after serving the day and was released. His case was heard before Judge Stanley Moffatt.

PEEPING TOM ACTIVE

HUNTINGTON PARK, Aug. 2.—"Peeping Tom" is again active here, the man having appeared three nights in succession at a residence on East Fifty-seventh street, where he gazed into a window for a short time and then disappeared. He is described as being five feet and ten inches in height and wears a straw hat, brown trousers and light shirt.

SHE HOPES TO BE MISS PROSPERITY

Miss Gwenn Seager

GLENDALE, Aug. 2.—One of the features of the prosperity pageant that is to be staged here September 6 to 15, under the auspices of Ray F. Enos Chapter, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, will be a contest to decide who shall wear the title of "Miss Prosperity."

The girl who is selected as winner of the contest will be given a free trip to Mexico and Central America aboard one of the ships of the Panama Mail Steamship Company, and already competition for the honor is growing keen.

Glendale Post, No. 127, American Legion, has sponsored the candidacy of Miss Gwen Seager, 406 Marlposa street, and the ex-soldiers are rallying to her support to secure the votes required to place her at the head of the list when the final decision is announced.

Officials of the Disabled American Veterans' organization report that more than half of the exhibition booths have already been leased, with prospects that the building that is to be erected at North Brand Boulevard and Lexington Drive may have to be enlarged to accommodate the added entries.

Warrants Out for Five Stock and Bond Men

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 2.—Operations of stock and bond salesmen were drawing attention of officials again today, after a lapse of several months. The Sheriff today held warrants for five men on grand-theft charges, based on stock transactions, and involving $60,000 worth of securities, it was learned from Dep. Dist.-Atty. E. N. Clark, issuance of the warrants followed investigations here by E. F. Dishman of the State Corporation Commissioner's office.

Arrest of Paul A. Loeb, named on one complaint charging three counts of grand theft and a fourth count of violation of the State Securities Act, was expected by the Sheriff late today. Loeb was believed to have been located in Los Angeles.

Clark said the complaint accused Loeb of having induced Mrs. Mattie Pence to intrust her securities worth $10,000 to him on his promise to exchange them for Standard Oil stock. Mrs. Pence heard no more about her stock, Clark said.

Stocks valued at $50,000 were involved in similar complaints against four free-lance stock salesmen, according to Clark.

Family Brings J.H.Logie Ashes

REDLANDS, Aug. 2.—Mrs. J. H. Logie and daughter, Mrs. Helen Hammett, arrived home here this afternoon, bringing the ashes of Mr. Logie, who died suddenly in Scotland while on a tour of Europe last week. From the train the party went immediately to the Logie home at 119 Fern avenue.

Mrs. Floyd Robinson, formerly Miss Marguerite Logie of Oakland, arrived here Wednesday and met her mother and sister at the train today. Other members of the family have come or will come within the next day to attend the services for Mr. Logie. Announcement of arrangements is to be made later. Mr. Logie was prominent in business affairs of the city, one of the principals in the development of the Yucaipa Valley and one of the most prominent Masons of the Southwest, holding a Thirty-third Degree in the order.

GLADDENS NOT GLAD; DIVORCE GIVEN THEM

ONTARIO, Aug. 2.—Although their names are Gladden, there was little gladness in the Gladden home today.

More than forty-three years of married life had ended for the couple, and their matrimonial bark went on the rocks, a divorce decree having been granted Gladden by Superior Judge B. F. Warner. Gladden charged his wife with cruelty. For ninety days Mrs. Gladden refused to speak a word to him, according to Gladden's complaint. Mrs. Gladden had filed an answer to the charges and a cross-complaint, but did not contest the case when it was called. The Gladdens were married in Illinois January 6, 1886, and parted September 12, 1929.

PARK ZOO AND MUSEUM UNSTINTED

San Diego Supervisors will Not Reduce Institutions' Share in County Budget

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 2.—The Natural History Museum and the Zoological Garden in Balboa Park will each receive $13,737 this year as their annual share in the county budget, Chairman Charles Good of the Board of Supervisors announced today. The amounts appropriated for the two park institutions are approximately the same as last year.

While the Supervisors showed consideration for the needs of the zoo and museum, as educational institutions, other claimants for budget appropriations faced prospects of being given less this year or of being cut off altogether.

With the exception of several county governmental departments and public institutions, however, few budget items were regarded as settled when the board adjourned at noon.

Assisted by representatives of the Taxpayers' Association, the board yesterday reduced the proposed county budget by $500,000. The board announced that it is determined to keep the county tax rate down to the level of last year, when the rate was $1.85 on each $100 of valuation. The reduction was made despite a lowering of the county tax appraisal. The Assessor's staff and the board, during the tax-equalization period just concluded, had reduced the appraisal by about $1,000,000. This meant that, with taxes collected on a basis of property valuations, there will be less theoretical value this year to assess, and normally this would mean an increased tax rate.

Ventura Baptist Church Plans for New Edifice

VENTURA, Aug. 2.—Construction of a new $20,000 Baptist church here has been virtually assured and work will begin in the early fall, according to a recent unanimous vote of the congregation to build and raise money for the edifice.

The building, which will follow the modern trend in Mayan architecture, will be erected at Santa Clara and Laurel streets, next to the present Sunday-school building.

Only half of the $20,000, which the building will cost, has to be raised, according to Rev. J. W. Jenkins, pastor. The church already has $10,000 in its treasury which is set aside for building purposes. The remainder will be gathered by popular subscription in a building campaign to be staged during the week beginning the 25th inst.

George G. Dowey, head of the National Board of Church Extension of the Presbyterian denomination, is to be in charge of the building campaign.

Recall Move Frowned Upon

GLENDALE, Aug. 2.—Various local organizations have gone officially on record as opposing the recall movement that has been directed against Mayor C. E. Kimlin and Councilmen C. H. Hatz and Sam Davis, condemning the asserted use of the recall provision in the city charter as a club and expressing their faith in the city officials.

O. C. Logan, chairman of the committee sponsoring the recall petition, stated today that 1500 names have already been signed to the petition.

EARL LYON KILLED IN FALL OF GLIDER

REDONDO BEACH, Aug. 2.—Funeral arrangements are being made here today for Earl Lyon of 820 North Lucia street, who was almost instantly killed late yesterday when a glider he was flying became entangled in power lines near the Kelly Airport in Hawthorne. Lyon was a charter member of the South Bay Glider Club, and was its manager of publicity. He was regularly employed as engineer at the Surf and Sand Club in Hermosa Beach. Besides his widow, Mrs. Lottie Widemer Lyon, and two small children, he leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lyon of Los Angeles, and a sister, Mrs. Brenna Cover of Boulder, Colo. Funeral services will be conducted from the Niland mortuary here, and await the arrival of Mrs. Cover.

DISTRICT LEGION HEADS NOMINATED

OWENSMOUTH, Aug. 2.—Three Legion men are slated to succeed Wright Hubbard of Owensmouth as president of the twentieth district of the American Legion, it is announced here following the checking over of nomination lists for the office.

The men are Reeves Hendershot, Commander of Glendale post; William Hamerick, Past Commander of the Beverly Hills post, and James Duncan, District Vice-President and Past Commander of Westwood Hills post. Clarence Kincaid, Commander of the State association, has the indorsement of the twentieth district for the office of national executive committeeman.

PERSONNEL CHANGES

SOUTH GATE, Aug. 2.—With the recent appointment of Ben Connelly as superintendent of streets, some changes have been made in the personnel of the department. Nine employees have been dismissed and that number of new ones appointed. The department consists of twelve men.

GIRLS "HITCH-HIKE" ON SHIP

Miss Imogene Warder Tells of Amusing Adventures in Foreign Lands While Afoot and Afloat

REDLANDS, Aug. 2.—The adventures of two American girls in out-of-the-way places of the world were told here today by Miss Imogene Warder while on a short visit with friends here. The adventurers were Miss Warder and Miss Delania Barrington. Landing in Ireland, they decided to see what it was like and wandered about stopping in hamlets and taking shelter of a night in houses of the people wherever they happened to be. They rode many miles in jaunting cars and later purchased bicycles with which they further toured Ireland.

The people of South Ireland are very poor, they found, and exist on a diet of potatoes. Even the small children are many times without teeth, having lost them because of the diet. Miss Warder gave an interesting account of visits to lace factories and an interview with the lord of a large estate in Ireland. Northern Ireland, they found, is much more active industrially.

Their wanderings took them on to Scotland, where to be more like the Scots, they donned kiltie suits. Later they discovered they were the only persons in Scotland wearing kilts.

Journeying on to France, they spent eight months in Paris and had opportunity to get the French viewpoint of the American tourist, who is out for a speed record when going through the famous art galleries.

The girls visited the battlefields, which are not by any means obliterated, they found.

Spain followed, where they met with instant and gracious hospitality. Then Italy, Germany, Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

One of the most amazing exploits recounted by Miss Warder was hitch-hiking by boat through the Arctic Circle north of Iceland and to Finland. They bummed and hiked their way southward through Finland for 700 miles to Sweden and a railway, and then returned to Denmark.

Miss Warder, who is staying in Los Angeles, is a resident of Peru, Ind., and is to teach history in Ogden, Utah, next winter.

Pier Repairs at Huntington Beach Start

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Aug. 2.—Work on the repair of the 1400-foot municipal concrete pier has been started and when completed the 500-foot extension will be added to the end of the wharf, according to A. S. Covell, general superintendent of the Merritt, Chapman, Scott Company, general contractors.

The contract for the granite work has been let to the California Gunite Construction Company of Los Angeles, with M. G. Williams in charge of repairing pilings and platform. The sandblowers have cleaned off a portion of the platform where the breaks have occurred and the gunite operators have started.

Twenty men are at work, according to J. C. Bauer, superintendent for the general contractors, and when work on the extension starts in about three months fifty men will be working on the job. Eighteen piles have been rebuilt to original size by adding two inches more concrete around them. Two hundred and eight pilings need repairing, Bauer stated, and fourteen tons of steelwork and more than 5000 sacks of cement will be required to repair the pier. Bauer estimates that twenty tons of steel and more than 5000 sacks of cement will be used in the pier extension. After the extension is added a modern boat landing will be constructed at the end of the pier, which is expected to be a great improvement on the one already located here.

City Engineer Rossen is fully recovered from his recent serious illness and, with Harry Overmeier, assistant city engineer, is on the job daily.

Service Men to Gather at District Meet

VENTURA, Aug. 2.—More than 400 Legionaires of the Sixteenth District are expected to throng to Ventura tomorrow, when the district stages a barbecue at the Wren's Nest in the Casitas.

The affair, which gets under way at 10:30 a.m., is being sponsored by the two local posts of the American Legion. The Sixteenth District embraces fourteen American Legion posts in Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo counties.

The barbecue is a preconvention get-together for the Legionnaires, all of whom have laid plans to attend the State Legion convention on the 18th and 20th inst. at Sacramento.

Most of the State Legion officials will be here for the festivities, as well as candidates for the State offices, subject to the vote at the State conclave.

Arizona Horses to be Eaten

CALIPATRIA, Aug. 2.—Twelve carloads of horses consigned to John Goodwin, rancher near here, arrived here tonight from Arizona to be fattened for the foreign meat market, according to Goodwin, who is feeding for the Continental Packing Company's plant at San Jose. Several European countries have a steady demand for horse meat and Imperial Valley alfalfa fields that have market-fed thousands of head of cattle annually are now helping to readjust the "saturation point" of the automobile's predecessor.

CANTALOUPE GROWERS HARVESTING BIG CROP

VAN NUYS, Aug. 2.—San Fernando Valley growers of cantaloupes will receive about $200,000 for this summer's crop, it is estimated from the present outlook of the harvest. According to the records of Frank Carr of the water department branch here, there are about 1450 acres in the valley area planted to melons, only a small part of which is in watermelons.

Although the valley crop of cantaloupes is said to be up to standard in quality, the outer appearance of the fruit is not first class in this respect and as a result only the usual profits will be received. Growers here estimate that the average production will be about 200 crates to the acre and that the average price before the harvest is finished will be about 75 cents a crate.

RABID DOG CAUSES SCARE AT REDONDO

REDONDO BEACH, Aug. 2.—Resulting from the discovery of a rabid dog known to have bitten at least twelve other animals yesterday, Dr. Henry Smiley, district health officer, has asked a careful surveillance of all dogs until the scare is past. The dog responsible for the scare was taken by City Police Officer Ollis Cole after a chase of nearly a mile. A city ordinance provides that all dogs be leashed or muzzled if health officers desire it, and this measure will be called into effect if more traces of the rabies are found, Dr. Smiley said today.

Claude Neon Company Unit Reports Progress

Electro Therapy Products on Profit Basis

Development of Ultra-Violet Lamps Revealed

Development of the cold-quartz ultra-violet ray apparatus by Electro Therapy Products Corporation, controlled by the Electrical Products Corporation of California, has reached the stage where this new division of the business of the parent organization, Claude Neon Electrical Products Corporation, Ltd., of Delaware, promises to be an important source of revenue, it was learned from officials of the company yesterday.

Organized in December, 1929, as a closed corporation with Electrical Products Corporation of California owning about 90 per cent of the company, Electro Therapy Products Corporation has forged quietly ahead until today it is presenting to the medical profession an entirely new type of ultra-violet lamp which is now being used by approximately 200 physicians and which is attracting the interest of the medical world.

In contrast to the high-temperature water-cooled ultra-violet lamps, the cold-quartz lamp permits the unit itself to be placed in actual contact with the affected surface, being introduced into the orifices of the body. The lamp contains no neon gas but an atmosphere of noble gases and mercury. It is portable and sells for about half the price of the other types of lamps, officials said.

The company is manufacturing four lamps, a dental unit, a universal unit, an urethreal unit and a grid type for general body radiation. The lamps are covered by patents and patents pending.

PROFITS TO DATE

Although the company is just completing the organization of dealers throughout the Pacific Coast and Middle Western States, the net profits to date are estimated as in the neighborhood of $8000. As an indication of the potential market for this apparatus, the officials estimate that the monthly gross volume of the ultra-violet lamp business in the United States today is around $2,000,000.

The company recently displayed its lamps at the American Medical Association convention at Detroit, where it received many inquiries from physicians, according to the officials. The Detroit Institute of Technology has announced for the coming year a new course in ultra-violet radiology under Prof. Luther S. H. Gable in which the apparatus of the Los Angeles concern will be used exclusively.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Paul D. Howse, president of the Claude Neon Electrical Products Corporation, Ltd., yesterday said that this new division of the corporation has bright prospects with some of the company's executives holding the belief that it may rival the sign-advertising division of the company.

The company has been operating in a plant on West Eleventh street but arrangements are being made to move it to the Electrical Products plant in Venice Boulevard.

Airplane Sales Volume Gaining

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) Production and sales of airplanes produced in the second quarter of 1930 showed a decided improvement over the first, according to the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, Inc.

Sales of commercial aircraft actually delivered during the second quarter more than kept pace with production, indicating airplane inventories are being fast depleted.

Pacific States Loan Earnings at Record High

Largest July earnings in the history of the institution were reported yesterday by Pacific States Savings and Loan Company on the basis of its statement of condition as of July 31, last.

Net earnings for the month, after reserve for Federal income tax were $89,159.80, or more than twice earnings for July, 1929 which were $43,737.14. Steady increase in business coupled with high efficiency and operating economies in all departments are credited by Robert S. Odell, president, for the high July earnings.

During the past month Pacific States Savings recorded a net increase in savings of $3,478,796.46, due entirely to normal development without consolidation, the statement reveals. The resources of the institution are now $68,739,331.48 which, it is believed, increase the margin of leadership this institution holds over all the building-and-loan associations of the United States.

More than $2,500,000 were set up in new loans for a net increase during the month of $1,775,081.45. In this respect July was again the largest of all corresponding months in the forty-one-year history of Pacific States Savings.

BOND ISSUES CALLED

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2.—The Ohio Edison Company has called for redemption $2,700,000 of Penn Ohio Power and Light Company 6 per cent debentures due July 1, 1939, and $2,264,000 of Northern Ohio Traction and Light Company 6½ per cent debentures due January 1, 1941.

BROKERS SUGGEST BUYING

Spring-Street Houses Advise Accumulation at Current Levels; Believe Liquidation Finished

What Spring-street brokers think of the current trend of the stock market and the outlook for security prices in the near future is summarized in the following representative opinions:

Decline in volume of sales with only minor fluctuations in market value would indicate that forced liquidation has fairly well run its course. From the unsuccessful attempts that have recently been made to break prices materially below present levels it would appear that a foundation has been laid on which commitments may be made with a degree of safety that has been absent for some time.—Jno. O. Knight, Los Angeles Investment Securities Company.

There are underlying factors that promise to have a favorable influence on the progress of industry and commerce—and these are cheap credit, which is always an aid to business improvement, probable underbuying of commodities in contrast to the overbuying of last year, the low rate of production at present in a number of leading industries, which, if past performances are of any value, show that current demand will overtake current supply, lower prices in the retail field which will hasten the distribution to consumers of the present supplies of goods, increasing efficiency throughout the industrial world with a better control of expenses and waste. Similar conditions such as these in the past have generally been characteristic of periods when foundations were being laid for a new upward movement. The action of the stock market during the last few days with one or two exceptions has shown absence of liquidation and the market will be quick to respond to any evidences of business improvement. Good stocks should be purchased for the long pull.—J. B. Kennedy, H. J. Barneson & Co.

Although developments still lack positive implication of an early turn in the trend of business generally, it now appears desirable to anticipate such improvement through making commitments on recessions in the better issues for holding over the intermediate to longer period. In the meantime traders will probably see an alteration of strong and weak market without important changes in either direction and mostly of professional character for the next week or so. There is a likelihood of a moderate rally during the early part of the coming week, but under present conditions it cannot be expected to carry very far.—Wilcox Drake, Wilcox Drake & Co.

Just as optimism is conducive to distribution, so is the current wave of pessimism favorable for accumulation. Waiting until the good news is plentiful, until the public is clamoring to purchase common shares, or trying for the last eighth has seldom proved profitable in the past. We believe that all such recessions as may present themselves in the near future should be used for the purchase of our leading common stocks.—Frank F. Hargear, Swire & Co.

The sharp decline on Wednesday failed to bring out any liquidation and, with the exception of short covering on Thursday and Friday, the market relapsed into the same apathetic condition which has characterized trading for some time in the absence of purely professional activity. The improvement during July and the ability of prices to hold up in the face of almost unparalleled dullness indicates the strong technical position of the market. The normal trend of stocks at this time is toward higher levels, but so far there has been no improvement in the trade situation to support further advances. Seasonal progress in August and September should have a stimulating market effect.—Franklin P. Donnell, Jones, Hubbard & Donnell, Inc.

For the past few days the volume has become so small and the market has flattened out to such a degree that prices probably will drift within a very narrow limit for the next few days. The situation does not appear to offer any particular incentive for a broad upward move for the immediate future. This month should show some indication as to what fall business will be. Until such time as some concrete evidence of the future of fall business develops, it is doubtful if the actual trend of the market can be determined.—Fred P. Schader, Dean, Witter & Co.

While we are by no means of the opinion that the existing state of industry is never going to improve, we do feel that any material lasting improvement is farther in the future than generally published opinions would indicate. There is still much to be accomplished in correcting the stock-market excesses of the past six years. We believe the next move will be to somewhat lower levels so far as general average prices are concerned. Some stocks are thoroughly deflated and may safely be accumulated for the long pull. Caution should be exercised in making stock-market commitments.—Frank L. Gardner, Banks, Huntley & Co.

By the end of the week the market had settled into a dull rut with small daily turnover and narrow price range. Trading during the period indicated that selling efforts had dislodged little if any real stock and the conviction remained that while buying of good quality was not attracted by advances, there was a substantial demand for stocks on recessions. Opinion prevails that the market will remain in a relatively narrow trading range until autumn trade prospects become a little better defined.—Norman B. Courteney, E. A. Pierce & Co.

RIO GRANDE TRADE SHELVED

Financing Program Revived Pending Renewal of Sinclair Discussions; Jones Expected This Week

BY EARLE E. CROWE

Development of another hitch in the negotiations between the Rio Grande and the Sinclair Consolidated oil companies was disclosed yesterday through the report of renewed conversations with bankers for short-term financing. Unofficial information states the Sinclair trade is only temporarily on the shelf, during which time the Rio Grande company will proceed with its program of financing.

This is the second time the Rio Grande-Sinclair negotiations have been delayed. Several months ago the trade was actively discussed and then dropped because of failure to agree on terms. After this development the Rio Grande company entered into a preliminary agreement for the underwriting of a debenture issue, which was canceled recently when the Sinclair proposals were renewed.

FUNDS PROVIDED

Pending the completion of the Sinclair discussions, it is understood the Rio Grande bankers have been providing short-time accommodation. It is planned now to take up these loans and provide funds for additional working capital and other purposes by the sale of approximately $7,500,000 of debentures or first-mortgage bonds.

Like many of the California oil companies, Rio Grande probably drew heavily on its cash resources during the second quarter as the result of unprofitable marketing activities. The cash position at the close of 1929 was not particularly satisfactory, although earnings of 97 cents a share in the first quarter of this year easily covered dividend requirements. But on the whole, it is likely the toll of the gasoline war has impelled early rehabilitation of finances.

Even though second-quarter gasoline prices were discouragingly low, Rio Grande ran contrary to the general trend among the smaller marketers by substantially increasing its gallonage. An aggressive marketing campaign covering the Pacific Coast produced total gallonage in the second quarter of 5,018,000, an increase over the same period of 1929 of 38 per cent.

TERMS UNDECIDED

Previously, when the financing was first under consideration it was generally understood that contemplated terms provided for the issuance of convertible debentures. Whether this plan still holds, or whether a first-mortgage issue with stock-purchase warrants will be substituted, is not known definitely yet.

More concerning the status of Rio Grande-Sinclair discussions will be known some time this week when Charles S. Jones, vice-president and treasurer, is expected to return from New York.

Apparently, the Sinclair management and its bankers are proceeding deliberately on the projected consolidation program. The next step, following the sale of the Sinclair Pipe Line and Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing companies to Standard of Indiana, is the physical absorption of Prairie Oil and Gas and Prairie Pipe Line. Following this move, Sinclair may be expected to turn more fully to the western situation.

ALLIS CHALMERS MFG.

The more important products in Allis Chalmers' diversified line of heavy machinery and electrical equipment are turbines, engines, centrifugal pumps, milling and mining machinery, power transmission machines, condensers and various types of tractors. In 1928 the company extended its tractor division to include a low-priced unit designed for highway, agricultural and industrial uses. By the purchase of the assets of the La Crosse Plow Company the organization is able to offer a complete line of agricultural implements along with its farm tractors. Allis Chalmers ranks next to General Electric and Westinghouse in the production of electrical equipment.

Adjusted to reflect the 4-for-1 stock split in 1929, per share earnings since 1923 have steadily increased with the 1929 record of $3.78 per share up sharply from the 1928 figure of $2.82. In the first quarter of 1930 93 cents was reported on the common shares, as against 89 cents a year ago.

CAPITALIZATION

Funded debt, $15,000,000.
Common stock (no par.) 1,298,400 shares.

Current data: While second quarter earnings are not yet available, unfilled orders on June 30 were 40 per cent above those on the same date in 1929 and billings well above a year ago indicate that income should be well ahead of that in the initial quarterly period.

The contract calls for thirty-one elevators, all of the automatic self-leveling car switch control type.

WEEKLY CITRUS REVIEW

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

California oranges were lower, but lemons were higher in average prices at eastern and middle western auction centers this week, figures compiled yesterday show. Sales increased from 437 cars of oranges and 186 of lemons last week to 445 and 255, respectively, this week.

The sharp advance in lemons begun last week reached its peak Monday of this week, after which there was a slight decline. The average price per box this week was $8.41, a gain of 11 cents over last week's average. A year ago lemons were bringing $6.36 a box and two years ago $6.03.

Oranges dropped 21 cents per box during the week to an average of $7.13. They brought $4.44 a box during the corresponding week of 1929 and $7.07 during the similar period of 1928.

BUSINESS IN MINING STOCKS HIGH

Metal Shares Make Up 57 Per Cent of Curb Volume in Month of July

Activity in mining stocks during July on the Los Angeles Curb Exchange showed a sharp increase over the preceding month, accounting for 57 per cent of the total exchange volume in point of shares, as compared to 37 per cent of the total turnover in June, it was revealed yesterday in a report issued by Phillip S. Leo, secretary and manager of the Curb.

Tom Reed Gold Mining, the feature mining stock of the month, showed a 67,167-share turnover and was followed by Big Jim Mines with 50,800 shares.

Total shares traded in during the month just closed amounted to 550,292, with a $1,241,787 market value, making the daily average of transactions for the twenty-five working days in July 22,013 shares of $49,671 market value.

The average price of the 196,663,576 total shares listed on the Curb is $21.68, remaining practically unchanged from the $21.55 average price for the previous month.

Dividends paid during July by the companies with securities on the Curb Exchange totaled $3,978,492, making total dividends for 1930 to date $30,640,704.

Yale and Towne Earnings Down

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company announced today total net income for the second quarter of the year of $24,140 after charges and taxes, against $619,209 in the same quarter of last year. The June quarterly income for this year was equal to 5 cents a share on 482 shares, compared with $1.41 on 440,000 shares in the June quarter of 1929.

In the first six months of the year net profits were $154,562 after charges and taxes, equal to 32 cents a share on 486,000 common shares, compared with $1,193,063, or $2.71 a share in the first half of 1929.

Net of Maytag Company Drops

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) Maytag Company's net profits in the quarter ended June 30, last, amounted to $991,150 after charges and taxes, equal to 40 cents a share on 1,617,922 shares of common stock. In the same quarter of 1929 net profits totaled $1,915,153, equal to 96 cents a share on 1,608,795 shares.

Net profits in the first half-year amounted to $1,382,927, equal after preferred dividends to 44 cents a share on 1,617,922 shares of common. In the same period of 1929 profits were $3,236,121, equal to $1.58 a share on 1,608,795 shares.

INCOME OF RELIANCE MANUFACTURING SAGS

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. — Reliance Manufacturing Company of Illinois, announced today net profits for the second quarter of the year of $44,948, after charges, taxes and inventory adjustment of $135,000, equal after preferred dividends, to 4 cents a share on 250,000 shares of common. This compares with $128,819, or 38 cents a share in the first quarter, and $303,187, or 67 cents in the June quarter of 1929. Six months' net profits were $173,676, or 42 cents a share, against $466,482, or $1.58 a share in the first half of last year.

PROFITS OF VADSCO SALES UNIT SHRINK

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. — Vadsco Sales Corporation reported today net loss for the quarter ended June 30, last, of $239,288, after charges, compared with a profit of $114,706 in the preceding quarter. For the first six months of the year net loss was $124,582, after charges, which compares with $803,725 as the net profit for the first half of 1929 after charges and taxes, equal after preferred dividends, to 52 cents a share on the common.

WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—Trading in wool the past week has been distinctly broader than during any previous week in July. Several large manufacturers have been showing more interest in current offerings of wool and during the last few days they have taken over a sizable quantity in the aggregate. Some sales have included largely the 64s and fine quality domestic wools. The trading in lower grades showed some increase, but the business was scattered and mostly on small quantities. Prices were inclined to strengthen, but they were higher than previous ranges in only a few cases.

AUSTRALIAN TRADE SLUMPS

High Rate of Exchange Curtailing Volume and Seriously Affecting United States

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR

[Copyright, 1930, by the North American Newspaper Alliance]

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Australia's trade is being slowed up these days, by the heavy discount of 8 per cent on her money.

Ordinarily, the United States sells to the Australian commonwealth about $150,000,000 worth of goods annually. But a discount of about 8 per cent, if continued, means $12,000,000 annually, or $1,000,000 a month loss by American exporters on exchange alone.

What goods are affected? About $25,000,000 of oil products is one of the largest items.

Australia, a vast continent, about equal to the United States, has only 6,500,000 people. Her adverse balance of trade is about $150,000,000 a year.

Until the discount, caused by this unfavorable trade balance, is lifted, American trade with this progressive commonwealth, will probably be slow.

Chapman's Ice Cream Company Sales Increase

Gross sales of Chapman's Ice Cream Company for July totaled $85,150.85, with estimated net profits for the month between $25,000 and $30,000 before Federal income taxes, A. A. Comey, president, reported yesterday. The July sales exceeded those of June by $22,638.88.

Total gross sales for the first seven months of this year were $370,259.70, as against $366,373.84 in the corresponding period of last year, a gain of $3886.06.

Estimating net profits for July at $28,000, total net profits for the first seven months of this year are $74,079.75, as against $71,088.69 in the like period of 1929, the report stated. The full dividend at the rate of $1.25 a share on 50,000 outstanding shares for the entire 1930 year has been overearned, Mr. Comey pointed out.

Southland Gas Utility Income Shows Decline

Southern Counties Gas Company of California, controlled by Pacific Lighting Corporation, yesterday reported for the twelve months ended June 30, last, operating revenue of $7,641,279, as compared to $7,863,455 in the preceding year, a decrease of $222,176 or nearly 3 per cent.

Operating expenses and taxes increased from $5,051,179 in the preceding year to $5,272,679. Interest was $540,000 against $506,587 in the 1929 period, depreciation was $804,046 against $809,764 and amortization amounted to $107,240 against $107,247.

Balance available for dividends and surplus totaled $917,313 as against $1,368,675 in the 1929 period, a decrease of $451,362 or 49 per cent.

Brokers Denied Oregon Permit

SALEM, Aug. 2. (AP) — The State Corporation Commissioner today denied Logan & Bryan, New York brokers and members of the New York Stock Exchange, a permit to operate in Oregon because of the firm's former connection with the defunct Overbeck & Cooke Company, Portland.

The failure of Overbeck & Cooke in January, 1928, caused losses to customers estimated by the commissioner at $1,500,000. The failure resulted in prison sentences for James P. Cooke, president, and C. A. Goodwin, firm employee. The Portland firm was correspondent for Logan & Bryan.

POWER UTILITY NET KEEPS STEADY GAIN

American and Foreign Power Company, Inc., shows in recent years a greater growth in gross earnings, net earnings and earnings per share of common stock than any other public utility company of comparable size, according to an analysis just prepared by Schwabacher & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange.

Ordinarily, the United States sells to the Australian commonwealth about $150,000,000 worth of goods annually. But a discount of about 8 per cent, if continued, means $12,000,000 annually, or $1,000,000 a month loss by American exporters on exchange alone.

What goods are affected? About $25,000,000 of oil products is one of the largest items.

Australia, a vast continent, about equal to the United States, has only 6,500,000 people. Her adverse balance of trade is about $150,000,000 a year.

Until the discount, caused by this unfavorable trade balance, is lifted, American trade with this progressive commonwealth, will probably be slow.

H. M. Bodfish, manager of the United States Building and Loan League, consisting of more than 12,000 building and loan associations, has opened headquarters in Chicago to begin an active campaign to tell the American people more about the building and loan association ideas.

One out of every ten people in the United States is a member of some building and loan association. The assets of these associations—now almost $9,000,000,000—are used largely in building homes, and about 500,000 are built each year.

Loans are made on residences and are paid back on a monthly or weekly basis. How have they succeeded? The records show that in the past ten years losses have been practically nothing—ranging from 1-1000 of 1 per cent to 14-1000 of 1 per cent of the total resources.

Mr. Bodfish believes that as the workingman's dollar today, invested in a home, buys less than it does invested in any other necessity of life, the emphasis of the next few years will be "to find ways to make the building dollar go further."

Few institutions in the United States have been more valuable to home builders than these building and loan associations, now located in every State in the Union.

With the purchase last week of a large Minneapolis grain farm, the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, the grain marketing organization of the Farm Board, has become the greatest single factor in the world's wheat trade.

C. E. Huff, its president, sees a big future ahead. In just eight months, the wheat farmers, through co-operative efforts, have rounded out an organization in the spring-wheat region. So now it has five divisional agencies in the country —one on the Pacific Coast, and one each in the Northwest, the Northeast, the Southeast and the Southwest.

Mr. Huff expects his organization to handle at least 200,000,000 bushels of the 1930 wheat crop and probably half of the 1931 crop.

"The elimination of a possible three to ten profit-takings and the establishment of the farmers' national as the most important factor in the foreign market," says Mr. Huff, "means that American wheat has become accessible to buyers anywhere in the world."

Such work is closer to the "collective" heart of the Farm Board than any other.

WEEK ON MART REVIEWED

Trading Generally Light and Prices Irregular as Speculative Sentiment Shifts

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (AP)—The stock market finally became wedged between two uncertainties this week, and bulls and bears went off on a picnic together.

The first uncertainty was a bullish one, and the second a bearish one. Bulls feared the business upturn expected during the next month or two might not come up to their sanguine hopes, while bears, on the other hand, had a disconcerting inkling that it might.

The market did not come to rest, however, until the bull leaders who had engineered the rally from the lows of June 24, received a stunning blow on Wednesday, in the form of one of the sharpest reactions since mid-June. Trading throughout the week, however, was light, and at the end of the week was the lightest in four years, as most market operators gave up in disgust and left town for the weekend.

Since the rally reached the end of technical limits on July 18, the market has been unable to make definite progress. Twice thereafter prices were driven up to those levels, only to meet overpowering selling. On Monday, the index of ninety shares recorded a level slightly above July 18, but in the next two sessions, it dropped 6 points, and has managed to rally only about a point since.

Efforts to bring about a decisive reaction, however, have soon petered out. After selling off a few points, the market for the past fortnight was turned extremely dull, and shorts have been unable to cover without causing a substantial rally.

Much theory and little fact concerning the business prospect has been appearing. The quarterly reports of the two leading steel producers made their appearance, but were too close to Wall street estimates to influence the market. Some observers placed a highly bullish interpretation on a statement issued by the finance committee of United States Steel expressing the belief that recession in operations had ended and output would increase the remainder of the year.

Wall street, however, apparently takes it for granted the bottom of the decline has been reached, since operations must now be speeded up to fill autumn requirements, but it is interested in knowing something about the scope and duration of the recovery. It learned last spring that seasonal fluctuations alone do not make recoveries.

The victory of the high tariff party in Canada was used as an excuse for considerable bear selling, as well as renewed depression in cotton and wheat. Utilities were sold on reports of electrical power rate reductions and this group showed relatively the widest losses at the end of the week.

The banking and credit situation remained decidedly favorable, although gold continued to flow to France and Canada, some $55,000,000 having now left the country on the present movement. This, however, is only about a quarter of the gold that has come in since the beginning of the year, and stocks remain excessive.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York in its survey disclosed that one bugbear might be minimized. Country banks have been rumored for some time to be loaded up with frozen loans on security collateral. The New York Reserve Bank reported that of 118 country banks examined in this district, ninety-two either had no loans or a negligible amount against security collateral the market value of which had dropped below the amounts of the loans. Only nine had from 5 to 11 per cent of their loans against inadequate security collateral.

Although the month-end turnover of funds amounted to about $6,000,000, call money did not go above 2 per cent. The weekly Federal Reserve statements showed a decrease of $19,000,000 in outstanding reserve credit, and a negligible gain of $2,000,000 in broker loans.

INCOME Investment

Averaging 2% A Month

The investing public has long recognized the attractiveness of a good income investment without an interruption of monthly disbursements.

Through wars, panics, stock market slumps and business depressions, as well as in times of prosperity, investors in this class of investments have received an attractive income.

This is a record seldom equaled in finance.

Due to a limited amount of the unsold portion of this offering, we suggest the investor who has $500.00 to $10,000.00 available where he will obtain a good income, get full information regarding this investment, then try to duplicate it.

NEW YORK BOND PRICES

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (AP)—The listed bond market gave a fair account of itself in active dealings on a broad trading session today. While the volume of sales diminished, the character of forward movement of investment issues was not diminished. There were some losses, but the preponderance of changes was on the upside.

Corporate issues were generally firm, and there were two instances of marked inventory gains. Paul adjustment 5s gained seven points, and Warner Brothers 6s advanced 1, although the stock for which conversion carries is off the close.

Foreign bonds were firm and very quiet with few exceptions. Both new international issues, German 5½s and Austrians 6s, moved ½ point each, bringing the German issue to the lowest point since it was offered. Chile 8s sold at the top price of the unusual activity. Sensational gains in Standard Petroleum 6½s, which gained 15 points.

There was little demand for United States government issues, principally rails.

Among local issues, Atchison 4s were firm. Union Pacific 4s gained 1½ points. Southern Pacific 4½s, Colorado and Southern 4½s and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis 5s, Seaboard 5s advanced 1. Oswego did little. Utility Power and Light issues continued downward. American Water Works issues were steady to firm.

The price of sugar continues to have some bearing on bonds of effect on Cuban Dominican 7s and East Cuba 7½s moved 1 to 2 points lower.

The following represent sales of bonds (in thousands of dollars) and the high, low and closing prices in order given. Bonds transactions in which the same as the low, and those when same as high.

OIL NEWS

BY HOWARD KEGLEY

Although a number of small wells were completed during the past week in the Signal Hill oil field they failed to send the daily average production much above 100,000 barrels, according to a report from Umpire Neil H. Anderson.

The Mendin Oil Company's No. 1 at Los Cerritos is flowing at the rate of 450 barrels of oil a day. The Young Petroleum Company's Hilton No. 1 came in for about 350 barrels per day and Ball & Barnes No. 1 was completed for 160 barrels daily.

Two interesting projects have been snubbing several days. The Plymouth Oil Company's No. 11 and the Petroleum Securities Company's Graham No. 2, both in the extreme easterly portion of the field, were to go on production early this week. Both have gone into the upper oil sand that has been productive for many other operations. No gauge has been made of Tom Gilson's Jones No. 3 which is flowing into the sump. The Jameco Oil Company's No. 6 is putting out approximately ninety barrels daily.

Throughout the entire Signal Hill field 118 projects are making progress with the drill. This is the most active area in the State from standpoint of operations. There are 744 producing wells in the field.

Three Possibilities

That deeper production may be drained in the Potrero town-lot area is indicated by the performance of the Richfield Oil Company's Coffin No. 1 which yesterday was flowing mud and oil at an estimated rate of 30 barrels per day from a depth of 6111 feet.

Richfield's well is the deepest that has found interesting showings in the Potrero town-lot area, and it indicates in a measure what may be obtained. Last reports were that the hole was cleaning up and would probably settle down to perhaps 500 barrels of oil a day.

Deep Test Discussed

The Richfield Oil Company now is considering making a deep test in the north Inglewood district and near the brickyard where the Ring Federation Company drilled Simons No. 1 to 5485 feet. Ring encountered some interesting showings a little higher in the hole and later considered the possibility of deepening Simons No. 1. Now that deeper production has been found in the town-lot area at Potrero, it appears that at least one or two really deep projects may be drilled a little east of the brickyard.

Drilling Down

The Standard Oil Company's Bastanchury No. 1 due east of the Coyote Hills field continues to make progress and is below 6228 feet in a gay sand formation. This project was in several weeks ago a little higher but was killed to deepen to determine extent of the oil sand. Then drilling resumed, oil sand and chalk formation has been fairly continuous and it is thought to definitely prove an extension of the Coyote Hills field.

Continues to Swab

The Shell Oil Company is still endeavoring to complete Porter-Day No. 1 deep in southeast of Bakersfield. Yesterday, it was swabbing with bottom at 5029 feet, having been deepened sixty-five feet from the old bottom at 4965 feet to take in more formation.

Another One In

The Elmer Oil Company has just brought in its first producer in the Venice field. Its No. V-1, due west of the Ohio Oil Company's Recreation Club No. 1 and the Barnsdall-Cypress Corporation's Burks No. 1, both producing, was completed for 2675 barrels of oil a day from the deeper formation. Venice's total potential is slightly in excess of 12,000 barrels of oil a day as against an allowable of 5500 barrels daily.

Of the fifteen completions brought in at Venice since last December, thirteen are steady producers, and two are still being worked on to improve the flow. In the entire field there are forty-one active projects, exclusive of producers.

The Barnsdall-Cypress combination's Burks No. 3 yesterday was drilling out cement plug at 5894 feet with bottom of the hole at 5952 feet and will make a production test this week. The operator's No. 13 offsetting the Union and Superior producers is rigging up to spud in. Ohio's Del Rey No. 2 in the extreme easterly portion of the field is drilling out cement to make a production test with bottom at 6078 feet.

Rapid Progress

The Barnsdall Oil Company is making good progress in Trust No. 2 at Rosecrans. This project yesterday was drilling below 3160 feet and at the present rate should be completed within a month at about 5900 feet, where the company's Trust No. 1 came in for 1000 barrels of 37 deg. gravity oil per day.

At Maricopa Flat, Barnsdall's Son-Crail No. 1 is nearing completion. Bottom is at 3633 feet.

Deep Test Underway

A deep test for the Montebello field has been undertaken by the St. Helens Petroleum Company. The company is deepening Monterey No. 15 lying in the easterly portion of the field. It originally was producing from a depth of 4357 feet and will be carried to at least 6000 feet. In the event deeper production is not obtained, St. Helens indicated that the project will probably be plugged back to about 3900 feet for a production test.

Abandons Deep One

The Ring Oil Company yesterday announced abandonment of More No. 1 near Goleta. After penetrating the Vaqueros formation seventy feet without obtaining showings of oil sand, Ring decided to abandon and to quitclaim leases totaling 340 acres. This project is a short distance northwest of the More ranch tests drilled by the General Petroleum Corporation.

FARMERS CO-OPERATE IN BRAZIL

Grange Movement Gains Headway Among South American Growers

CURITYBA (Brazil) Aug. 2. (AP)—There are 168 rural societies—granges in the United States—formed in this State of Parana in Southern Brazil, with a membership of 12,560 farmers.

Each society is an individualistic unit but all are members of the Parana Rural Union, which extends to every corner of the State.

German farmers are leaders in the movement which includes cattle ranchers, wheat growers, dairy and diversified farm owners all with different problems to discuss. There is now a plan on foot to make these societies co-operative for both buying and selling purposes.

Test Proposed For Farmers

ALBANY (N. Y.) Aug. 2. (AP)—To prevent maladjustments through unqualified persons attempting to farm or through qualified farmers entering the wrong phase of the occupation, New York State has attempted to "examine" prospective farmers.

A statement from Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's office says the Department of Agriculture will seek to determine whether a prospective farmer is adapted to farming in New York State, and if so, what type of farming he should attempt.

CATTLE—Much lighter receipts the past week resulted in a somewhat better demand, but no price improvement. Several loads of fed steers and heifers were received from Colorado and Texas and met with a ready sale as did the few loads of desirable grass steers. Lighter grassers and Mexican stock was hard to move and suffered most of the loss. Steers in general were about 50c lower, while cow stock held largely steady. Bulls sold around 25c lower.

A load of 982-pound fed yearling Colorado steers brought 10.75, with four loads of 886 to 976-pound steers selling at 9.50@10.15. A load of good 1346-pound Central California grass steers brought 9.50, with four head in the shipment averaging 1373 pounds at 9.25. About three loads and a half of 1094 to 1250-pound Texas steers scored 9.25. Two loads of 770 to 832-pound Imperial steers scored 8.50@8.75, with several loads of 880 to 1153-pound native Utah Holstein and some Mexican type steers at 7.75@8.25. A few natives turned at 7.50 with a few loads of low-grade 726 to 1097-pound weights at 7.10@7.35 and very undesirable kinds down to 6.00 and below. Several loads of imperial Mexican steers averaging up to 1110 pounds scored 8.75@9.25.

Best heifers went for feeding purposes at 8.00@7.50.

Two loads of 573 to 634-pound Colorado fed yearling heifers brought 10.40 and 10.75 with two loads of 736-pound weights at 10.25 and some at 9.25. Low medium grass heifers sold up to 8.00 with bulk of common to medium at 6.00@7.50. Best of 1078-pound heifers of Colorado cows sold up to 7.75 with young native cows and heifers weighty kinds 7.25@7.50. Other desirable cows made 6.50@7.00 with bulk of common to medium at 5.00@6.50. Low cutters and cutters brought 3.50@4.75 with thin shells down to 2.00. A young fed bull scored 7.25. Bulk of bulls medium to good kinds at 4.50@6.00 and cutters down to 3.75.

CALVES—Lighter receipts did not intimidate many offerings of fair to choice quality, common to medium kinds predominating. Prices for the week are around 25c to 50c lower, a few good vealers turned at 12.00@12.50 with medium kinds down to 11.00 and bulk of the common to heavier calves at 8.50@10.50. Heavy calves sold around 8.00 with undesirable down to 6.00.

HOGS—Closing prices are about steady with a week previous, although earlier in the week when demand was better some advance was shown. Bulk of good to choice 177 to 211-pound Nebraska butchers, including the top loads of the week, give 9.60 as the top price at 11.50. Three loads of 165 to 192-pound easterns made 9.50@9.60 with some 9.25@9.50 paid for 11.25. A load of 178-pound Imperial butchers brought 11.35 and four loads of 200 to 220-pound eastern ranged from 10.65@11.00. Bulk of desirable weight meat fed butchers sacked 10.50@11.00, including some 240-pound kinds at 10.35. Some 270 to 300-pound eastern sold at 10.00, with heavier kinds at 9.00@9.50. Packing sows bulked at 8.00@8.50, with smooth light sows at 8.75, and few at 9.00@9.25. Sows 375 to 425 lbs. feeder pigs brought 10.25@10.75.

SHEEP—Receipts about equal to a week ago were in fairly good demand. Bulk of offerings were of California origin with a few decks from Texas and Utah. Fat lambs are around 25c higher, while ewes held steady. Two decks of good to choice 78-pound California lambs brought 8.85@9.00, those at the latter price lightly sorted. Two decks of similar quality but averaging 62 pounds made 8.60, with a deck of 56-pound kinds at 8.35, sorted 10 per cent at 8.25. Five decks of common to medium 72 to 87-pound California and Utah lambs brought 7.50@7.85, with two decks of commoner 94-pound California lambs at 7.25. Two decks of 94-pound Texas wethers turned at 5.40. A deck of good 82-pound Inland ewes topped at 4.50, sorted at 4.00 and common to medium natives made 2.00@3.00. A deck of 98-pound Inland bucks brought 2.50.

Corn Futures Hit New High Mark of Year

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. (AP)—Both corn and wheat shattered price records today but did so in exactly opposite directions, corn smashed through the previous top figures for the present season, whereas wheat dived under bottom levels not heretofore touched since 1914.

Forecasts indicated that drought, damaging the corn crop would remain unchecked unbroken next week, and on the other hand that there would be liberal rains to help the United States visible wheat supply total on Monday.

Opening quotations on corn were irregular, varying from 1¢ decline to 1¼¢ advance, compared with yesterday's finish, with the country's corn crop.

Dispatches emphasized that over wide areas the growth of corn was stunted, with the plants promising not to kernel better than half a crop unless soaking rains make the situation change.

Influenced by such an outlook, corn prices jumped up about 2¢ a bushel from the days' low figures, September, with March delivery finishing at the highest this season, each day of dry weather ahead being expected to curtail heavily the prospective yield of corn. September delivery, representing the present supply, at one time touched 90¢, but March, which stand for the new crop, was relatively easier as a result of selling to realize profits.

Wheat prices went downgrade under heavy selling pressure that came largely from sources Northwest and was more or less associated with spring wheat harvest movement. Besides, holidays abroad appeared to be reducing export demand to some extent. Although reports of black stem disease in spring wheat, notwithstanding an estimated crop reserve of as much as 877,000,000 bushels a year ago.

Provisions advanced readily to the highest point reached in some weeks. Commission houses demand was keen.

HENS PRODUCE WEALTH

RALEIGH (N. C.) Aug. 2. (AP)—A total income of $8670.26 from 21,468 hens for one month has been reported to Fred A. Seese, extension poultryman at State College. The reports came from 128 poultry growers in twenty-six counties. Over half of the income was profit.

CANNED FRUIT EXPORTS GAIN

California Shipments to Germany Increase

Pineapple Sent From State Ports Causes Growth

Peaches Lead Home-Raised Products Shipped Out

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 2. (AP)—Shipments of canned fruit from California ports to Germany during the first four months of 1930 totaled 4,986,178 pounds, compared with 4,066,784 pounds for the same period last year, the State Bureau of Commerce announced here.

Increase in shipments this year was attributed to more orders for canned pineapple. Although pineapples are not grown commercially in California, exports of canned pineapple from California ports to Germany exceeded shipments of any other variety of canned fruit during the first third of this year.

Exports of California-grown fruit in cans to Germany were less by 176,451 pounds during January, February, March and April this year than for the same period in 1929. Of the California fruits, peaches led with 526,857 pounds. Other canned fruits shipped, in order of importance, were apricots, pears, salad fruits, cherries, preserves and appleasuce. While shipments of some fruits from California to Germany decreased during the first quarter of this year, shipments of canned apricots increased almost 100 per cent.

The Bureau of Commerce does not have available figures on the amount of California canned fruit exported from Atlantic Coast ports, Charles C. Bowen, bureau chief, said.

Caterpillars Ordered From French Town

PARIS, Aug. 2. (NANA)—The war which has lately been declared upon caterpillars recalls quainter and older ways of dealing with little difficulties of this kind.

Early in the twelfth century the bishop of Laon pronounced a solemn sentence of excommunication against the caterpillars and grasshoppers that continued to increase and multiply in his diocese, however he might warn them to go elsewhere. His idea caught on and there is a published episcopal declaration dated 1516 reading as follows: "We grant the request of the inhabitants of Villeroce and warn the caterpillars to retire within six days, in default of which we declare them excommunicate and accursed."

Sometimes an advocate was appointed to defend the cause of the accused insects and their human enemies, the tillers of the soil, had formally to plead theirs in court in the ordinary way.

Mine Congress Plans Prepared

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—The permanent commission of the proposed world mining congress in Mexico City has completed its tentative program for the congress, subject to aproval of President Ortiz Rubio. The commission plans now to find out the sentiments of some of the leading silver-producing and consuming countries, preparatory to issuing formal invitations. The congress is to deal with the situation created by the low world silver market, caused principally by the lack of demand in China and the Orient.

MEXICAN BANK OF LABOR SETS RULES

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—At the first meeting of the board of directors of the newly established Bank of Labor in Mexico City it was voted to take steps that the new institution become associated with the Bank of Mexico in such a way that the Bank of Mexico can rediscount its documents. It was also decided to comply with the General Banking Law of Mexico and operate under the jurisdiction of the National Banking Commission. An executive committee, which is to be authorized to distribute stock, was named, with Antonio Manero as its chairman.

This Bank of Labor was established with a view toward reducing the unemployment situation in the republic and helping labor generally.

High Schools Teach Ground Flying Courses

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 2. (AP)—Although aviation courses involving actual flying are prohibited in State secondary schools by resolution of the State Board of Education, approximately half of the high schools have ground courses, Vierling Kersey, State Superintendent said. The California Curriculum Commission is expected to provide a technical ground course for use in secondary schools.

A subcommittee of the California advisory committee is now at work on a technical course, which will be submitted to the curriculum commission.

CHINA ABOLISHES PAROLES

NANKING, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—The practice of paroling prisoners on good behavior has been abolished by the Nationalist government along with the old Shanghai Provisional Court, because the Chinese code does not provide for paroles.

Nautical School Starts in Fall

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 2. (AP)—Applications for admission to the State nautical school probably will be received in November, Vierling Kersey, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has announced.

Bearing a cargo of naval supplies, the school ship California State has left the Norfolk Navy yard en route to the Pacific Coast. After stops at San Diego and San Francisco it will proceed to the Vallejo Navy yard to be fitted out as a school ship.

Kersey said plans at the present time are to keep the ship in San Francisco for seven months a year and in Southern California waters for three months. The remaining two months would be devoted to cruises.

The board of governors of the school is composed of J. C. Rohlfs, chairman; L. M. Edelman, C. W. Saunders, G. Allan Hancock. Kersey is executive officer.

INSTITUTE WILL VIEW BUSINESS

Public Affairs Parley Opens Today in Virginia

Prominent Men to Discuss Economic Trends

Rear-Admiral Byrd Will Be Guest at Reception

UNIVERSITY (Va.) Aug. 2. (AP)—Big business and what makes it go will be held up for inspection by national industrial leaders at the fourth Institute of Public Affairs here the 3rd to 16th inst.

Prof. Thomas H. Reed of Harvard is to direct a round-table discussion on "The Administration of Public Business" and Arthur J. Morris, head of the Morris Plan banks, will talk on "Consumers' Credit in America."

Men prominent in American economics have been selected by Dr. Charles G. Maphis, director of the institute, to lead the ten round tables. Harry Flood Byrd, whose reorganization of the Virginia State government, attracted nation-wide attention, will discuss that topic.

Martin J. Insull, president of the Midwest Utilities Corporation; Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the Nation; Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy; Will Durant, the author—each will discuss life in the United States from the angle he knows best.

Outstanding in interest is the debate between Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for President, and Insull on government ownership.

Rear-Admiral Byrd, is to be guest of honor at a reception.

INCREASED CORN YIELD AIDS STATE

JACKSON (Miss.) Aug. 2. (AP)—An increase in last year's corn crop was worth nearly $2,000,000 to Mississippi farmers.

This amount, says J. C. Holton, commissioner of agriculture, represents a saving on commercial feedstuffs purchased this year.

The decrease was 48,365 tons, which, valued at $40 a ton, represented a net saving of $1,950,600.

The larger corn crop was not effected at the expense of the cotton crop, Holton said. The State last year produced one of the biggest cotton crops in its history.

POPLAR GROWS LARGE

ASHEVILLE (N. C.) Aug. 2. (AP)—A giant yellow popiar tree near here has a circumference of thirty-six feet at a point six inches above the ground, and its first limb is 100 feet off the ground.

QUEEN MAY KEEP SECRET OF SMOKES

Illinois Reformers Who Interrogated Monarch to be Out Cable Tolls

(Copyright, 1930, by Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, August 2. (Exclusive)—Whatever curiosity the Rockford Women's Christian Temperance Union has about the question of Queen Mary's use of the cigarette will go unsatisfied, for their cable inquiry, according to all indications, will be coldly and completely ignored.

The organization sent the queen a cablegram asking whether she used the vile weed, but it is highly probable that the question which fell out of a blue sky on an unprepared and astounded and in some cases highly amused court will not only be left unanswered but will not even reach the queen, unless as a jest.

So every effort to learn the fate of the cable indicated today, both at Buckingham Palace and at Cowes, where King George and Queen Mary are spending a two-week holiday yachting.

"We are unable to give any information about the cablegram," it was said at the palace. "The court has moved to Cowes and it is certain that her majesty will not be disturbed with such a message during the holidays. It will probably be ignored."

HENRY DUFFY FILES BANKRUPT SCHEDULE

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Henry Duffy, theatrical manager, filed a personal voluntary schedule in bankruptcy in Federal Court today, virtually identical to the corporate schedule filed by the Duffy Players a month ago. Debts of $703,493 and assets of $361,750 are listed.

An involuntary petition was filed against the theater company two months ago.

Customs Duty Record Broken

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) All records for payment of customs duty by an individual on personal property were broken last Thursday by Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., who arrived on the North German Lloyd liner Bremen with dutiable merchandise purchased abroad valued at more than $300,000. It was learned today that Mrs. Biddle paid approximately $77,000 in duty, exceeding all previous payments here by many thousands of dollars.

It was emphasized that she paid no fines or penalties—that the $77,000 was payment on declared purchases.

HOLLYWOOD OLD-TIMERS IN REUNION

Stories of Cow Pasture Days Abound as Pioneers of Film City Meet

Old-timers of Hollywood who were there when the present great boulevards were country roads and streets were cow paths gathered yesterday for their seventh annual reunion and picnic at Plummer's Park, Santa Monica Boulevard and Vista street. More than 500 persons were there. Capt. Eugene Plummer was host and George G. Greenwood acted as master of ceremonies.

The affair was made colorful by Spanish dancers, Spanish music and decorations. In the speaking program Mrs. Buron Fitts, Judge Haas, Earl Reid, Judge Hanby, William E. Smith, George H. Dunlop and others gave brief talks.

Dunlop spoke of the old days when Hollywood was a village and before the motion pictures decided to make the place their own.

William Horsley, who built the first motion-picture studio in Hollywood, spoke of the early trials of the pioneers in this industry. He traced briefly the coming of the films to California and related many amusing incidents of the early picture days.

CONSERVATION BARNES'S ISSUE

Tenth-District Candidate Tells Platform

Water-and-Tree Protection Paramount Interests

Imposing List of Sponsors Backs His Campaign

Probably one of the most effective and practical legislative programs given local voters in the Congress districts in some time is that of George H. Barnes, well-known business man, who is running for Congress from the Tenth District on a program of conservation of our natural resources, political observers pointed out yesterday.

"Always at the outset of a campaign a number of issues are set up, only to die out in the end, but the legislative program that I am advocating in my campaign—one of conservation and adequate distribution of water—is one that affects every voter in the country. The voters are alive to this issue, and it is one that must be met," Mr. Barnes says.

CONGRESS AS MIRROR

"Congress is a mirror to reflect public opinion. I know what the people need and what they want in the matter of proper water conservation and I propose to do all I can when I get to Washington to help meet their needs."

Mr. Barnes is no novice in the matter of conservation, for he organized and has been active in promoting the American Green Cross. He and hundreds of his coworkers in this organization have for several years carried on a nation-wide educational program to conserve our forests and other natural resources. He proposes to carry on this work when he is in Congress.

His constructive program along this line has brought immediate response from a great array of men and women who are interested in this work and who have offered their generous support to Mr. Barnes's candidacy.

BARNES SUPPORTERS

Among these supporters are Mrs. Leiland Atherton Irish, former general manager of the Hollywood Bowl and prominent club woman, who has sent her congratulations from Liverpool, Eng.; Mrs. Florence Dodson Schoneman, past president of the History and Landmarks Club and well-known Native Daughter; Mrs. W. W. Stilson, past president of the State D.A.R.; Mrs. Nellie Stephens Lippincott of the Hollywood Woman's Club; L. E. Behymer, impresario; Frank H. Olmstead, outstanding engineer who served in the United States Reclamation Department under Franklin K. Lane; Mrs. James Birney Lorbeer, of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Al G. Farquharson, secretary of the Music and Radio Trades of Southern California; Mrs. Elizabeth Lloyd Smith of the Beverly Hills Woman's Club, mother of Harold Lloyd; Arthur W. Eckman of the Board of Education; John J. Hill, Public Defender; Mrs. B. F. Jakobson, Beverly Hills club woman; Mrs. Charles F. Gray, president of the Presidents' Association; Mrs. E. B. Welrick of the Montana Woman's Club; R. S. Rankin, engineer; Charles Gibbs Adams, past president of the City Planning Association and landscape architect; Gene Murphy, business man; Burr McIntosh, the "Cheerful Philosopher;" Dr. Sheldon Shepard of the Universalist Church; Mme. Emma Loeffler de Zaruba, retiring president of the Pielades.

Arthur C. Goebel, internationally known aviator; Alice Calhoun, motion-picture celebrity; Mrs. Viola E. Friedman of the Santa Monica Woman's Club, Mrs. Sylvia Morrison of the Pacific Palisades Forum; Hugh Evans, realty dealer; Mrs. Marybelle Chapman, "California song bird;" Rev. C. Ellwood Nash, educator; Mrs. Frederick Walker Stith, president of the Around-the-World Club; Mrs. Evangeline Voss, Venice clubwoman; Mrs. Queen Boardman of the National Fruit and Flower Guild, and hundreds of others, including clubs and organizations.

"In order that the people may pass wise and proper legislation for the protection of their forests they must be acquainted with those problems which so intimately affect their life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," said Mr. Barnes.

"Secretary of the Interior Wilbur voiced his opinion recently highly approving the Green Cross

WEATHER MAN VOICES FIRE HAZARD WARNING

Successive hot days with a relative humidity below normal yesterday brought a forest-fire warning from Col. H. B. Hersey, United States Weather Bureau observer, who said that in view of the extreme hazard, week-end motorists should exercise caution with fire and lighted cigars and cigarettes in the interior.

"The past few days of hot, dry weather have made the grass and trees like tinder," Col. Hersey said. "And a spark dropped in the wrong place will cause a flare-up of fire that will seem like an explosion."

Yesterday's maximum temperature was 85 deg., reached at noon with a relative humidity of 43 per cent. It was cooler than the day previous and, according to the prediction of Col. Hersey, today will be at least 1 or 2 degs. less. The normal maximum temperature is 82 deg., Col. Hersey said.

The forecast for today was "Fair with temperatures considerably above normal; gentle variable winds with low humidity. Extreme fire hazard in the interior."

PEDESTRIAN HIT BY CAR SUCCUMBS

Driver Held on Charge of Manslaughter After Alameda-Street Accident

Walter Albrecht, 50 years of age, of 717½ Clara street, a pedestrian at Chavez and Alameda streets, was fatally injured early yesterday morning when struck by an auto driven by Edward Kruger, 19, living at 19 North Third street, Alhambra. He died in Georgia-street Receiving Hospital.

Kruger was arrested on a suspicion of manslaughter charge and Leland S. Gaines, 20, of 115 North Fourth street, Alhambra, passenger in the Kruger car, was held as a material witness. According to the police report, the body of the injured man was carried thirty-three feet on the fender of the car which then proceeded another thirty feet before it was finally stopped.

Jocko, Hospital Monkey, Again Makes Escape

Jocko is loose again! He is a little mischievous monkey kept at the General Hospital laboratory for experimental purposes who has a yearning for the great outdoors and who makes his escape whenever the opportunity is presented.

The last time Jocko escaped, about three weeks ago, he was free for a week during which time he kept the hospital attaches in an uproar trying to capture him. One of his pranks, when loose, is to skip up to some unsuspecting nurse, grab her ankles and then bound away with a gleeful chatter. Another, is throwing a handful of food at internes. When pursuit gets too hot, Jocko makes for the tall flagpole, scampers to the top where he sits grinning and looking down at his pursuers.

Jocko made a dash for his liberty yesterday when an attendant opened the door of his cage to give him his breakfast of milk.

Woman Writer Due Here Today

Grace Duffie Boylan, former president of the League of American Penwomen and internationally known author, will arrive here Sunday. The writer comes from Memphis, where, in private life, she is Mrs. Louis Napoleon Geldert. In addition to her literary work Mrs. Geldert is active in State and national politics and is credited with leading the women voters of the South.

In Los Angeles Mrs. Geldert will be the guest of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Stuart Boylan, their children, and her daughter, Mrs. Clover Roscoe.

BABY GOLF IN PLUS-FOURS

One-time "Fad" Hops into Leading Industry with Millions Being Paid to Play

How much do these miniature golf courses cost? How many have been built? How many are now under construction? These with many other questions are asked daily? The answers, taken from official records follow:

|---|---|
| Number licensed courses in Los Angeles | 173 |
| Estimated number building in city | 35 |
| Estimated number in county, including Los Angeles | 400 |
| Minimum cost of construction (early courses) | $2500 |
| Average cost at present time | $9000 |
| Maximum cost of a single course to date | $65,000 |
| Estimated daily patronage, city and county | 60,000 |
| Average daily gross income, average course | $300 |
| Maximum daily gross so far reported | $1100 |
| Estimated weekly income from sport, city and county | $150,000 |

Baby golf has grown up! Just a few months ago Los Angeles awoke to see groups of men doing strange things to corner lots; looked tolerantly on the misguided goofs who were batting a little ball around a trick course, and just now is commencing to comprehend the fact that it witnessed the birth of a new industry.

Experts estimate that there are 400 golf courses in the county with possibly 100 more under construction. Los Angeles has 173 licensed courses with thirty-five more building. Alhambra has fourteen, while Santa Monica official records show ten. Glendale has licensed twenty so far and Pasadena twenty-two. Long Beach has given fifty permission to operate and at least fifteen more courses are under construction in the beach city.

While only 173 golf courses are licensed in Los Angeles, according to official figures at the City License Bureau, many are of the opinion that there are a larger number than this operating, many having failed to secure licenses. Also others estaimate that possibly seventy-five or 100 new courses are under construction instead of the thirty-five mentioned. Other figures were obtained from the offices of the City Clerks of the various towns mentioned.

C. K. Levitt, chief designer of the Miniature Golf Design and Construction Company of 1161½ West Ninth street, estimates that 60,000 persons play daily in Los Angeles county.

"Despite the increase in the number of courses, the major links are more than holding their own," he said. "Some of the smaller and earlier courses are showing a falling off in attendance. We estimate that the sport is gaining 1000 new devotees in Los Angeles every day."

It is impossible to estimate the number of courses in the county as no license is required by county regulations in order to operate.

"The average gross income of a good course is from $325 to $350 a day," Levitt said yesterday. "Other courses are grossing from $400 to $700 and even more daily. It is hard to strike an average as many of the smaller courses are dropping behind.

"It is believed that more than 400,000 persons play the courses each week or more than 1,125,000 a month. The average price is 35 cents with some courses charging 25 cents. This would give a weekly gross of from $125,000 to $150,000. Others estimate it as high as $200,000 a week. The yearly gross is away up into the millions and no sign of let up."

F. M. Sheppard, 3416 West Slauson avenue, course builder, says the average cost of putting in a course is well above the $5000 mark and possibly $9000 is closer.

"A good course will take from three to four weeks to build," he said, "and will employ steadily from twelve to twenty-four men working day and night. When the sport first started a course cost $2500. Now we use sometimes 100 tons of rock, 600 to 1200 yards of felt, 300 sacks of

FIESTA REPLICA OF PUEBLO DAYS

Founding of Los Angeles to be Re-enacted Here

Carnival and Pageant Set for September 4-5

Historically Accurate Bit of Past to be Shown

Shades of figures famous and picturesque in the early history of Los Angeles—padres, explorers, soldiers, bandits, Indians and settlers—will come flocking out of the past to recall those colorful days when, on September 4 and 5, next, an old-time fiesta will be held to celebrate the 149th anniversary of the founding of the Pueblo de Neustra Senora Reina de Los Angeles, or the City of Our Lady Queen of the Angels, on September 4, 1781.

Sponsored by the Plaza de Los Angeles Association, whose headquarters are in the old Avila adobe in the Paseo de Los Angeles, arrangements are being perfected under the direction of Mrs. Christine Sterling and Phil Whiting, with every effort centered upon making the fiesta as nearly a possible a replica of the celebrations of early California days and upon re-creating the spirit of gayety and camaraderie which characterized them. Historical features of the program are being planned with the utmost regard for accuracy, according to Whiting.

FOUNDING RE-ENACTED

Outstanding events will be the re-enactment of the ceremony which actually took place when the city was founded and a historical pageant, which, Whiting said, will be different from anything of its kind ever presented here.

According to historical records, Felipe De Neve, Governor of California under Spanish rule, decided to start a settlement in this vicinity and he sent to Mexico for families, offering as an inducement a plot of land for each one, a house, two horses, a cow, farm implements and other necessities. Twelve families answered the call and twelve men, twelve women and twenty-two children comprised the group that made the first census figures of Los Angeles number for "six souls."

Meanwhile the plots of land for the settlers had been marked off and De Neve had chosen a spot in the midst of a grove of cottonwoods where a clearing was made for the Plaza, which was almost the exact location of the present Plaza.

MOMENTOUS DAY

So, early on the morning of September 4, 1781, the party set out from San Gabriel Mission and walked nine miles to the chosen spot, reaching there just at sundown. After crossing the river at the site of the present Macy-street bridge they arrived at the clearing, where an altar had been erected, and there the formal founding of the city took place.

The procession as it arrives at the Plaza will open the fiesta on September 4 at sundown when sixty-three persons, representing the little band of original forty-niners, gather in the Plaza for the ceremonies. As it happened 149 years ago, De Neve, mounted and attired in the full splendor of a Spanish military and civil officer, and his escorts, will lead the procession,

The Lancer

by Harry Carr

IT WOULD be a grand idea if Graham McNamee, the world-famous radio announcer, either learned how to pronounce Spanish words like "caballero"—or else confined himself to such English words as he does know how to pronounce.

THE ENGLISH TONGUE

Listening to Edwin Schallert and Otis Skinner doing their interview over the radio the other night I was impressed with the beautiful diction of the old-time actor. In Otis Skinner's day actors had to learn the job before being turned loose on a suffering public.

A BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY

About two-thirds of the folks I know who are going on vacations are headed for the Northwest. And this is good.

One of the most interesting trips I have ever taken was along the Redwood Highway. The big trees and the lake country beyond and the Canadian Rockies, if you want to keep on going, make up a panorama which makes all other scenery in the world seem tame.

ARIZONA

That is to say, scenery of that kind. No one can ever make me change from the opinion that the most wonderful slice of the whole world is the State of Arizona. It has everything from a showman's standpoint—from prehistoric villages to the Painted Desert. Even if our friend, Mr. Hogue, doesn't think so much of the Grand Canyon.

BOOTLEG BOOZE

If all other cures fail, the young Mr. Cudahy might give up drinking altogether.

The perhaps undue emphasis that I put on the demon rum is due to the fact that I seem to have a fatal attraction for drunks. If all the inhabitants of the world were assembled in one mob, every drunk would climb over the heads of the uncounted millions until he found me and then hang on my neck to tell me maudlin and tearful stories of his wrongs.

THE GREAT EPOCH

Somebody tells me I called "The Great Meadow" the "Great Pasture." Whatever I called it, it is a great book. A motion-picture company has bought it and, with half a chance, it will be a great picture. There is no period

MORE PASTORS INDORSE FITTS

Group of Seventy-eight Gives Him Their Support

Sweeping Movement Made to Defeat Rolph

Methodist Leader Scores Anti-Saloon Action

Evidence that the ministers of Southern California feel that their one hope of defeating Mayor Rolph of San Francisco in the forthcoming gubernatorial primary election is in supporting Buron Fitts was demonstrated yesterday. Seventy-eight of the leading ministers of the Southland joined in indorsement of Fitts, it was announced at his headquarters in Los Angeles.

Rev. J. Harcourt Peck, who served for six years as superintendent of the Methodist-Episcopal Church, Fresno district, and for three years in a similar capacity in the Los Angeles district, expressed the sentiment of many ministers when he declared that the attempt of the Anti-Saloon League to cram down the throats of temperence workers an indorsement of Gov. Young reacts to that candidate's disadvantage.

CONFERENCE AFFRONTED

Dr. Peck declared that the indorsement was a direct affront to the Southern Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which advised an officer of the league against making such indorsement.

"On Friday, July 4," said Dr. Peck, "the Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church gathered in convention at Long Beach refused to join with the Anti-Saloon League in its action taken shortly thereafter. As this conference was composed of 300 ministers representing 90,000 members and 350,000 adherents, we feel that the Anti-Saloon League in disregarding our wishes has directly affronted us."

INDORSEMENTS NUMEROUS

The names of the ministers who have indorsed Fitts and the churches they represent follow:

Rev. Wilbur Davis, Trinity M.E. Church, Ramona; Rev. F. W. Farr, Pastor Calvary Baptist Church; Rev. E. E. Brown, Pacific Baptist Church; Dr. A. E. Baker, Church of the Brethren; Rev. A. V. Kimball, Second Brethren Church; Rev. John Robertson McCartney, Vermont-avenue Presbyterian Church; Rev. J. G. Kennedy, Occidental College Presbyterian Church; Rev. J. Harcourt Peck, former superintendent M.E. Church, Los Angeles district; Dr. Alexander Nardy, dean emeritus Bexley School of Theology, D.S.C.; Dr. John Dyer, Baptist City Missions; Harold E. Lollin, Redondo M.E. Church; Rev. W. E. Fry, La Verne; Rev. Harry M. McArthur, Pico Union Church, Pico.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY SHOWS STRENGTH IN POLL

An overwhelming demonstration of Fitts's strength was disclosed yesterday in results of a poll conducted during the past month in 132 precincts covering Pasadena, Altadena, San Marino and La Manda Park. At the Fitts headquarters it was announced that out of a total of 5698 expressions given in the straw vote, 4824 voters declared themselves for Fitts, 574 for Young and 300 for Rolph.

In conducting the poll, workers contacted with 12,411 voters, of which number 6713 declined to state any preference. One significant fact was uncovered when 129 Democrats announced that they had changed their registration to Republican in order to vote for Fitts.

Fitts headquarters yesterday announced receipt of a folder issued by the California Taxpayers' Protective Association in which it is charged that the State in the last year has suffered a loss in revenue of $4,784,329.66, as a result of the change made by Gov. Young in the franchise tax law covering the operation of corporations, oil companies and banks.

of the history of this country so appealing or dramatic.

In the latter days of the covered wagons there were long wars against the hostile Indians; but they were rear-guard fights, so to speak. It was only a question how long the Indians could hold out, in a battle already lost. In the early days of Kentucky and Tennessee, on the other hand, it was a question whether the white man could ever win a foothold in the wilderness.

It was the pioneer woman who won the wilderness for civilization. It is a matter of historic fact that no conquest has ever endured until the woman arrived. The wash on the line has been the conquering banner through the ages.

HINT FOR AUTHORS

Historic novels and great biographies have been written about every character in American history—except the most interesting one—Benedict Arnold.

His life is great drama—a heroic, daring soldier, the right hand of Washington, turned into a traitor by the extravagance and frivolity of a flapper wife.

I have, perhaps, a special interest in him. My remote great grandfather, seven or eight generations back, was land partner with the grandfather of Benedict Arnold.

Doctors Enter Quiz on Actress

Federal narcotic inspectors this week will interrogate two local physicians and Imogene Wilson, known on the screen as Mary Nolan, as part of an investigation of charges in affidavits of two nurses that the actress was supplied morphine without prescriptions by certain physicians.

Federal Narcotic Inspector De Spain, after consulting with U. S. Atty. McNabb, launched the investigation in co-operation with police. Miss Nolan has emphatically denied that she is addicted to the use of morphine or that she got any from the doctors. It is to determine these points that she is to be questioned.

U.S.C. Survey Discloses Spirit of Democracy in Mass Movement

Participation in community music enterprises provides relaxation from the strain and intensity of life, develops an appreciation of best forms of music, and creates a spirit of democracy and good fellowship which leads to good citizenship, according to a survey of community music activities just completed by twenty-two students in the college of music of the University of Southern California, under the direction of Alexander Stewart, professor of community music and conducting at S. C.

Data for the survey was gathered by correspondence and interviews with prominent musicians and others actively interested in community music, as well as by research work in literature on the subject.

The work of the music school settlements, established to provide musical instruction to people who can pay only a small fee, is one of the most worthy causes of a community, according to the Trojan survey, which also states that Los Angeles and San Francisco are the only cities which have music-school settlements in the western half of the United States. That the settlements have practical as well as social and cultural value, often training people to make their own living, is pointed out.

One of the most successful "sing" held in America is the Hollywood community sing which is now in its twelfth year, and has an average attendance of 800 people at its weekly meetings, the study reveals.

Various phases of community music which were subjects of research by the S. C. college of music included Christmas carols, bands, choruses, public-school music, music in institutions, music pageants, church music, music memory contests, music in industry, rural community music, music among the foreign-born, harmonica bands and community opera.

DIVORCE CASE HAS BALM SUIT SEQUEL

Mrs. Kittie Meyer, who contested with her husband a divorce suit, involving the distribution of $500,000 worth of property, was sued by Rebecca Marion yesterday, for alienating the affections of Morris A. Marion, Mrs. Marion's husband. Mrs. Marion asks $75,000 damages, claiming that the defendant induced Marion to leave his wife August 9, 1928, after twenty-seven years of married life. The Marion divorce suit has not been tried. Marion sued, asserting his wife threw a pot of hot coffee at him. Mrs. Meyer and her husband engaged in three divorce cases in local courts, before Meyer got a divorce in Mexico.

cement, hundreds of loads of dirt, sod, shrubbery and expensive equipment. Some courses employ steadily as high as twenty persons caring for the grounds. The minimum usually is five or six."

One course in Los Angeles spent $15,000 for labor and will cost in the neighborhood of $65,000 when completed. Mary Pickford will build a $50,000 course in Beverly Hills near Hamilton Drive, according to report. A $50,000 course is being planned for Pasadena, one architect reports.

Like all industries, a side line has been developed. Finance companies have sprung into existence to care for the financial end; potted plant and shrubbery dealers vie with each other; sign painters besiege the owners and tent and awning men, cement agents, fancy rock salesmen and novelty dealers are busy.

Every new course has new angles and sportier chances. Those who are designing courses say that the industry has moved out from the region of the fads and into a legitimate sport and this because of the real skill needed to play on the more modern courses.

Salvation Army to Conduct Rites

The funeral services for Commandant Hedley V. Jones of the Salvation Army will be conducted tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. at the Reynolds & Eberle funeral home, 825 East Orange Drive, Pasadena. A contingent from the Salvation Army of Los Angeles will conduct the rites in honor of a departed comrade at the grave in the Salvation Army plot in Inglewood Park Cemetery. Commandant Jones died at the San Bernardino Hospital last Thursday. He was for several years commandant of the Los Angeles Division, No. 1, and was transferred to Pasadena, where he carried on the work for some time. About six months ago, following the death of his wife, he was transferred to San Bernardino. He leaves two daughters and two sons.

BRUNER OBSEQUIES SET FOR TOMORROW

Funeral services for Thomas J. Bruner, a retired wholesale jeweler, who died in Brussels, Belgium, on July 9, last, while on a tour of Europe, will be conducted tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at the Cathedral chapel, Ninth street and La Brea avenue. Mr. Bruner was 51 years of age, and had been in business in Los Angeles for many years. He retired five years ago. In addition to the widow, Mrs. Helen Bruner, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. E. W. Shaden.

Dr. Albert A. Michelson, Famous Fellow-Physicist of Millikan, to Live in Pasadena

PASADENA, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—This community may now boast that it numbers among its permanent residents probably the two greatest living physicists in the world, Dr. Robert A. Millikan of the California Institute of Technology, and Dr. Albert A. Michelson, who retired last year as head of the department of physics at the University of Chicago.

"I shall probably spend the rest of my life in Pasadena, and Mrs. Michelson has returned to Chicago to close our home there and ship our possessions to Pasadena," Mr. Michelson asserted today.

"My doctors have advised against my spending any more winters in Chicago and I have accepted their advice. We are very fond of Southern California and are comfortable here even in warm weather."

The rest of Dr. Michelson's laboratory experiments will be performed at the Mt. Wilson Observatory Laboratory on Santa Barbara street, where a special office has been reserved for him.

Dr. Michelson's experiments with the velocity of light laid the ground work for Einstein's theories of relativity. At the present time, apparatus consisting of a mile-long vacuum tube is being completed on the Irvine ranch, near Santa Ana, where the light wizard will make a final check of the results of his former light-velocity tests. He will not start this final test until next fall, he revealed tonight. The actual experiment will require six weeks.

Both Dr. Michelson and Dr. Millikan are winners of the Nobel prize, highest honor awarded to physicists.

Although Dr. Millikan's new home is located a few blocks outside this city in San Marino, his actual work is done here, where he is chairman of the executive committee of the California Institute of Technology.

PLEDGE GIVEN BY PLUMMER

'No Compromise with Crime,' His Guiding Policy

Candidate for Sheriff Has Remarkable Record

Exploits on Police Force Bring Him Fame

On January 19, 1909, Clyde Plummer was appointed a patrolman on the Los Angeles Police Department and now, twenty-one years later, at 46 years of age he seeks election to the office of Sheriff of Los Angeles county.

Gray haired and blue eyed, standing more than six feet, and weighing some 200 pounds, Plummer is running for office on a platform as simple and direct as were his methods while a member of the police department.

"I will observe the law and will demand its observance from others," is the keynote he has sounded.

"If I am elected Sheriff of Los Angeles county, I will take office unhampered by any person connected with any 'racket' criminal or civil."

NO QUARTER TO BE GIVEN

"No man can fulfill the promise to free Los Angeles county of all crime, but if I am elected sheriff I can and will refuse to look upon organized crime with tolerance and indifference; it will be impossible for the habitual criminal to operate in safety.

"I shall not compromise with racketeers or any other element working against the public good.

"I shall co-operate fully with the Police Department and the District Attorney's office in an endeavor to break up organized crime in this county; to apprehend and vigorously prosecute the criminal and to enforce the law."

Plummer was born in Pawnee City, Neb., and came to Los Angeles in 1902. He is married and has two boys, one 13 and the other 9. He lives with his family at 3131 Waverly Drive and is a member of the Gospel Tabernacle at Eighteenth street and Grand avenue.

HIS POLICE RECORD

Joining the local police department in 1909 Plummer was promoted to sergeant on July 5, 1911. Again on April 22, 1918 Plummer was promoted to the grade of lieutenant and reached the rank of captain on August 1, 1921.

On January 4, 1927, Plummer was elevated to the grade of deputy Chief of Police and on February 1, 1929, retired from the police department to become chief of the District Attorney's liquor-enforcement bureau. He resigned from the county service on June 1, 1930 to become a candidate for Sheriff.

During his many years on the police department Plummer served as a sergeant at Lincoln Heights division and central division, as a lieutenant at Lincoln Heights division and San Pedro division, as a captain at San Pedro division and in the vice division in command of the enforcement of all vice and liquor laws, as deputy Chief of Police in command of the traffic division, personnel bureau and the vice division.

FOUGHT RACKETEERS

For almost five months during 1926 Plummer was drafted by the Federal government to combat organized racketeering growing out of liquor running and in 1927 he represented Los Angeles at the international convention of Police Chiefs at Windsor, Can.

Records of the District Attorney's office show that during his year as chief of the liquor bureau Plummer and his men made 1649 arrests and obtained 1187 convictions with only 202 dismissals. From the convictions the records show $144,291 collected in fines and a grand total of 47,899 days in jail handed out in sentences.

In 1914 while a sergeant Plummer wounded and captured Dave Gold, perhaps the most cunning burglar ever to operate in the city and ended a police search which had gone on for more than a month.

From a district map of his division Plummer figured out where the night prowler would strike next and concealed himself in that neighborhood. During the night the burglar appeared, engaged in a running fight with the officer, and was captured.

HANDLED I.W.W. STRIKE

It was during May, 1923, while in command of the San Pedro division that Capt. Plummer probably accomplished his most outstanding bit of police work when he handled the I.W.W. marine strike without a single injury to the strikers or police officers and with no property damage to the harbor district or the ships.

At the time of the Santa Barbara earthquake Plummer took command of a detail of 120 police officers, rushed them by special train to the stricken district and for five days maintained order in the ruined city.

For his work during the I.W.W. strike Plummer was presented with a gold watch by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

RECORD CLEAN

Standing almost in a class by himself, Plummer appears on the police records as one of the few men who with twenty years of service behind him has no record of ever having been named in a lawsuit for damages and has never been charged with striking a prisoner.

An outstanding piece of police work where his quick wit and gentle handling of a dangerous problem appears is in the official records of the San Pedro division. He prevented a riot of scores of Hindus on a Japanese ship who had not been permitted to land. With only two officers behind him, Plummer, the records show, prevented the threatened riot and assisted in getting the ship under way for Mexican waters without a blow being struck even after the Hindu passengers had seized control, for a time, of the vessel.

PRAISED BY VOLLMER

"Clyde Plummer is a man of rare moral courage and a public executive of exceptional ability.

"His honesty, his sobriety, his intelligence and his character mark him as an outstanding police executive capable of undertaking any type of work which requires highly desirable qualities. He has the courage of his convictions.

"I take pleasure in recommending this splendid and rare official."

This is what August Vollmer, former Chief of Police of this city and now of Berkeley, one of the best-known criminologists in the nation, wrote to Plummer when he heard that the former officer was a candidate for Sheriff.

Plummer does not drink liquor in any form and does not smoke.

FIESTA REPLICA OF PUEBLO DAYS

closely followed by two priests from San Gabriel, Indian boy acolytes bearing incense and holy water, standard bearers with the richly embroidered banner of Spain, a corporal carrying the Holy Cross, a priest bearing an image of Our Lady of the Angels, the forty-six settlers and a number of soldiers.

A brief religious ceremony, following as closely as possible the original service, will offer the one touch of solemnity to the occasion before Mayor Porter officially turns the city over to participation in the fiesta.

CARNIVAL DAY

Thereafter during the evening plans have been made to transform the entire Plaza and the Paseo into a scene of carnival and merrymaking. There will be a band of Mexican musicians, strolling players, stages erected here and there for feature acts of Mexican and early California character, a bandit's hide-out, Punch and Judy shows, booths containing Mexican wares of all kinds, fortune tellers and miniature bull fights.

A special feature will be a street dance at which all participants will be expected to appear in costumes of the period and prizes will be awarded to the lady and gentleman exhibiting the best ones.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m. on September 5, the historical pageant will start its march through the Paseo and around the Plaza. This will cover the period from the time the first white man came to California to the time of the American settlement and will present a living picture of the people, the life and outstanding incidents connected with the history of Los Angeles during those early years.

RED-MAN TIMES

Following a mounted police guard and an Indian drum band, the first division of the parade will be marshaled by an Indian chief, after which will come two medicine men, Indian braves, an entire Indian village on the move and finally a float showing an Indian ceremonial in progress.

The next period will be that of the early Spanish explorers, depicting Juan Bautista de Anza, the first white man to come here, Father Garcias, Don Gaspar de Portola, Cabrillo and his sailors, Father Crespi and Father Junipero Serra.

In natural sequence the important figures of the Bear Flag period will follow, including Kit Carson, Commodore Stockton and his soldiers, Fremont, Kearney and others. There will even be a group of the famous bandits of the time and Bouchard and his pirates, who invaded San Juan Capistrano, will be necessary to complete the accuracy of the picture.

FORTYNINERS, TOO

The covered-wagon period with its miners and pioneering families will follow along, the pony express will be represented, there will be vaqueros, stage coaches, buggies, Concord wagons and surreys and, according to Whiting, not one automobile will appear in the entire procession.

At intervals in the parade, arranged in their proper sequence, floats built on wagons and drawn by oxen, mules or horses will present the missions, scenes of sheep shearing and other typical phases of the life of the various periods and the final float in the procession will show an entire fiesta in progress.

After the pageant the remainder of the evening will again be devoted to street dancing and a repetition of the entertainment of the preceding day.

Sponsors of the fiesta hope to create sufficient enthusiasm for the preservation of these early-day festivals that they will become annual affairs at each anniversary of the founding of the city. For the celebration this year they would like to have everyone interested in Mexican and early California traditions, arts and entertainment co-operate with them toward the success of the undertaking.

ORDINANCE ADOPTED

The ordinance of intention for the improvement of Westwood Boulevard from Santa Monica Boulevard to Pico Boulevard has been adopted by the City Council. It was set for the hearing of protests September 8.

SCHOOL BOARD CHANGE FOUGHT

Former Member Warns Plan Fraught with Evil

Councilmen Approached with Letter of Protest

Ward System Breeds Graft and Scandal, He Says

Warning that the integrity and usefulness of Los Angeles' school system are threatened has been placed before the City Council which meets tomorrow to consider the proposal to place on the November ballot a plan to restore the long-discarded ward system of electing members of the Board of Education.

The warning came from Herman W. Frank, for ten years a member of the board, who has written a letter to every member of the Council, urging them to vote against the proposal as threatening to introduce the danger of bribery, extortion, wire pulling, graft and sectionalism of the worst type into the educational system of the city.

SCANDALS OF PAST

Mr. Frank laid particular stress on the fact that when the ward system of electing the school board formerly was in use in Los Angeles such scandals developed that many unprincipled politicians were forced to flee the city.

Specifically, the proposal up for consideration by the City Council tomorrow is that the present system of electing seven members to the Board of Education at large be supplanted by the election of fifteen members by wards, each member representing one ward.

"There is no need for a change in the present school law in reference to the election of our City School Board," is the opening of the letter Mr. Frank has sent to each Councilman.

"Throughout all the larger cities of the United States the ward system has been tried and has been abandoned, thoroughly discredited.

EVIL EFFECTS

"Experience has shown that ward-elected members are extravagant and inefficient; that they indulge in excessive "wire pulling" and trading to make a showing for their respective wards.

"That each feels he must work first, last and all the time for his particular section, obtaining favors from other members whether needed or not, with resulting waste of public funds.

ASSOCIATION OPPOSES VOTE ON PROPOSAL

The Presidents' Civic Association has voiced unanimous disapproval of the placing on the ballot a proposition for the election of the Board of Education by districts, pointing out that the Board of Education is an administrative rather than a legislative body, and the present system is more democratic. A letter has been sent to the City Council to that effect.

Ballot Was Cast for Young Only

Rev. W. Earle Smith, director of religious education for the Northern Baptist Church, San Francisco, declares in a telegram to A. H. Briggs, superintendent of the California Anti-Saloon League, that his vote was cast for Gov. Young only in the recent conference of the league to choose between Young and Fitts for the league's indorsement.

In last Monday's Times Dr. Smith's name was included in a list of fifteen ministers indorsing Fitts and quoting him as desiring that the league should indorse both candidates. Dr. Smith, a member of the league board, says that this is not the fact.

AFTER-EFFECTS IN PLAGUE TOLD

...nfantile Paralysis 'Recovery' Frequently Misleading

Care Necessary to Guard Against Deformities

...abilities in Muscles Often Remain Undetected

BY MILTON H. BERRY

(This is the fourth and concluding article of a series appearing weekly, written for The Times by Mr. Berry, of 2308 Hillcrest avenue, Hollywood, on the prevention of infantile paralysis and the treatment of children during and after attacks of the disease. Mr. Berry has handled some 2000 such cases of after-treatment and has become internationally known for his success in apparently hopeless cases of paralysis by his method of "muscle re-education," which is in no way related to medical or surgical treatment.)

The apparent recoveries from infantile paralysis do not always result in recoveries. The reason is simple when the action of muscles is considered. The upper body weight, consisting of the head, shoulders, chest and back, and all of the internal organs comprise more than half the weight of the entire body, and is supported off the pelvis by the strength of the muscles in the small of the back and through the abdomen. All of these muscles and supplementary muscles must be used in strength to support the upper body weight equally off the pelvis.

As a result of the disease, one or more qualities in these muscles take place, and unless detected in the beginning the inequality will become broadened, and the body will be affected. It is this condition that has brought about deformed bodies through spinal curvature in the year following the attack.

ADVICE TO STRICKEN

It is because of this danger that I advise all who have been stricken, and those who may be stricken, to attend to the sitting and standing position gradually. When capable of sitting to a full position, the back should be closely observed for the slightest sagging. This can be detected by comparing the height of the shoulders, also the breast bone when sitting or standing. If one is higher than the other when sitting or standing, it is positive evidence that certain muscles on one side of the back have become weaker than on the other side. If this condition is discovered, the sitting or standing posture should be discontinued until a proper support has been applied to the body to support the weak side.

WHEN WALKING BEGINS

Another important stage is when the walking begins. If one leg is affected more than the other—in which case the body-weight would favor the weak leg—a pair of crutches should be used, placing the body weight on the crutches instead of the legs, and gradually day to day as the legs are strengthened and equalized, more weight can be placed upon them until on the crutches, until such time as the whole body-weight alone is equally being placed on each leg while in locomotion. But, on the other hand, some part or parts of either leg show a weakness, the crutches should be used to the fullest extent until correction and support can be had for the same.

The quicker one can become upright in posture and use crutches entirely, the quicker the re-establishment of circulation, and this is a factor of great significance, as the dreaded wasting of muscles following an attack of infantile paralysis is due largely to retarded circulation brought about by long periods of sitting.

In my several articles on the subject of preventing deformities following the acute attack of infantile paralysis, I have referred to complete muscle rest immediately following the acute attack, how to begin to use the muscles by volitional exercises, and in this, the concluding article, the importance of greatest care in obtaining the sitting and standing position, as well as the care which should be observed when walking. All of this advice has been precautionary to prevent deformities which so usually follow this dreaded disease.

Sir Colin Mackenzie, M.D., F.R.S.C.-F.R.S., also professor of anatomy in some of the largest medical schools of England, after an investigation of ten years, is the author of a book entitled, "Action of Muscles and Muscle Re-education," which confirms what I have been doing for the past thirty years in muscle re-education applied to the after-effects caused by this dreaded malady. It is impossible for any man to understand the action of muscles and apply muscle re-education correctly on these paralyzed victims, without first having experience with the live, elastic muscles of a normal person—through the sense of touch.

Cupid Tackles Football Player

Miss Jean Darlen Smith and Frank W. Anthony

BEAUTY AND ATHLETE TO BE MARRIED

Former Florida Queen and One-time Tackle for U.S.C. Obtain License

Miss Jean Darlen Smith, 20, has won two beauty contests, and Frank W. Anthony, 22, has won some football games, so the two got together, and visited the marriage license bureau yesterday, with the idea of winning some marital happiness.

Anthony, former right tackle for U.S.C., will coach a football team at Compton next autumn. Miss Smith, daughter of Charles J. Smith, 60 Rose avenue, Venice, won a Florida contest some time ago, and more recently a local photographic contest. Anthony is the son of Claire Webster Anthony of New York.

The marriage will take place the 22nd inst., at 8 p.m.

Knights Stress Americanism

"Americanism" will be the keynote of the inaugural banquet which the Knights of Columbus will give Saturday to their newly elected State deputy of California, Henry W. McGowan, former District Attorney of Glenn county, now residing in Willows. Among those who have been invited to speak at the banquet are Clarence L. Kincaid, State commander of the American Legion; Leo V. Youngworth, Past Imperial Potentate of the Shrine; Mayor Porter, Joe Scott and Mr. McGowan.

The committee in charge of the plans for the banquet are Bernard Hiemenz, chairman; Clement D. Nye, Grand Knight of the Los Angeles council, No. 621; Edward C. Purpus, Dr. John A. Schwamm and Benno M. Brink, president of the Southern California chapter, which includes more than thirty councils. The entertainment is in charge of the Hollywood council, of which Grand Knight Tom O'Donnell is president.

REDS' CASES HELD UP FOR MORE DATA

Deputy City Prosecutor Predicts Dismissals in Plaza Row Actions

Twenty-four Communists, arrested during the Red demonstrations on North Main street Friday evening, appeared in Municipal Court yesterday for arraignment, but were ordered to return tomorrow morning because complaints against them had not been filed. All are at liberty on bail.

Deputy City Prosecutor McDonald said yesterday that evidence against some of the eleven women and thirteen men arrested is not sufficient and that several will be released without trial. Charges of battery, refusing to leave the scene of a riot, and blocking the sidewalks were made against them by the police. The demonstration, which consisted of little more than efforts to raise Red flags and Communist placards, was intended as a protest against "imperialist wars," on the sixteenth anniversary of Russia's entrance into the war.

AUTHOR OF RED POEMS HELD ON FEDERAL CHARGE

Accused of illegally entering the United States and of Communist activities, Robert Parsons, who edited "An Anthology of Revolutionary Poetry," yesterday was held in the County Jail here pending a hearing on deportation. He was arrested July 24, last, at Yuma, by Federal immigration inspectors, and later transferred to the El Centro County Jail. Yesterday he was placed in the County Jail and is being held under bail of $1000, pending the hearing, which will be given Tuesday or Wednesday by Immigration Inspector Del Guercio.

It is charged that Parsons, who edited the compilation of poems under the name of Marcus Graham, entered the United States illegally several years ago from Canada, of which he is a subject; that he was in possession of his book, said to contain Red literature; that he admits being a Communist, and that recently he left the United States and went to Juarez, Mex., for two hours. It is probably on the latter charge that the deportation will mostly hinge.

SEPARATING COUPLE ARRANGE ALIMONY

D. D. Longuevan yesterday brought suit for divorce against his wife, Helga, charging desertion.

R. Lee Heath, who is Longuevan's attorney, said his client and his wife have arranged a property settlement, and that Longuevan is to make his wife a cash payment of $1000 and give her $50 a month until May 25, 1931.

HUGE POLISH PICNIC PLANNED FOR TODAY

More than 500 members of the Polish-American Citizens' Club of Los Angeles today are expected to meet at a picnic to be held in Oak Glen Park, according to an announcement made by officials at the club headquarters, Forty-eighth street and Avalon Boulevard. The picnic will be open to the public as well as members, according to Fred Wolf, who is assisting in arranging for the event.

"THREAT" WITNESS SOUGHT

State Renews Efforts to Obtain Testimony of Milwaukee Woman in Oesterreich Murder Case

Renewed efforts to obtain testimony considered vital in the trial of Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich for the murder of her husband, which opens in Superior Judge Hardy's court tomorrow, James P. Costello, deputy District Attorney in charge of the case, yesterday telegraphed Mrs. Alvie Judkins of Milwaukee that Los Angeles county will pay expenses for herself, her husband and their attorney to come to Los Angeles for the trial.

Costello recently interviewed Mrs. Judkins in Milwaukee and obtained her consent to appear as a witness. Later, however, Mrs. Judkins wrote that she had received an anonymous threatening letter and her attorney advised against her coming to the trial as a witness.

COMPROMISE HOPED

Subsequent negotiations resulted in the woman demanding that her husband and attorney be given transportation to Los Angeles if she were to appear as a witness, according to Costello. This request was denied until the last moment, in hope that a compromise might be made, the prosecutor stated.

Mrs. Judkins is expected to testify concerning certain marital disagreements between the Oesterreichs when they lived in Milwaukee and a veiled threat she is once asserted to have heard Mrs. Oesterreich make against her husband.

SANHUBER IN CASE

When the trial opens, Otto Sanhuber, mysterious attic man of the Oesterreich household, is expected to be one of the State's most important witnesses. He was convicted of manslaughter for the fatal shooting of Fred Oesterreich on the night of August 22, 1922, but was released from custody because the crime of manslaughter was outlawed.

The Oesterreich murder remained an unsolved case in police files for eight years until last April when Herman Shapiro, formerly Mrs. Oesterreich's attorney, told police of the existence of secret rooms in the Oesterreich homes and of the existence of Sanhuber.

HIDDEN ROOMS FOUND

Investigation resulted in discovery of the rooms and the arrest of Sanhuber, who then made a statement admitting that he had lived in secret rooms in the Oesterreichs' homes for ten years and had fired the fatal shots because he feared the man was about to seriously injure his wife. He completely exonerated Mrs. Oesterreich of blame for the shooting.

At his trial, however, Sanhuber repudiated his confession stating that he was prompted to make the statement by Shapiro, who held him under a hypnotic influence.

Mrs. Oesterreich was arrested and charged with her husband's murder several months after the shooting when it was discovered that she had given a pistol to Roy Klumb, a motion-picture director, to destroy. At that time the woman declared she was innocent but sought to destroy the weapon to avoid unjust suspicion.

The case was later dismissed by Dist.-Atty. Keyes for lack of evidence.

BOY KILLED IN RAID BY POLICEMEN

Officer Held After Fatal Shooting of Negro in Break-up of Dice Game

Following the fatal shooting of William Teeams, 17-year-old Negro, at Watts last night, Luther R. Weyant, 29, six years on the local police force, was booked on suspicion of manslaughter. The shooting of the youth occured at Willmington Boulevard and One Hundred and Sixteenth street, when police were called to break up a dice game in progress in a lot at the rear of a pool hall. Weyant claims that Teeams threw a knife at him and then ran. The shooting followed.

At the Watts station last night many Negroes gathered about the place. Reserve officers were sent in from the Seventy-seven-street station to forestall trouble. At Central Station twenty Negro youths were questioned regarding the affair and all declared that no knife was thrown. Search of the vicinity failed to reveal the knife. Officer Tower, who was with Weyant, declared that he saw a missle come through the air that resembled a knife.

Weyant told Detective Lieutenant Fikas of the homicide squad that he shot in self-defense.

Weyant fired one shot. A bullet struck Teeams in the back of the head. He died before an ambulance arrived.

TRAFFIC DANGER CITED

Councilman Williams yesterday brought to the attention of the City Council that a dangerous traffic situation exists at the intersection of Franklin and Normandie avenues.

FOREIGN TRAVEL SLUMPS

Work of All-Year Club, However, Keeps Tourist Flow to California Steady

That New York and Europe are suffering from the lack of vacation tourists this summer was evidenced in the report on the situation received yesterday by the All-Year Club, Southern California's national tourist advertising organization, and announced by John B. Browne, chairman of the advertising committee.

"Direct communications from Paris, Cherbourg and New York advise that the usual heavy influx of American summer tourists is prominent by its absence," said Chairman Browne yesterday.

PARIS SHOPS IDLE

"Paris shops have not been so idle or hotels so desolated in many years. Paris, of all continental cities, is almost wholly dependent upon tourists for its financial well-being.

"There are fewer tourists in New York this summer than there have been for several years.

"Early last month New York, with its population of 6,956,792, sponsored an aggressive campaign for tourist business in an effort to offset the summer slump.

CALIFORNIA HOLDS UP

"It is interesting to review the facts concerning Southern California's tourist business today compared with its tourist patronage nine years ago when the All-Year Club started. Then many regarded tourist business as more or less of a 'fair-weather' enterprise that could not be relied upon during periods of subnormal trade.

"With 22.6 per cent more motor tourists from other States arriving in California last month compared with June, 1929, the tourist business is meeting the test. It ranks today as Southern California's third largest source of primary income.

"Instead of allowing our tourist selling campaigns to lag, the All-Year Club made an even more aggressive bid for summer visitors in our spring advertising in the East and Middle West this year.

"As a result our headquarters reports daily evidences of vacationists now here from other States who had not contemplated coming this year."

Chiropractors will Discuss New Treatment

Progress in treatment of patients, and particularly in elimination of pain during diagnosis and curative processes was announced yesterday as being an important topic for discussion at the National Progressive Chiropractic Association's annual convention, the 17th to 24th inst., in the Los Angeles College of Chiropractic.

New anesthetics are being evolved by chemists and a better understanding of the nervous system of the body is being attained, according to Dr. Charles H. Wood, convention chairman, which, in time, will eliminate almost all suffering in the doctor's office.

One thousand delegates from all States are expected for the conference, it was said, a highlight of which will be the annual "perfect-back contest," with fifty girls in the finals on the 21st inst.

Today's Bible Text

Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief.—Heb. iv:11.

BOOK PRICES DOWN

Books that have been selling for $2.50 or more are now going for $1 flat. At that there is a suspicion that they are bringing more than they are worth.

RUBBER NECKING

A French designer is seeking to introduce rubber neckties in fancy patterns. Possibly the idea is that with everybody gazing skyward the proper system is rubber neckties for rubber-necks.

DRUMSTICKS

Charles Raub of Santa Rosa, Cal., has a chicken with four legs—two of them growing on the back. Possibly trying to accommodate the demand! It will also have the advantage of being able to scratch its own back.

SMALL STUFF

Truman Newberry of Michigan lost his seat in the Senate because something like $200,000 was spent in his behalf in the campaign. He would seem like a piker in the face of some of the performances that have been going on since his departure.

ONE TOUCH OF NATURE

The threatened extermination of five valuable pets to carry out the whim, or belief, of a woman in her last moments, has aroused the sympathies of millions of people. But just let one of those dogs growl at night or tear up a garden and see how quickly the feelings of some of us would change.

"PIN-MONEY" WORKERS

There is a movement to keep married women out of public jobs in cases where their husbands earn enough to support the family. There would not only be less unemployment, but fewer divorces, according to the backers of the plan. And we might have a return to the old-fashioned home life for which America was famous.

RUNAWAY RUSSIANS

Recently some Russians buried themselves in the coal of the bunkers of a ship to escape from their loved soviet land. The propaganda of special envoys sent to inoculate the United States with their Red virus sours under these reports and fails to propagate. We may have our Jingo Johnsons and other abuses in our government; but even then we are hardly ready to exchange with Czar Stalin.

SEEING AMERICA SECOND

While a large number of people see America second; yet an increasing number hones its appetite for scenery on the flint peaks of the Sierra Nevadas and the Rockies.

Americans spend $4,000,000,000 a year upon vacations. Their families to the number of 13,315,727 are at it annually. Once deprived by the high rates of the railroads, they now dump their stuff into the old car and strike out for the wide, open spaces.

The Pacific Coast may lack catacombs where human beings burrowed into the dirt like rats to live; it may not have a tumbled-down Coliseum where gladiators let each other's blood; it may not have an Acropolis on a hill in any Athens; it may be without Pyramids for the bones of any ancient Pharaohs. We have no fight to wage with the dead.

California offers possibilities no other country possesses. We have trees that are older than the ruins of other oldest civilizations. Indeed, these trees are yet green and growing. They make people crane their necks into the skies, instead of poking their noses into the cellars.

Our mountains are among the youngest on the globe and still throbbing with life. Lassen is a living volcano. The High Sierras near Bishop and back of Yosemite have more than half-a-hundred peaks over 12,000 feet high. Our ocean is the biggest on the globe and feels under no necessity to roar and snort around to attract attention. Like most beings conscious of power, it is quiet. If you want unfinished patches of land, where else can you find deserts so close to civilization?

The East may be a good place to go and confess your sins at the end of the day; but the West is a wonderful place to wake up in the morning.

RELIGION IN AMERICA

Church affiliations are a good index of the general moral standing of a nation. They cannot in themselves cover the whole field of religious thought since numberless men and women, imbued with the spirit of devotion to spiritual ideals and attendants at church services, are not registered adherents of any definite religious denomination. Allowing for the difficulty encountered in an enumeration of this kind, Americans have every reason to congratulate themselves on the showings made in the last Federal census of religious bodies, taken in 1926, the figures of which have been recently published.

The general findings of this Federal census are as gratifying as they are surprising, in view of the widely held supposition that in modern America, even among professed believers, the trend is away from organized worship to more independence of thought. Fifty-five of every 100 persons in the nation over 12 years of age are members of churches, fifty-two in the rural districts and fifty-eight in the urban. So much loose talk has been indulged in about the wickedness of the city in contrast to the more virtuous life of the country, that this proportion must cause a revision of some of our too-hastily reached conclusions.

In the whole United States, the census enumerators find that sixty-two of every 100 church members are Protestants and thirty-eight are Catholics, Jews or other non-Protestants. Of Protestant denominations the Baptists head the list, closely followed by the Methodists. Then in the order named come Lutherans, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Disciples, Congregationalists, Mormons, Christian Scientists, Unitarians, Quakers, with 100,000 members of the Salvation Army at the end of the list. There are 18,605,000 Catholics in the count and 4,080,000 Jews by estimate in those communities with synagogues.

The figures are admittedly for actual membership in churches, not total number of adherents. Understanding of "membership" varies widely in different denominations. It is safe to assume that the number of people interested and participating in the religious life of America exceeds considerably the results obtained in this Federal census.

Other interesting facts disclosed are also full of encouragement for those who rate the spiritual and moral forces of their country more vital to its future development than the agencies which are concerned entirely with its physical and material welfare; perhaps this were better expressed by saying those who perceive that the best can only be reached when these work harmoniously. Church progress and civic progress are keeping remarkably close together.

There are altogether 212 separate religious denominations in the United States. They support 232,000 churches, which may be compared with 255,000 public schools supported by the state, so that religion and education, it may be seen, are not far apart. Similarly the number of children in the Sunday-schools of the United States is only 15 per cent less than the total number of children in the public elementary and high schools. When so large a proportion of the children receiving a secular education are also being instructed in their religious responsibilities, we appreciate better our faith that this republic stands upon a firm foundation.

As was to be expected the churches have a stronger hold upon women than upon men. Out of every hundred church members over the age of 12, sixty-two are females and forty-eight are males. Yet here again the census points to a better showing for men than might have been anticipated from a casual view of a Sunday-morning attendance at any large city church. Possibly between church attendance and church membership the figures might show a bigger discrepancy yet the 48 per cent of men belonging to religious organizations may be counted upon as loyal supporters of religious standards in American life.

Devotion to church and its close concomitant, devotion to home, are not dying out on American soil whatever the evidence may be of changing moods and customs in other respects. Since 1850 Protestant church membership has increased faster than population while its influence has been even more pronounced. Both inside and outside of the churches religious thought has been stimulated by scientific discovery and the skepticism of Huxley, Spencer and early Victorian agnostics has given place to a determination to know all there is to know. Seekers after more knowledge are probing into the old faiths, not rejecting them, but interpreting them anew in the light of what science is revealing.

American thought is undergoing many changes, the end of which is still obscure; but it is not away from religion as many secular critics are predicting. The census of the churches tells a different story.

NOT WORTH WHILE

Four years ago a young woman rode in triumph along Broadway while crowds cheered and ticker tape filled the air. New York welcomed home another world champion. Headline stories in hundreds of newspapers acclaimed Gertrude Ederle, the first girl to swim the English Channel.

Let those who envied her her sudden rise to fame ponder well the price she paid for the glory of one day. Rumored recipient of golden offers which never materialized; her feat quickly duplicated and as quickly forgotten; the only permanent effect, not the prizes promised by man, but the penalty exacted by nature—the loss of the precious gift of hearing.

Is it any wonder that the heroine of 1926, handicapped at the threshold of life in the fight she must wage for many years just to keep up with the procession, said of those fourteen hours spent in the English Channel, "It wasn't worth while"?

Yet Gertrude Ederle contributed her share—and more than her share—to the sum of human achievements. She set an example to her sex that has done much to give us the swift and strong and sure athletic American girl of today. The race absorbs the gain—the loss falls on the individual. The leader, overtaken by the crowd, soon becomes an "also ran."

The scramble to get ahead of the procession, be it only for a minute, be the reward a feather, a soap bubble, goes bravely on. Better the pace that kills than the sloth that paralyzes. The Ederles still live in the Bronx; Gertrude teaches swimming in a boardwalk pool at Rye; her father still runs a small provision store. But it makes no difference either to the big frogs or to the little fry.

All that counts is the determination to carry on. And the champion who passed out of the picture four years ago is still doing so. The story of Gertrude Ederle points a lesson, but not of discouragement. It says, fight for the crown, remembering this, however, that the price of victory will be heavier than the price of defeat. And after wearing the crown for a little day—when the bays crumble and the laurels fade, be prepared to make the open-souled confession, "It wasn't worth while."

IT TAKES MONEY

If anyone thinks this isn't the wonder county of America let him ask the Supervisors. They know. Also they are aware that a marvelous county cannot be maintained on bread and water. It takes money—lots of it—to preserve our prestige before the world. That is why their budget for the year amounts to the impressive total of $62,729,789. An individual might have trouble in spending this sum, but the collective Supervisors can spread it like dust. This sum is an increase of $4,841,147 above last year's expenditures, but seems to be warranted by the ferocious growth we are enjoying. However, the budget is likely to be pared some before it is finally adopted.

THE TALKIES

David Belasco sneers at the squawkies and insists that within a few years they will be in the discard. He can see some excuse for the movies, but none for the talkies. Others have said much the same thing, but the producers continue to go ahead with ambitious plans for talking pictures.

The LEE SIDE O' LA
BY Lee Shippey

Personal Glimpses of Famous Southlanders

EVERYONE who reads the comic weeklies or has read them during the last twenty years knows the name and work of Don Herold, but Don lives so quietly at his home at 810 South Lucerne Boulevard that very few of us know the man, and doubtless there are thousands of Angelenos who follow his work who do not know he lives here. For, except for his advertising column, which runs in The Times once a week, all of Herold's work is published in eastern magazines — Life, The New Yorker, College Humor, Judge and the humor departments of general magazines. He also is the author of five books, the latest of which, "Strange Bedfellows," has been out only a few weeks.

Both as writer and as artist—or as cartoonist—Herold's humor is original and surprising—that is, full of the surprise element. As when he writes: "My father was an Elk, so I came naturally by my love of the great outdoors."

No Bitter Upward Struggle

Herold was born in Bloomfield, Ind., where he used to hang around the shop of the village sign painter to study art. He came to Los Angeles before he was out of college, and worked for a year on a local newspaper. Then he returned to Indiana, finished college and took up advertising work, now and then sending away one of his cleverest drawings or illustrated skits to some New York magazine. To his surprise, they didn't come back. He had schooled himself to the idea that one had to suffer many disappointments before one could hope to "crash" the front-rank magazines. But he crashed them immediately, and after a year or so of that success he felt that New York must be crying for him, and hadn't the heart to deny it any longer.

And New York came pretty close to fulfilling his expectations. When he sent a drawing or humorous skit to one of the leading humorous magazines he could nearly always mark it down in his little book as sold, without waiting to hear from the editor. A Brooklyn newspaper engaged him as cartoonist and the George Matthew Adams syndicate marketed his humorous drawings regularly to a string of seventy-five important newspapers. But he couldn't confine himself to one set of characters, working serially through adventures and misadventures. Too much of the same thing bored him, and he couldn't imagine a public which wouldn't be bored by it, too. He liked to do one kind of work one day, an entirely different kind the next, according to his mood. He couldn't go in for factory production.

Herold, the Outdoor Man

"Strange Bedfellows" really is a humorous autobiography, with a lot of other things thrown in. Herold is not the robust type and one has to drag him away from his books and his work. But he devotes one chapter to his career as an outdoor man. "Though I was born in 1889," he writes, seriously, "it was not until 1905 that my parents first took me out of the house." They thought fresh air and sunshine might benefit him, he explains, but had his interests so at heart that they would do nothing without first consulting a newspaper doctor in Indianapolis, their nearest big city, and it took the doctor the rest of the time to get around to publishing his answer. Then the answer was: "Take him outdoors and see if it kills him. Don't do this, however, without first consulting your local physician."

So his parents took him for a walk on May 17, 1905, and every few years after that he did something else athletic. It was that persistence, he confides, which made him what he is today. "Anybody," he asserts, "can grow muscles and a love of trees."

The other evening, to show how he keeps it up, Don said to his eldest daughter: "Doris, let's go out in our baby limousine to a child-size golf course and expose ourselves to infantile paralysis."

The Joys of Sickness

"Some of the pleasantest, dreamiest, most profitable days of my life were spent sick in bed," he writes. "I have unfortunately been well most of the time and there are very few of those dull days which stand out in my memory. It is the days when I have been sick which shine like jewels on the dreary background of my past."

Yet it would hardly pay doctors to keep Don's new book on their waiting-room tables—too many patients would laugh themselves well over it. It is the sort of book one may open anywhere, and there are a good many chuckles on every page. Such chapters as "Why I Took Up Worry" and "How I Became a Bridge-Hater" make five minutes pass like one. Yet the chapter about worry will come as near curing you of the worry habit as anything can—though, of course, if you're really a worry addict nothing can cure you. Anyway, if your doctor doesn't have Don's latest on his table, it may be because he's afraid of the competition. And though he treats life as a burlesque, he comes to the conclusion that "after this life, nothing will probably seem like heaven."

The Advantage of Being Oneself

Though he lives very quietly at home with his wife and two daughters, and though he is one of the quietest men in the party when he does go out, Herold is joyously welcomed when he gets together with any crowd of his fellow-craftsmen here or when he drops in on the Players in New York or any other club of the sort anywhere in the country. For he is one funny man who never strives to be funny and never seeks the limelight. He is so genuinely original, so peculiarly himself in all his conversational points of view, that the utter unexpectedness of some, to him, perfectly natural comment makes everyone in hearing burst out laughing. In a world in which most of us rely on funny things we have heard or read to be entertaining, Herold is entertaining because he is just Don Herold. And you certainly don't meet men like that every year.

WHAT OTHERS THINK ABOUT IT

THE CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION SPASM

[Detroit Free Press]

That cheerful aggregation of Bolshevist petters, the American Civil Liberties Union, has become all stirred up by Mr. Root's suggestion that the country acquire a Federal police force to protect it against illegal activities by Communists. "This silly and dangerous business of persecuting people for their opinions is contrary to American tradition," it cries in a statement. "If those who are so intent on saving our institutions would help make our institutions sound enough to be safe from attack, they would be doing the country a better service. They can't put down unrest by making the now legal Communist party an outlaw."

The talk about "persecuting persons for their opinions" is silly old stuff, and unless their mental reactions have gone glimmering, the members of the Civil Liberties Union know as well as anybody else that neither in the mind of Mr. Root nor of any other responsible American citizen is there a desire to curtail free thought or to stop free action as long as the latter is not criminal.

But there is, in Article IV of the Federal Constitution, a provision that "The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government and shall protect each of them . . . against domestic violence." The national government is bound to do this; but in the face of a program of insidious incitement to sedition and insurrection, it finds itself handicapped by the absence of a police force which will place it in a position to keep the peace and check criminal agitation as a municipality or a State performs that work by the use of police bodies. If the Civil Liberties Union thinks it is all right to let Red agents from Moscow go ahead and incite revolutionary movements and engineer violent programs and outbreaks as they please without check or hindrance, why doesn't it say so?

HIGH TIME

[Philadelphia Inquirer]

Judging from the national origin of a lot of the cowardly murderous hoodlums in this country, who belch machine-gun blazes at unarmed victims, our melting pot should be turned into a frying pan.

THE WEEK IN POLITICS

BY KYLE D. PALMER

If any question existed a week ago as to which candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor is thought by his opponents to be ahead of the field, the developments of the week have removed the doubt. Buron Fitts of Los Angeles, by all ordinary and extraordinary political indications, is the leading—and hence the most attacked—contender.

Mayor Rolph of San Francisco, who has confined himself to safe generalities throughout the campaign, continues his serene course, saying little of actual moment in the gubernatorial controversy, but his workers are centering feverish activity against Fitts.

And in the camp of Gov. Young, not only the Governor himself, but many of his satellites, are tossing harsh words and casting hard looks in the Los Angeles District Attorney's direction.

For a time during this campaign it was the pleasure of Mr. Young to deplore, in a kind, almost fatherly fashion, what he termed the probably excusable mistakes made by Mr. Fitts in the latter's discussion of State facts, finances and figures.

But the Governor now has said good-by to all that. In his recent State-wide radio address, Gov. Young promised those who heard him that he would not try to "emulate any of the bitter invectives" which one of his opponents had showered upon him, but he found the task a trifle trying, apparently, as he later accused his critics of deliberate untruths, misstatements and wholly false assertions.

Even more emphatic than Mr. Young was his local campaign director, Marshall Stimson, who radioed his resentful conclusion that "the vindictive utterances of Dist.-Atty. Fitts rarely have been equaled in a political campaign," and Mr. Stimson proceeds to conclude, by way of the radio, that if Mr. Fitts has attacked Mr. Young with intent to deceive, Fitts is not "worthy" to be Governor, and if the Fitts charges are made through ignorance, Mr. Fitts is "unfit" to be Governor.

And then along comes A. H. Briggs, superintendent of the California Anti-Saloon League, and writes Fitts a letter in which Dr. Briggs permits himself to say that if he properly understands certain remarks by Mr. Fitts, the District Attorney is "guilty of ignorance too gross, or falsehood too glaring to be tolerated in a candidate for the Governorship."

Now, for the moment ignoring what Mr. Fitts may or may not have said, or how he may or may not have said it, it is very plain that the Young-for-Governor group, of which Mr. Briggs is a part, is, to say the very least, considerably alarmed by the progress Mr. Fitts has made in his ambition to move into the mansion in Sacramento now and for approximately four years past, occupied by Clement Calhoun Young.

In passing it might be said that Dr. Briggs has had his ire aroused by a remark said to have been made by Fitts to the effect that the "indorsement of Gov. Young by the Anti-Saloon League was bought and paid for." This writer does not know whether Mr. Fitts made the assertion which proves so distasteful to Dr. Briggs, but is inclined to agree heartily with its purport.

Dr. Briggs, in his letter to Fitts in refutation of the "bought-and-paid-for" insinuation, apparently has in mind the payment of cash, but there are considerations other and often more potent than money that buy and pay for political services—as witness the explanations made by Dr. Briggs himself.

He admits that one member of the Anti-Saloon League's executive board, Dr. John R. Haynes, is serving as a Regent of the State University by appointment of Gov. Young. That another member of the executive board, former State Senator M. B. Harris, is a member of the State Highway Commission serving by appointment of Gov. Young, and that another member of the executive board, Mr. Stimson, is manager of the Young campaign in this part of California.

Dr. Briggs finds comfort in his assertion that neither Dr. Haynes nor Mr. Harris are paid salaries for their State services and hence that their indorsements of Gov. Young were not monetarily "bought and paid for." The same, in his opinion, holds true of Mr. Stimson, whom Mr. Briggs says is serving as Young's campaign manager "without one cent's compensation."

The whole discussion eventually gets down to a question of what constitutes a "valuable consideration" in politics.

Dr. Haynes has been a member, and a paying member, of the Johnson machine in this State for many years. Dr. Briggs is open to suspicion of the same character, and Mr. Stimson has both ridden in and been run over by the same machine—his position at the time being determined by his particular political allegiance, as he has been both for and against the faction which Mr. Young represents.

Getting back to the comments attributed to Fitts by the Governor and others, even Mr. Young concedes that some of the charges of Mr. Fitts are correct "as far as they go." The Governor, however, apparently feels that they do not go far enough.

Fitts has stumped the State during the last five or six weeks and spoken to many thousands of men and women whose enthusiasm indicated an agreeable response to his arguments. He has accused the State administration of hesitating with regard to virtually every constructive need of California since Gov. Young was elected. He has charged the State administration with inefficiency and with extravagance. He has maintained that the highway appropriations handled by the Young administration have been subject to political influence.

He has accused the Young administration of "tax favoritism" and in this respect has even drawn down upon his head the fire of Editor Mathews of the Covina Argus—a supporter of Gov. Young, whose ordinary placidity and imperturbability apparently have succumbed to the general atmosphere of illtemper in the Young organization.

Despite all of this belated unkindness in the gubernatorial contest as it nears the election tape, Fitts continues to attract larger audiences than either Messrs. Young or Rolph; the straw ballots taken in different sections of California continue to show Fitts ahead and the windshield sticker contest between the three leading aspirants for the Republican nomination for Governor continues to find Fitts far ahead. If any or all of these matters are to be accepted as reliable reflectors of coming events, Young and Rolph are fighting for the honor of taking second position. However, the foregoing is merely an observation, not a prediction.

No political observer, recalling the awful fate of Attorney Kemper Campbell in 1922, will ever willingly make an outright prediction. It may be remembered that Mr. Campbell, until the blight of eight years ago, enjoyed a tremendous reputation as a political prophet. Hence, preceding the election of a Governor in that year, his prediction was received with rejoicing by the candidate favored by him and with foreboding by the candidate whom Mr. Campbell prophesied into political oblivion. Then came the election. Mr. Campbell was a prophet without honor; for not only had he been mistaken, both in large and in little, but he had been so magnificently wrong as to perform for political prophets generally the same service which Lot's wife contributed in biblical times—a terrible warning. The fact that Mr. Campbell fell from grace by venturing to look ahead, while Mrs. Lot became a pillar of salt from looking behind, makes no real difference in the comparison.

After this election, regardless of the outcome, there will be much argument as to how the victory was accomplished. Right now, with all due respect to the accuracy of pre-election estimates, hard work by the various candidates and their supporters seems to offer the most reassuring criterion.

The scramble for first place on the Republican Lieutenant-Governorship ballot seems to have settled down to a contest between Frank F. Merriam, State Senator and chairman of the Republican State Central Committee; former State Senator Harry Chamberlin, and H. L. Carnahan, incumbent by reason of having been appointed to the place by Gov. Young.

Several candidates are in the field for State Controller, State Treasurer, Attorney-General, Secretary of State and the like, but thus far the only incumbent whose office is seriously assailed seems to be Atty.-Gen. Webb.

In Los Angeles county a real fight has developed between State Senator McKinley and State Senator Lyon for the honor of election to the next Senate as this county's sole representative in the upper legislative house.

Some of the judicial contests are, to say the least, exceedingly warm, and in at least two of the Supervisorial districts there is sufficient activity to indicate unusually energetic campaigning.

And, as heretofore, the men and women seeking places as members of the various partisan county central committees constitute the bulk of names upon which the voters must ballot. Several party leaders are discussing the need for reducing the number of elective committeemen, both from the standpoint of election costs and of party organization, and an improvement in both cases will be sought, it seems, when the next Legislature convenes.

The primary election occurs three weeks from next Tuesday.

A CARR THAT NEVER PARKS

Whose words do thousands daily read,
And criticise his classic screed;
Who, with his "Lance" makes tough hides bleed?
Sir "Lancer" Carr!

Who makes film magnates flush and frown
And knows the movies up and down,
And "cans" and "pans" and roasts 'em brown?
Sir "Critic" Carr!

Who sweeps the Southwest with his pen,
And soars to scenic heights, and then
Comes home—and starts to tour again?
Sir "Gipsy" Carr!

Who writes of desert, mountain, mart;
Of science, ships, shops, war and art—
And swats a fly, with aching heart?
Plain Harry Carr!

JAMES E. HUNGERFORD.

Although a wealthy American has made a tempting offer for it, the village of Ling in England has refused to part with its greatest treasure—the ancient, crude table on which King Alfred is supposed to have made and eaten the famous burned cakes of legend, 1000 years ago.

LEADERS DETAIL SUCCESS ASSETS

Many Qualities Advisable to Gain Top of Ladder

Different Men Lay Stress on Various Criterions

Honesty and Work Among Recommendations

The fifth installment of the series of views on the principal moral, mental and physical qualifications which make for success in life compiled from the testimony of men who have achieved success in their respective lines of endeavor is presented by The Times below. To thousands of Southern California's young men and women, recently graduated from high schools and colleges and face to face with the concrete problems of life, these questions are of the first importance. Another will appear next Sunday.

C. C. C. TATUM

President C. C. C. Tatum Realtors

(1.) Adaptive ability.
(2.) Speed.
(3.) Co-ordination.
(4.) Coolness.
(5.) Strength of character.
(6.) Judgment.

The keynote to success is adaptive ability. A man must have the characteristic qualities which will enable him to change his point of view, his methods of attack and his whole insight into the characteristics of any problem he may chance to encounter. This ability can be translated into money without the slightest difficulty. Not only does it lead to monetary advances, but also enables a man to progress through life on a greater sense of that changing standard of living to which every one must adapt himself.

The power to meet an ever-different situation calls for the second criterion of success—speed. Rapidity is essential in a world that is daily growing more rapid. One must think a hair-breadth faster than the next fellow, else one finds himself "outside." To be speedy and to make that speed worth while it must be co-ordinated and hooked into the right channels. This done, there can be no stopping.

Then the two restraining, or braking, principles which balance all this hurry and change are coolness and strength of character. These are the ballasts which steady the ship of success. And any ship needs steadying in a storm. Surely the path of success lies just ahead for the man with these six qualities.

WALLER TAYLOR

President Consolidated Steel Corporation, Ltd.

(1.) Honesty.
(2.) Reliability.
(3.) Intelligence.
(4.) Initiative.
(5.) Energy.
(6.) Ambition.

Honesty is the keystone of every enduring business success. It must be a natural honesty of purpose, not merely the enforced adherence to a code of business ethics. A "trimmer" never gets very far.

Reliability is a great asset. When your associates learn they can count upon you, whether in the ordinary course of the day's routine, or as a meeting pinch-hitter in an emergency, you have taken a long step forward toward your goal.

Intelligence and initiative generally go together, but not always. You may have the intelligence to carry out the duties of your department masterfully but not the initiative to make improvements. Strive to get ahead; while standing on one step try to master what will be required for you on the step above.

Energy you must have. The successful business executive has been pictured as spending his time golfing equally between golf and conferences. The truth is, the higher he goes, the longer the hours he devotes to business, as a general rule. Recreation is good and necessary, but the successful man must have a great capacity for work.

Ambition is the guiding star by which you steer your course. Without it you are like a rudderless ship. With it, backed by the above qualities, you can achieve any goal you set for yourself.

HERBERT D. IVEY

President, Citizens' National Trust and Savings Bank

(1.) Hard work.
(2.) Perseverance.
(3.) Honesty.

Hard work, perseverance, honesty. Those are the things from which success grows.

H.D.IVEY.

Intelligent hard work, it must be; not mere struggling. No amount of aimless tugging and sweating over brick and mortar will produce a safe and sightly building. One must know where to place the brick, and why; how to use the mortar, and when. Add intelligence to the youth and hope with which you enter on responsibility, and you will win success. Do the work ahead. By the very meaning of the word there can be success only where there is definite progress. This is an age for the thinker, the man who knows, but in every other age in history it has been its rewards for the man who works ungrudgingly to earn them.

Perseverance is but another word for courage and self-control. Quitters cannot expect success. A sound mind, thoroughness in work—if you have these, and persevere, time will bring inevitable success.

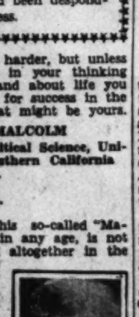
Honesty of thought, quite as much as honesty of character, is required. To be above suspicion, as regards other people's property, is a common enough virtue. To be honest with yourself is harder, but unless you are honest in your thinking about yourself and about life you can never hope for success in the full measure that might be yours.

ROY MALCOLM

Professor of Political Science, University of Southern California

(1.) Integrity.
(2.) Health.
(3.) Ambition.
(4.) Energy.

Success in this so-called "Machine Age," or in any age, is not to be measured altogether in the terms of the market place or high position. Many a man who is the possessor of wealth or enjoys the honors of exalted public office, has dismally failed in the discipline of his own soul. The Apostle Paul cried out, "But this one thing I do." "What's failure or success to me?" asks Browning, "I have subdued my life to one purpose."



DR. ROY MALCOLM.

To such an understanding, chastened soul, integrity, health, ambition, and energy are only natural expressions of an inner power. Such an one possesses character because it is the fruit of a well-ordered life. He has health because it is the result of right living and not the product of a special diet. He has ambition because a vision of the meaning of life leads on to greater and greater conquests—far different from the fretting ambitions of a vacillating soul vainly trying to arrive "somewhere." He has energy because in such a man energy is an unconscious, natural expression, and not a "pepping up" exercise.

In the final appraisal, what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole glittering, garish world and, withal, miss the goal of real success, a conquering, disciplined soul? Success, in the fullest and highest sense will come to any young man or woman who can cry out with Browning, "I have subdued my life to one purpose."

DEATH ACHIEVED UNDER WHEELS

Many Passengers See Man Dive Beneath Streetcar from Safety Zone

In the presence of a number of horrified witnesses, James Dean, 45 years of age, of 1220 West Sixty-sixth street, hurled himself from a safety zone under the rear wheels of a southbound Vermont-avenue car in charge of Motorman D. E. Lewis, yesterday afternoon, and was instantly killed.

According to his widow, who was questioned at their home, he had been despondent over illness.

program advocated by me and stated that it was a most important and constructive activity in solving the unemployment situation and should be done right now."

Those who are following the Barnes campaign in the Tenth District point out that he is a man acquainted with public affairs, with the needs of the State in which he lives, both as to present requirements and as to future ones. He has the long look ahead of the man who knows the West. His program is a comprehensive one and will give employment to thousands and bring prosperity to the nation, it is urged by those supporting him.

"Prosperity is not made by adopting resolutions in a political campaign, but is brought about by putting through constructive legislation," he said.

"The drying out of our springs, the shriveling of our streams, the multiplication of insect pests—these are not due to blind chance or unreasoning luck. They follow the destruction of our timber as night follows day. The problem is a public one and cannot be solved by the individual land owners, who are sacrificing their crops today through reckless misuses of our timberlands, thus sapping the vitality of our natural resources.

DEVELOPMENT NEAR

"The recent census shows that our country is at the beginning of its growth. The forests of the land can be made ready to meet the great demands that are going to be made on them. Fire and wasteful and destructive forms of lumbering are destroying our forest resources far more rapidly that they are being replaced. Wise action must be taken in time, as we cannot hurry the growth of our trees."

Mr. Barnes has been a consistent Republican since attaining voting age. He has never had political aspirations but has always been interested in good government and has worked assiduously on the educational program of the American Green Cross in order to lay a foundation to bring about wise and beneficent legislation for the protection, preservation and restoration of our forests. He believes that when the people understand the value of the forests and what their destruction means to them as individuals, as business men and as citizens of the nation they will act.

OLD HOLLYWOOD SETTLERS MEET

nue, spoke briefly of the old days. She told of the time when Horace Henderson Wilcox, Kansas prohibition leader, came to what is now the corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Cahuenga avenue and bought a 160-acre ranch which he called Hollywood. Mrs. Wakeman has been a reader of The Times since 1887, she said yesterday.

There was much visiting about the grounds. Many former residents of Hollywood were present from a distance and were busy during the afternoon greeting their old neighbors.

PRIMARY REGISTRATION GAINS 34,991 NEW NAMES

A gain of 34,991 over all previous county primary voter registration figures was announced yesterday by County Registrar of Voters W. M. Kerr in making public the 1930 totals. Corresponding figures for 1928 were 789,895.

The grand total for city and county was announced as 824,886 as against 789,895 in 1928. Of this number 459,769 were recorded in Los Angeles. County figures indicated that 365,117 voters took their right of franchise seriously enough to register.

The votes in the city were divided as follows: Republican, 327,093; Democratic, 90,358; Socialist, 2727; Prohibition, 2836; declined to state party affiliations, 36,755.

In the county: Republican, 258,653; Democratic, 71,760; Socialist, 1824; Prohibition, 5037; declined to state party affiliation, 27,843.

Following is the registration of other major cities in the county:

Glendale, total vote, 36,522, of which 20,282 are Republican, 4028 Democrat, and 272 Prohibition.

Long Beach, total vote, 61,027, of which 42,069 are Republican, 14,099 Democrat and 968 Prohibition.

Pasadena, total vote, 32,775, of which 25,746 are Republican, 4336 Democrat, and 768 Prohibition.

Santa Monica, total vote, 14,485, of which 10,727 are Republican, 2432 Democrat, and ninety-five Prohibition.

TRADE PARLEY GROUPS GATHER

toms Exhibit as its official representative and also attending will be several members of the Treasury staff, headed by Regional Manager Brice Mace. Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director-general of the Pan-American Union, has delegated William A. Reid, secretary and foreign trade adviser of the Union, to represent this organization.

Assisting Mr. Socha in local preparations are Robert E. Dorton, manager of the foreign department of the Bank of Italy; F. A. Sumption, vice-president, Security-First National Bank; J. C. Darby, sales manager, Bishop & Co.; G. C. Gearhart, manager, Hammond Lumber Company; Councilman Henning, Stanley T. Olafson, secretary, harbor and foreign commerce committee, Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, and other citizens.

CHAMBER TO BE HOST

Following registration here on the 11th inst., the delegates will be luncheon guests of the Chamber of Commerce at the Biltmore, when Chairman Socha will deliver the official greeting of Gov. Young and the State. John C. Austin, president of the chamber, Mayor Porter and Dr. Rufus von KleinSmid will address the delegates. Col. Eric Fowler and John G. Mott will welcome them in Spanish. Talking motion pictures are to be taken for later reproduction in the home countries of the delegates.

Inspection of the harbor here, the fish cannery at Fish Harbor, Long Beach Harbor, a swim at the Pacific Coast Club, Long Beach, and a reception and dinner at the club by the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce will be features of the first day's program in this locality.

VISIT TO STUDIOS

Visits to industrial plants, and a specially prepared industrial exhibit, a luncheon tendered by the Foreign Trade Club of Southern California at the Central Manufacturing District Club, visits to motion-picture studios, attendance at a special program at the Hollywood Bowl and an entertainment by the Universal Pictures Corporation and a midnight supper will be second-day activities.

On the third day the delegates will be taken for a tour of the Los Angeles county agricultural sections and an inspection of a citrus packing plant at Azusa. This trip will be in charge of Dr. George P. Clements, manager of the agricultural department, Chamber of Commerce. Arrangements will be made for a more intensive study of agricultural conditions here by groups of delegates who are particularly interested in this subject. The Pasadena Chamber of Commerce will be host at a luncheon at the Maryland Hotel, Pasadena, to be followed with a tour of Pasadena and a visit to the Huntington Library and Art Gallery. Later in the day the delegates will be taken to Bakersfield via La Canada.

SACRAMENTO SESSIONS

The naming of a committee on permanency probably will be one of the first important actions at the opening of the conference sessions at Sacramento on Sunday, the 24th inst., when the election of a permanent president is scheduled. The actual business of the conference will start on Monday, the 25th inst.

Geographical round-table sessions have been tentatively scheduled for the first day and a half of the conclave.

Details of trade reciprocity involving tariff, quarantine, pure foods, standardization of commodities, customs regulations, transportation, financing, fruit culture and terminals will receive close consideration.

Round-table officials will meet every afternoon with the president and secretary-general and report on the progress made during the day. In this way the information will be passed on to the delegates of all group conferences.

Immediately following the completion of each round table's work a recommendation in the form of a resolution will be passed to a committee which will prepare the recommendation for final conference action, it is announced.

VISITOR DISCUSSES GREAT HIGHWAY PROJECT

The projected Pan-American highway will overshadow all other factors in bringing about intimate intercourse between all American peoples, in the opinion of Enrique Jimenes, former Vice-President of Panama and foremost Latin-American journalist. He is leader of the group of five delegates to the Pan-American Reciprocal Trade Conference, to be held at Sacramento this month, who arrived from the canal yesterday aboard the Panama-Pacific electric liner California.

"Undoubtedly the coming conference will bring a better understanding among all American countries, especially between the United States and the Latin-American republics, which today face similar problems," said Mr. Jimenes. "This understanding will be a good aid to the economic welfare of all our nations, as it will carry all of us to a closer acquaintance.

"But I want to impress upon you the enormous benefits to accrue from the great Pan-American highway. Panama is the logical crossroads of the world; ships of all flags call at our shores and my country is visited by people of all races. We have developed in the last ten years a regular plan of highways which will be completed about eighteen months hence and which will link and connect the republic from one end to the other. This system of roads will be our contribution to the great Pan-American highway, projected to run all through the continent.

"When this highway is completed we will see all the Americas joined as one great family and Panama as the chief clearinghouse, wherein the plan for establishment of commercial free zones at the canal will be of great benefit."

Other delegates in the party include Florencio Ozarsum, representing Chile; Senen Urdanate, from Venezuela; Castro F. Lopez, Venezuela, and Oscar Tenham of Chile. They were met at the pier by Dr. Jose S. Saenz, Consul for Panama and the Dominican Republic at Los Angeles, and Charles Cook of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

From Sacramento Messrs. Tenham and Ozarsum will go to Washington in October as delegates to the International Highways Congress.

PLANE HITS WOMAN AT AIR FIELD

Wife of Oil Man Hurt as Hutchinson Machine Crashes into Fence

A woman spectator at the Los Angeles Municipal Airport was badly injured late yesterday afternoon when a large Lockheed plane, piloted by George Hutchinson, crashed into a fence bordering the highway. The victim was Mrs. George W. Johnson, wife of the vice-president of the Federal Oil Company of California, and she was watching Hutchinson attempt a test flight in the plane in which he announced he would soon try a trans-Atlantic flight.

Witnesses who saw the accident said last night that the plane was unable to rise over the wire fence bordering the field, which caught the landing-gear and brought it to the ground. Mrs. Johnson, who was standing near the fence, apparently saw that the pilot was in trouble and started to run, but fell directly in the path of the airplane. One of the large landing wheels struck her a glancing blow on the head and caused severe scalp wounds. Her machine standing nearby was demolished.

Mrs. Johnson, who lives at 630 North Alpine Drive, Beverly Hills, was taken to the Hawthorne Hospital where she was given emergency treatment by Dr. L. W. Fate. Attendants at the hospital said that an X-ray examination would be made to determine if she had suffered other injuries than the scalp wounds.

Hutchinson arrived in Los Angeles two weeks ago to take delivery of his specially constructed plane with which he proposed a transoceanic flight. He was scheduled to complete his test flights within a few days and leave for New York for his Paris flight. His plane was not seriously damaged in the crash.

VARIED USES OF WOOD DISPLAYED IN WINDOW

As a welcome to the Millwork Institute of California, which will be in annual convention at the Hotel Huntington in Pasadena, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, an unusual window display showing many of the varied uses of wood has been installed by the Crown City Manufacturing Company in the Guaranty Building and Loan Association's window at 263 East Colorado street, Pasadena. In line with the Millwork Institute's program of trade promoting, the display shows forty different kinds of wood with their qualities, uses, habitat and weights. Designs of millwork included in miniature scale examples of flower stakes, flagpoles, doors, stairwork, inlays, shutters, surfboards, rough lumber, seed flats, wood turnings and a Spanish galleon displaying the use of wood for hobby materials.

State Drive to Abolish Death Penalty Mapped

A new campaign to abolish capital punishment in California will be launched tomorrow night at a meeting in old Unitarian Church, 925 South Flower street.

Jack Black, former convict and author of "You Can't Win," will be a speaker, as will be Dr. Miriam Van Waters, consultant on juvenile delinquency to President Hoover's Committee on Law Enforcement; Vivian Pierce, national executive secretary of the American League to Abolish Capital Punishment, and Dr. Edwin P. Ryaland, chairman of the Los Angeles Church Federation.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the California branch of the American League to Abolish Capital Punishment.

Laborer Loses Arm on Machine

Leo Swagerty, 23 years of age, living at 10895 South Vermont avenue, and employed as a laborer at Eighth and Francisco streets by the Griffith Construction Company, suffered an amputation of his right arm yesterday, when it came in contact with the rapidly moving belt of a ditch-digging machine. He was treated at Georgia-street Receiving Hospital and transferred to California Hospital.

BUSINESS ADVANCE SHOWN

Los Angeles Area's Definite and Steady Gains Set Forth in Chamber's Monthly Review

Business conditions in the Los Angeles area, as measured by the standards of employment figures, retail and wholesale sales, and bank debits, shows a definite and steady improvement over previous months, according to the monthly business review issued by the Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber's resume points to the increase of 13 points in the figures for employment, as reflecting greater activity in several branches of local industry, among them motion pictures, construction, wearing apparel, millinery and furniture.

As a measure of business activity, debits to individual accounts for the month of July show an increase of 10 per cent over the figure for June, although it was 25 per cent below that of July, 1929.

Building permits for July showed a moderate gain over June, but were 25 per cent below those of a year ago. In the latter field lower building material costs were shown in the review to have been responsible for a large increase in the number of homes and small buildings. The review contains a prediction that these costs will increase before the end of the year.

The wearing apparel manufacturers of Los Angeles are finding a steady volume of orders, with many new buyers. Leaders in the industry reported during July that employment was on the upgrade and that many plants were working to capacity.

Retail department store sales were only 3 per cent lower in the first six months of this year than they were in the same period of 1929 and for the month of July in this year were only 6 per cent lower than the same month in 1929.

Many of the agriculturists in Southern California who several months ago foresaw that the purchasing power of the nation at large would be generally lowered, have been prepared to meet a normal season with lowered production costs. The bright spot in the agricultural situation, according to the review, is the continued high price level of citrus fruits.

A total of 2,315,000 tons of cargo was moved over the wharves of Los Angeles Harbor during July which, while not a record, was up to recent monthly figures and was only slightly under that of July, 1929.

The chamber's review includes also brief reports on general business in Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada. Conditions in these States are said to be rapidly approaching normal with the exception of mining areas, where low prices for copper have accounted for much unemployment.

HUNTER BOYS MAKE FINAL FLIGHT TODAY

With their operations to center over Westlake Park, the Hunter Brothers, world's championship endurance flyers, at noon today will conduct their farewell refueling flight above Los Angeles. The park district yesterday was chosen as the area where the test will be visible to the greatest number of spectators. The City of Chicago, which established the world's record of 553 hours in the air, will be piloted by Kenneth and John Hunter, while Big Ben, the refueling ship, is to be manned by Albert and Walter. The four brothers are scheduled to make their final personal appearances on the stage at Grauman's Chinese Theater on Tuesday night. Today's flight is planned as a farewell exhibition.

HOWES WILL SPEAK

Durward Howes, president of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be one of the speakers before the Ramona Supper Club next Tuesday evening on the Ramona Village grounds, 5600 block, West Washington street. Other guests will be Lee Roy Owen, president of the Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce, and Harry Schrews, secretary of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

PREVIEW ISSUED

DAVIS FURNITURE IS A MARK OF QUALITY IN FINER HOMES, HOTELS, APARTMENTS

FOR nearly a quarter century the Davis Company has been identified with the very finest type of furniture manufactured in the country. This furniture graces many of the most pretentious private residences, hotels and apartments along the Coast . . . Los Angeles, Beverly Hills, Montecito, Santa Barbara, San Francisco and San Diego. Among more notable places thus furnished are: Biltmore Hotels in Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, Ambassador Hotel, Sir Francis Drake Hotel, San Francisco, Agua Caliente Hotel, Mexico; Deauville, Elks, Jonathan Clubs and Shrine Auditorium. Apartments of the type of Chateau des Fleurs, Chateau Marmont, El Royale, La Layenda and very many others. Also innumerable fine homes and many of the better theaters.

Davis Furniture is distinguished by choice materials and expert workmanship. Hand-carved frames with all-hardwood interiors, glued, dowelled, mortised and corner-blocked, grooved joints and continuous one-piece legs. This construction insures dependable, lasting service. Davis cushions are particularly resilient, 2-inch springs being used instead of 3½-inch, allowing a larger number of springs to a given space. Davis coverings are selected from the finest domestic and imported fabrics, with a notably extensive selection of patterns.

A BRILLIANT "SCOOP" IN EPOCH-MAKING VALUES

IN one of the most fortunate transactions in our long career, we have obtained for immediate sale direct to the public, upwards of 1,000 pieces of the exclusive high-grade stock of one of the foremost furniture manufacturers, the Davis Upholstering & Furniture Co., of Los Angeles. Prices quoted to our customers in this spectacular event will, in many cases, be on a par with the regular cost prices quoted to dealers by this manufacturer.

This remarkable deal was possible only because the Davis Company is about to build a spacious new factory, occupying a full block in length on Maple avenue, from 32nd to 33rd street. Their old plant will be dismantled after all-new stock has been made up for the opening of the new factory. The company naturally is desirous of disposing of its present stock of furniture as speedily as possible. Los Angeles Furniture Company was advised of these facts and made an offer which the Davis Company accepted, with the result that we announce beginning tomorrow one of the most notable selling events in local merchandising annals.

Items listed here are only a few indicative of hundreds available . . . an impressive assemblage of Living Room Suites and individual units from which to make interesting selections of related pieces . . . Davenports, Sofas, Chairs and Love Seats. Authentic reproductions of period designs . . . Louis 15th, Louis 16th, 18th Century Italian, Georgian English, as well as the much-wanted early American. Massive elaborately hand-carved frames, daintily fashioned pieces of exquisite grace and beauty, rich domestic and imported coverings in bewildering variety.

Do not confuse this event with offerings of merchandise especially manufactured for "sale" purposes, nor with so-called "wholesale" or "manufacturer's close-out" campaigns. This is the regular stock of a highly reputable and successful manufacturer . . . furniture never before off the factory floors . . . not a disposal of shopworn sample lines, out-moded styles or warehouse accumulations.

Affairs of the Week
by Juana Neal Levy

Summer with all its delightful out-of-doors activities finds a broad field in California and the resorts make a special effort to entertain their visitors.

Among the most popular at this season of the year is Del Monte with its lovely hotel, spacious lounge and broad verandas is one of the most attractive backgrounds for various activities, yachting, golf, tennis, polo, horseback riding, aeroplane gliding and archery, to say nothing of its marvelous Roman plunge, which every day is crowded with swimmers and divers, for which the younger set is famous.

Then Pebble Beach is an added charm to Del Monte, and there are numerous Southern Californians who have built lovely homes there and every week-end finds merry house parties, and ingenuity taxed for unusual festivities.

One of the attractive hostesses whose affairs are always unique and charming is Mrs. S. D. Morse, who with Mr. Morse makes their home at Del Monte and are interested in all of its out-of-doors activities.

Mrs. Moore is an accomplished yachtsman and is often found steering their magnificent yacht "The Temptress" in northern waters.

Miss Nona Schweppe, attractive young daughter of Richard Jewett Schweppe of Los Angeles, was an interested visitor at Del Monte following her being graduated from Castilleja finishing school, being especially interested in swimming and diving. Miss Schweppe is now in Paris and plans to pass at least a year traveling abroad.

Miss Polly Forsyth of Santa Barbara is one of the enthusiastic young horsewomen of Del Monte while Miss Jane Easton of Kellogg, Idaho, is one of the expert ping pong players, it being quite the most popular diversion of the evening's entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rounseville of Pinehurst, N. C., are much interested in archery and have become quite expert in this charming out-of-doors activity, finding it their favorite pastime.

Misses Anne Carley, Grace Wrenn and Phyllis Thompson are quite expert on the new En Tout Cas tennis courts at Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach, and Miss Helen Lawson of Los Angeles is enjoying golfing on the northern links.

Mrs. J. Cheever Cowdin of New York City is one of the expert air enthusiasts and is often seen making a landing in her glider on the Del Monte polo field.

Del Monte is now approaching the height of its gay summer social season, a series of brilliant fashion revues being presented in the Garden Room at the hotel every Thursday afternoon followed by a tea dance, while other weekly events on the calendar include al fresco luncheons at the Deserted Indian Village in Del Monte Forest, tea dances, paper chases, ping pong tournaments, treasure hunts, bridge, keno, swimming meets and dancing party in the Garden Room.

Del Monte is also preparing for a great Golden Jubilee celebration in honor of the fiftieth anniversary, the 21st and 24th inst., the feature event to be a Fifty Years After gala night and dinner dance the 23rd inst.

Golf, tennis, diving and other sport events are being planned and the days of the roaring eighties and gay Nineties will be recalled by a croquet tournament, while other important evenings will include the ship September 1-7 and Monterey's first annual county fair, which is scheduled for October 8-12 featuring steeplechasing, flat and harness races and polo games.

Engagement Announced

Among the many delightful affairs of the past week was the luncheon with which Miss Alice Cornelia McReynolds, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Philip McReynolds of Berkeley Square entertained Thursday afternoon, the occasion serving to formally announce her engagement to Edwin Lewis Harbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Edward Harbach of Beverly Hills.

A charming motif of blue and yellow was effectively carried out in the decorations and appointments, the centerpiece being an immense globe of blue and and yellow blossoms and seated on the "top of the world" were two tall figures with Allie-Ed cards, thus revealing the engagement. No date has been set for the wedding. Tiny match booklets further added to the pleasing motif and the place cards marked the covers for Miss McReynolds, Mrs. Leonard E. Harbach, Jr., Miss Elizabeth Masson, Mrs. Robert Edwards, Jr., Mrs. Artemus Dwight Lamb, Mrs. Rea Callender, Miss Helen Chandler, Miss Helen Winnett, Mrs. Walter Weaver Candy, Jr., Mrs. Nell McCarthy, Mrs. Nicholas McCarthy Harrison, Jr., Mrs. Oscar A. Trippet, Jr., Miss Katherine Thomas, Miss Jane Hall of Montecito, Miss Bernice Ray, Miss Martha Marsh and Miss Margaret Huntington.

Miss McReynolds returned ten days ago from a five months' trip abroad, coming back aboard the Leviathan and stopping in New York to visit Mr. and Mrs. John Hearst at their country home in Long Island.

Miss McReynolds attended Marlborough school and later was graduated from Miss Ransome and Miss Bridges in Piedmont, while Mr. Harbach is a University of California at Los Angeles man.

Garden Wedding

The marriage of Miss Frances Ruth Flowers, daughter of Mrs. M. E. Flowers of Santa Monica, to Allan James Doyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Doyle, Palisades Beach, was solemnized yesterday afternoon, the ceremony taking place at 5 o'clock in the lovely gardens of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dana Lombard in San Remo Drive, Brentwood Heights, with Rev. Nicholas Conneally officiating.

The dainty bride was charming in a gown of ivory satin, princess model, the veil of tulle held in place by a cap of old rose point lace, the same lace edging the entire veil, and she carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Robert Bundy (Marjorie Flowers,) matron of honor; Miss Marion Bagg, maid of honor, and other attendants, Mrs. Douglas Bundy (Phyllis Flowers,) Miss Helen Winnett, Miss Daley Parsons, Miss Adelaide Wilson, Miss Helen Moore and Miss Marjorie Morris all wore frocks of peach crepe de chine, those of the matron and maid of honor being of a lighter shade than the frocks of the others. Brown velvet cloche hats completed the dainty costumes and they all carried armfuls of brown tiger lilies.

The bride was given in marriage by Maj. Douglas King, while Winston Ogden served as best man, and Robert Bundy, Douglas Bundy, Lionel Ogden, Jerry Hodgdon, Felix Meban and Emory Bokley ushered.

Mrs. Flowers wore orchid printed chiffon with large hat of the same tones, while Mrs. Doyle was in beige Chantilly lace and Mrs. Lombard wore petunia shades of crepe de chine with large hat of the same tones.

A supper followed the ceremony and later Mr. and Mrs. Doyle left in their motor for a honeymoon at Lake Louise and Banff. They will build their home in Santa Monica.

Mrs. Doyle was graduated from Marlborough School and is one of the most popular members of the younger set in Santa Monica and Los Angeles.

Delightful Affair

Complimenting Mrs. George Pearsen of Kansas City (Mona Wood), who is visiting relatives in the Southland, Mrs. Artur Rodzinski of Santa Monica and Maestro and Mme. Bernardino Molinari of Rome, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers Verbeck are entertaining this afternoon with an al fresco affair at the Westport Beach Club. The six-

INSTITUTION INTERNATIONALE

Never before have they been so beautiful...

...the autumn slippers by I. Miller! At first we were merely going to tell you that they had arrived, but they are so lovely it seemed unkind not to let you see them. So we relented enough to show you one—but no more! For we want you to come into the I. Miller shop and see them actually—because no mere picture could do them justice. They're too original and distinguished... their chic is too subtle for that!... By the way... the slipper sketched is presented in four of the season's most important materials—black faille... black suede... brown suede... patent.

WEDDING ENGAGEMENT MADE

Ceremony Set for Next Thursday

[Lansing Brown studios]
Miss Helen May Miller

MISS HELEN MAY MILLER, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton A. Miller, 200 North Hidalgo, Alhambra, has chosen the 7th inst. as the date for her marriage to Eugene Poole Conser of Los Angeles, the ceremony to take place in the Pasadena Presbyterian Church.

Miss Miller, who was graduated from University of California at Los Angeles, is affiliated with Delta Gamma Sorority, being its president in her senior year, while Mr. Conser, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Conser of Milwaukee, Wis., also claims U.C.L.A. as his alma mater, and is a Kappa Psi man. The wedding date was announced at a charmingly appointed bridge-tea given by Miss Sybil Georgi and Miss Helen Tindall at the home of the former in South Atlantic Boulevard. Many lovely affairs have been given in honor of Miss Miller since the announcement of her engagement.

Gala Fetes in Society

ty guests will gather at the Verbeck home in South Lorraine Boulevard about 2 o'clock, and motor down to the club. A swim in the surf will be optional and dinner will be served at 6 o'clock.

En Route Home

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ernest Potts, Jr. (Elizabeth Von Klein-Smid,) whose wedding was an event of last month, are on the high seas en route home, having sailed from Honolulu July 30 aboard the City of Los Angeles, and will dock here Tuesday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Potts have passed their honeymoon in Honolulu and will pass the next few weeks in the Von KleinSmid home in Chester Park, while Dr. and Mrs. Rufus B. Von KleinSmid are motoring north, planning to go on to British Columbia and stop o'er at Pebble Beach.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Potts will occupy the home of the former's mother, Mrs. Frederick Ernest Potts, in Twelfth avenue, while she is touring Mexico and upon her return they will have chosen their own home.

Mrs. Potts and Dr. Marcia A. Patrick of the Womans Athletic Club are leaving Sunday, the 17th inst., on a six weeks tour of Mexico.

Touring Abroad

Mr. and Mrs. George Leslie Smith, who are touring in Europe, are now in Vienna, and plan to return to Paris before sailing from Cherbourg the 29th inst., aboard the Ile De France on their way home. They will visit for some days in Maine before returning to the Coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Blissett Fix, the latter a sister of Mrs. Smith, left by motor Friday for Lake Louise and Banff, motoring and planning to be gone for at least a month.

Smart Affair

One of the lovely affairs being planned for the near future will be the tea with which Mr. and Mrs. Grove Chester Fiske are entertaining Sunday afternoon, the 17th inst., at their new home in North Vermont avenue, the guests being bidden to honor Maestro and Mme. Pietro Cimini of this city, Miss Katherine Parloe, violin soloist at one of the Hollywood Bowl concerts during the season, and Mrs. Walter Whiffen.

For Visitor

Honoring Mrs. Philip Thurber of New York City, wife of Maj. Thurber, who served with distinction in the American forces during the recent World War and who, with Mrs. Thurber, is a guest at the home of his mother, Mrs. Minnie Thurber, a charmingly appointed luncheon was given Wednesday afternoon at Bullock's Wilshire by Mrs. Irven Reynolds of Covina, the tables being arranged in a private dining-room. American Beauty roses in profusion with ferns and foliage centered the tables, and those included were Mrs. Thurber, Mrs. Philip Thurber, Mrs. Charles Bristow, Mrs. J. R. Elliott, Mrs. J. D. Fields, Mrs. D. D. Bronson, Mrs. William Thorne, Mrs. E. A. Weegar, Miss Hazel Bristow, Mrs. Jerome Reynolds, Miss Hazel Bristow, Miss Victoria Reynolds, Mrs. Park Frame, Mrs. Paul Brecht and the hostess.

Betrothal Announced

Formal announcement is made by Col. Harry Leroy Hawthorne, U.S.A. (retired,) and Mrs. Hawthorne, of 9232 Read Crest Drive, Beverly Hills, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marion Margaret Hawthorne, to Salvatore Francis Abbate, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Ignatius Abbate of Chicago, the wedding to be an event of the 20th inst., taking place in the morning in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Beverly Hills. Miss Hawthorne, who is an accomplished musician, is an officer of the Junior Euterpe Opera Reading Club, and has studied voice culture in New York as well as in Paris.

Beach Club Party

Miss Adeline Thompson was hostess at a smartly appointed bridge-luncheon given recently at the Jonathan Beach Club, when she honored her friend, Mrs. Wyman T. Harder (Mary Jean Rogers) of Santa Barbara. Corsages of gay flowers marked places for fourteen of Mrs. Harder's close friends, including Mmes. Lester B. Rogers, the honoree's mother; Caroline Stanton Thompson, Otto Wiemer, Philip A. Stanton, Ronald Stever, Earl Hoisington, Thor Emmet Smith, Albert H. Webb, Jr., Fred Brehlinger, Winifred Shepherd Brown and the Misses Zurita Roberts, Rowena Hoisington and Mary Bowen.

Recent Wedding

The marriage of Miss Gertrude Virginia MacIntosh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. MacIntosh of Quintero Hill, to Frank A. Lundy, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Lundy of North Gordon avenue, Hollywood, was solemnized recently at the All-Souls Congregational Church, with Rev. Charles F. Aked officiating. Only members of the immediate families were in attendance at the ceremony.

The bride attended the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of California, Berkeley, and claims membership in Sigma Kappa, while the bridegroom was graduated from Stanford and received special instruction in library administration at the University of California. He is a member of Phi Kappa Tau.

Mr. and Mrs. Lundy will make their home in Tucson, Ariz., where Mr. Lundy will be affiliated with the library at the University of Arizona.

Return From Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan H. Kellar (Virginia Carolyn Bryden,) whose wedding was an event of June, have just returned from their honeymoon and have made their home at 1314 Sutherland street. The bride is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. William H. Bryden. She was graduated from the Girls' Catholic High School. The bridegroom received his education in the San Bernardino schools.

The bridal party included Mrs. Florence Page, the bride's sister, as matron of honor, and the bride's brother, William H. Bryden, Jr., who served the bridegroom as best man. Among the guests were Mmes. Carrie Lace, Florence Page, Grace Sanborn, Blanche Cogan, Opal Furtsch, Katharine Keppler and Marie Furtsch; Miss Carolyn Sanborn, Thelma Strongquist and Davida Keppler, and Messrs. Henry Lace, Harry Page, J. D. Sanborn, Charles Furtsch and George Furtsch.

In Honolulu

Mrs. W. H. Remick of Beverly Hills, who is in Honolulu for the summer months with her daughter, Miss Mary Remick, entertained with delightfully appointed bridge-luncheon given recently at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel. The various shades of yellow and orange were used in the table decorations on a foundation of mamo with rose pompoms and ilima leis. Guests bidden to the affair were Mrs. R. E. Breed of New York City, Mrs. W. P. Hanrahan of San Francisco, Mme. Zur Helle, Mrs. E. M. Watson, Mrs. Gillian Harrison, Daisy Nuuanu, Mrs. Harvey Mayselden, Ingram Stainback, Mrs. Emilie R. Wall and Miss Louise Lucas.

Visit Relatives

Maj. and Mrs. A. B. Crowley and family will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow from Fort Hays, Columbus, O., where Maj. Crowley has been serving for the past four years on Gen. Bell's staff. They will remain as the temporary guests of Mrs. Crowley's parents, Capt. and Mrs. F. C. Mentzer, 1132 West Florence avenue, until they have located a permanent residence. Maj. Crowley is now assigned to the National Guard unit here and will take up his duties immediately upon his arrival.

Maj. and Mrs. Crowley have many friends in Southern California who will welcome their arrival with many delightful affairs. Their oldest daughter, Miss Jacqueline Crowley, is an ardent sportsman and a talented dancer.

Moore-Finney

One of the attractive weddings of the week was that of Miss Helen Gwendolyn Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy H. Moore of Swall Drive, and Warren Bradbury Finney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Finney of Pomona, which took place Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents.

The home was charmingly decorated with a profusion of flowers and foliage and an improvised altar was erected in the living-room. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white georgette worn over white satin and she carried an armful of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Dusain Gregory, the bride's cousin, who was matron of honor, wore a frock of yellow georgette and carried roses to harmonize with her frock. Glen T. Williams, another cousin of the bride, served the bridegroom as best man and Dr. Moses Breese of the Eagle Rock Presbyterian Church officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Finney left after the reception and supper for their honeymoon trip which was veiled in secrecy. The bride was graduated from Occidental College and is a member of Beta Phi Delta.

Honored With Luncheon

Mrs. Myra Moyse, grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star of the State of California, was honoree at a bridge-tea given Tuesday by Mrs. Louis Walnita, 629 North Almont Drive. The hostess was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Fern MacArthur, and her nieces, Mrs. Helen Harrison, Miss Gwendolyn Carson of Portland, Or., and Miss June Snoderly of Wendall, Idaho.

The luncheon tables were decorated with yellow and orange dahlias and charming favors were found at the place of each guest.

Among those bidden to the affair were Mmes. Elsie McCliffen, Mildred Blair, Claudie Johnson, Georgie Browne, Tillie Salkey, Muriel Simmons Jones, Maude Sibley, Cora Holland, Maude Bradley, Elizabeth Wheeler, Margaret Dunkey, Bess Lait, Ruth Lawrence, Louise Story, Gladys Reynolds, Eula Dalke, Enid Deeds, L. Maude Smith, Eva Mosteller, Jessie Morris of Bakersfield, Mary Vannest of Santa Monica, Jean Weir of Tujunga, Gladys Pierce of Santa Barbara, Elsie Halloway of Van Nuys and Rosa Gallagher of Kansas City.

New Home

Dr. and Mrs. Rex Robert Waggoner, who have just returned from their honeymoon passed at Del Monte and San Francisco, are now domiciled in their new home at 815 South Oxford street. One of the recent functions in honor of the bride and bridegroom was the bridge-supper given by Mrs. Malcolm Craig Nason who has just returned from abroad.

Dinners, Teas, Receptions Mark Week in Southland Society

The wedding took place June 30 at the Wilshire Crest Presbyterian Church. Miss Mona Hanson was maid of honor and the other attendants were Mrs. Malcom Craig Nason, Jr., Miss Esther Waggoner and Miss Marjorie Reynolds. Dr. Vernon Kelly was best man and the ushers were Dr. Robert Scotland, Dr. Kenneth Ruedy and Dr. Arthur Nelson.

Returns Home

After a year passed in study at the Finch School in New York City Miss Alice Ann MacMillan, charming debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. MacMillan, 75 Fremont Place, has returned to her home. Her house guest for a few weeks is Miss Virginia Tyng of New York City.

Returning

Paths that crossed some weeks ago will cross again when Mrs. Ernest Bass of Hollywood returns from a visit with her mother, Mrs. Frank Murphy, in Cleveland. She arrived at her mother's home just in time to say "hello" and "good-by" to her step-father and brother, Frank Cassidy, who were entraining for California. Mrs. Bass will now return to her Hollywood home at approximately the same time her father and brother are concluding their visit here with Mr. Bass.

Reception

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Roth will receive next Sunday from 3 to 5 p.m. and 8 to 10 p.m. at their home, 1132 Ingraham street, in honor of their son, Clarence A. Roth, whose marriage to Miss Jean Zelkin, formerly of Chicago, Ill., was a recent event.

House Guest

Miss Jessamine McCollum, attractive daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Beverly McCollum, 76 Fremont Place, sailed recently for Seattle, where she is to be the house guest of Miss Alice Murphy, a former classmate of hers at the University of Southern California. Miss Jane Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Robertson of Altadena, will accompany Miss McCollum on the trip. Miss McCollum will return to Seattle in November to be a bridesmaid at Miss Murphy's wedding.

Announced at Luncheon

Charming originality was exhibited in the appointments of a luncheon given July 26 at the Elks' Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Burdick when the announcement was made of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Burdick, to David Gordon of Hollywood. Telegrams served as invitations to the affair and the table decorations carried the idea further with paper messenger boys at either end of the table and place cards fashioned to resemble messenger boys holding detachable telegrams which revealed the news of the engagement. Bridge was played on the patio following the luncheon.

Among the guests were Mmes. Walter E. Pepper, M. L. Gordon, L. H. Wilson, H. Pingree, W. C. King, W. R. McKenzie, Douglas Maitland, L. E. Wilson, L. C. Pryor, Hugh Conway, Edna Main, Clarence Littleton, Carl Thenhous, Harry Williams, Alice Larsen and Antoinette Wilson, and the Misses Mary Main, Gwendolen Kik, Beth Pingree and Sylvia Goldberg.

Visit New York City

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Mulvihill (Anna B. Johnson) recently returned from a visit in New York City. They sailed on the steamer Momus from New Orleans, La., and returned by rail, stopping en route at Washington, D. C., and Louisville, Ky., where they were the guests of Mrs. Mulvihill's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Rommel.

To Wed in August

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Abbymary Krebs to Stanton Myrick II, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen S. Myrick, was made recently by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Krebs of Orange Drive. Both Miss Krebs and Mr. Myrick attended the University of California. The wedding will be an event of the 23rd inst.

Sorority Rites

Initiation of new members of Alpha Omicron Pi at the University of California at Los Angeles was conducted Sunday morning at the chapter house, 594 Hilgard avenue, Westwood, with Miss Audrey Buratti, past president of the sorority, officiating. The new members are the Misses Helen Battey, Betty Bradstreet, Marjorie Chalmers, Frances Coffin, Kathaleen Merriam and Jane Negus. Miss Bradstreet is the first daughter of a member to be initiated into Kappa Theta chapter, her mother being vice-president of the Los Angeles Alumnae Association.

Visit Uncle

The Misses Evelyn and Virginia Dunsmoor and their brother, Cyloe W. Dunsmoor, left recently for Minneapolis. After a short stopover in that city they will entrain for Rainy Lake, Can., where they will visit for the remainder of the season at the summer home of their uncle, Dr. F. A. Dunsmoor. The return trip will be made via Winnipeg and by boat from Vancouver to Victoria, Seattle and San Francisco.

NORTHWEST SCENE OF HONEYMOON

[Lindstedt Phelan studios]
Mrs. Walter Cecil Drake

One of the prettily appointed weddings of the month was that of July 12, when Miss Elizabeth Barbara Park, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Park of Crenshaw Boulevard, became the bride of Walter Cecil Drake, the ceremony taking place in the Wee Kirk o' the Heather with Rev. Robert M. Donaldson officiating. Mrs. Margaret Park Ackerman assisted her sister as matron of honor in eggshell chiffon with blue hat and slippers, carrying delphinium while the bridesmaids, Misses Pauline Pierpers and Ruth Cannon, were in yellow organdie with hat and slippers to match and carried yellow centuiri. Philip I. Bullen served as best man and Arthur Park, Jr., Constance Cole, William C. Ackerman and Stanley W. Warren ushered.

After a reception at the home of the bride's sister in Oakhurst Drive, Beverly Hills, Mr. and Mrs. Drake left for a honeymoon in the Northwest and will make their future home in Beverly Hills. The bride was made president of her sorority Kappa Kappa Gamma when it was installed on the campus at Westwood and is now president of the alumnae organization.

Honor Bride-Elect

The Casa del Mar was the scene of an attractively appointed bridge-luncheon given recently by Mrs. Robert Allen and her daughter, Miss Marguerite Allen of Hollywood. The affair was in honor of Miss Mildred Mort, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde E. Mort of Rialto and niece of Mrs. Allen, whose marriage to Jesse Curtis, son of Judge and Mrs. Jesse W. Curtis of San Francisco, will be an event of the 24th inst.

The luncheon tables were spread with a French blue organdie cloth with a mound of pink roses, blue delphinium, pink gladioli and maidenhair fern forming a centerpiece.

Besides the guest of honor and her mother, Mrs. Clyde E. Mort, were included former class-mates of Miss Mort who was graduated from Pomona College. Numbered among them were the Misses Mary Hawley, Alberta Williamson, Helen Hutchins, Margaret Davis, Marion Wilson, Irene Kirkland, Helen Kirkland, Adelaide Tenney, Jean Wilkinson, Helen Beattie, Elizabeth Dimock, Amelia Smith. Also Mmes. Ralph V. Arnold, Norihrop Ellis, Clifford Pitzer, Edward Millett, Jack Manildi, Howard Swan, Archie Nesbit, Carleton Becker and Elwood Thompson.

At the Sea Breeze

One of the most charming affairs of the week was the luncheon in honor of Miss Elizabeth Cover given by Mrs. Wells Morton and Mrs. Hugh Conroy in the Egyptian Room of the Sea Breeze Beach Club. The secret of the honoree's coming marriage to Harvey Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wood of Pasadena, was disclosed on miniature heart-shaped place cards with their names hidden in Japanese fan favors.

Cecile Brunner buds with yellow roses banked with fern adorned the table.

Guests were Mmes. Frank Wood, Harry Crawford, Thomas Morgan, Francine Stebracht, Henry Siebrecht, J. M. Lockwood, T. Floyd Brown, Elizabeth Crowell, Margaret Rossiter, Alma Rossiter, Ethel Jones, Frederick C. McAdams, Allan Bruce, Elbert McClelland, George Loe, Don Ross, Misses Louise Earl, Emily Miller, Dorothy Hutsing, Willis Long, Vera Doane, Juanita Underwood, Dorothy Orr, Faith Nutter, Helen Hill, Ruth Bidwell, Rosalie Stone, Charlotte Wilkinson, Ciel Bedford and Ruth Hamill.

Another colorful affair of the week was the dinner party at which Mr. and Mrs. Fernand Rouseyrol entertained a group of intimate friends. The table was arranged along the lines of a miniature flower garden with a profusion of pansies in all shades. A dance of the flowers by Margo Rouseyrol featured the evening.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. William E. Keefe, Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. A. Garfield Traynor, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hawthorne, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Randolph and Miss Leonore Keefe.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Carrier and Mrs. H. E. Jones joined in entertaining friends from Portland, Or., who are summering in Los Angeles, with a dinner-dance at the Sea Breeze Beach Club Wednesday evening.

Society In Sunny Southland and What it is Doing and Planning for Diversion

Large compotes of red and yellow roses centered the table while individual corsages of flowers of the same species were presented to the guests.

The honored guests included Prof. and Mrs. Gustav Schuster, Mr. and Mrs. John Schweberger and Mrs. Elizabeth Schuster.

Engagement Told

One of the delightful affairs of the summer season was the bridge-tea given recently by Mrs. Joseph Olive Michell, Sr., widow of the late Joseph Olive Michell, at her home at Point Fermin, San Pedro. The affair served as the occasion for the announceemnt of the engagement of Mrs. Michell's daughter, Miss Imogene Michell, to Douglas Ivan Gillis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gillis, Makiki Heights, Honolulu.

A profusion of gladioli, dahlias, Cecile Brunner roses and maidenhair fern was used with charming effect in the decoration of the home. The betrothal announcement was made by means of individual parchment scrolls, tied with white satin ribbon and adorned with silver wedding rings, which were distributed by young Joe Michell, grandson of the hostess.

Included among the guests were Misses. Clifford McAuliff, Howard Vickersham, Glen Hickman, Vincent Berry of Long Beach, Harold Moore, Hubert Abraham, Donald Auliff, Thomas Regan, Harry Erwin of Oakland, James McCarty, Paul R. Hoffman, John Kelly, Wilbur Wood, Wilfred Adamson, J. C. Rudbach, Bruce Toughil, Almore Huntley of Pasadena, Miranda Humphrey of Pasadena, C. M. Cason, William McGillvray, R. C. Griffith, Jessie D. Her Visitors

Mrs. R. Isabelle Lynds entertained for her daughter, who, with her husband, Capt. Eugene Bayley of Washington, D. C., have been making their annual visit to the Southland recently. Mrs. Lynds's daughter, Miss Ruth Merriam, has just completed her fourth year at The Bishop's School in La Jolla and will enter once more this fall to complete her course there. Those included in the afternoon's affair honoring Mrs. Bayley, included Miss Sophie Kastner, Mrs. Leota Lepski, Miss Antoinette Hoffmayer, Mrs. Gregory Hoskins, Mrs. Joe Simons, Mrs. Benjamin Lynds, Miss Elisabeth Major, Miss Isabelle Major, Mrs. Edward Fesser, Miss Ruth Merriam, Miss Patty Lou Lynds, Miss Pauline Reid, Mrs. H. I. Mack and Mrs. Jack Ridge.

Smart Affair

Mrs. Sigsby Dunlap was hostess recently at a delightfully appointed garden party at her home in Madison avenue, South Gate, the guests including the alumnae and associate members of Mu chapter of Phi Beta, music and dramatic art sorority. Following an afternoon of bridge in the gardens the guests enjoyed piano selections by Mrs. Tejas Edwards, vocal numbers by Miss Mildred Connor, accompanied by Miss Grace Gosling, and readings by Miss Margaret Yoder. The sorority colors were effectively carried out in the decorations and all appointments of the tea which was served in the gardens. One of the interesting features of the afternoon was the presentation of the traditional five-pound box of candy announcing the engagement of Miss Mildred Connor to Benjamin Tanner, to the members of the sorority. The wedding is scheduled for the 19th inst.

For Brides-Elect

One of the enjoyable affairs of recent date was the luncheon with which Miss Grace Gosling entertained at her home in North Sanborn avenue, honoring two of her sorority sisters, Miss Mildred Connor and Miss Marian Eaton, whose weddings are scheduled for this month. A shower of crystal glassware for each of the honorees featured the afternoon. Miss Gosling was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Joseph Gosling, and the guests included members of the alumnae club of Mu chapter of Phi Beta alumnae, Mrs. Tejas Edwards, Mrs. Jess Halsell, Mrs. Sigsby Dunlap, Mrs. Constantine Ivanoff, Miss Marian Sexton, Miss Mildred Connor, Miss Kay Morris, Miss Bonita Elffert and Miss Grace Styles.

Garden Party

One hundred guests were bidden to the buffet supper at which Ruth Rankin entertained at her home in North Hollywood, an enjoyable program being presented the guests for their entertainment. Among those included were Messrs. and Mmes. Arthur Millier, Pietro Cimini, Neal Begley, Carroll Jones, William Counsman, Lloyd Wright, Sidney Kingsnell, Karl Riedel, Louis Samuel, Henry Major, Phil Hanna, Franz Fritz, James Crenhanney, Jack Grant, A. J. Reilly, William Robbins, Harold Schwartz, Lawrence Tibbett, Fritz Tilden, Nathaniel Pousk, Kem Weber, J. W. Wood, Merl Haverlin, Gene Pinau, Mrs. Maud Latham, Mrs. Alice Davenport, Dorothy Wagner, Dorothy Reid, Helen Armstrong, Wynn Richie, Elinor Stone, Olga Zaseck, June Geissler, May Gelber, Carmelita Ruffo, Myra Lloyd-George, Jane Cushman, Miss Knapp, Ruth Cowan, Fay Angus, Zaruhi Elmassion, Helen Gates, Hester Scott, Louise Field, Anna Tully and Patterson Greene, Jose Rodriguez, Albert Conti, Dr. Argent, Herman Sacha, Jacques Carey, John McLoughlin, Andreas Arguroia, Walter Lang, Armando Carnini, Jean Negulesco, Gaetano Ayala, Stewart White, Jake Zeitlin, Will Connell, Theodore Stone, Brett Sexton, Garnett Toffiemire, George Judd, James C. W. Wheeler, Oscar Collins, Dr. Forrest Labarr, Elliott Anderson, Eric Noll of Berkeley and Merle Armitage.

Wed in Santa Barbara

An unusually attractive wedding of recent date was the marriage in Santa Barbara of Miss Sara Mae Hagerty, sister of Dr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Snyder of 2085 Linden avenue, Long Beach, and Plato McClarren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McClarren of Worthington, Ind. Dr. Daniel J. Snyder, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, Long Beach, and a brother-in-law of the bride, officiated at the service, which was read in the presence only of the immediate families. The ceremony was solemnized at 4 p.m. amid the fragrant midsummer flowers and attractive shrubbery in the Persian Gardens of the Samarkand.

The bride wore an afternoon gown of pale blue chiffon, with full skirt and trimmed in rare lace. A large hat of blue tulle and pale blue slippers, completed the bride's costume. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

A wedding supper for the bridal party and a few guests followed the ceremony. Pink tapers tied with tulle, exquisite blossoms of blue and pink and a wedding cake were lovely decorations for the bride's table in the dining room of the Samarkand. Following a brief stay in Santa Barbara, the bride and bridegroom left by motor for San Francisco and other points of interest in Northern California. On their return they will be at home to their friends at 1103 West Sixty-fourth street, Los Angeles, until the completion of their new home on West Eighty-first street.

The bride was born in Pennsylvania and was graduated from the University of Illinois. Since coming to California she has studied at the University of Southern California. She is a member of Phi Beta Phi. Mr. McClarren, although a native of Indiana, has made California his home for the past four years. He attended Indiana State College and is prominent in Masonic circles.

Southern Barbecue

Judge and Mrs. Berry Warren were hosts recently to a group of friends at their new Los Feliz home when they entertained with an old-fashioned southern barbecue honoring Mrs. Walter Young, a former schoolmate of the hostess. A barn dance was held following the barbecue.

Among the guests at the novel affair were Messrs. and Mmes. Walter Young, Michael Wren, George McKenna, Louis Newhouse, Harry Hughes, Joseph Kaye, Anderson Roland of Mobile, Ala., and Dr. and Mrs. Myron Williams and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Dudley.

Glendale Wedding

The Wee Kirk o' the Heather, Glendale, was the scene of an attractive wedding recently when Miss Anna G. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smith, became the bride of Cassius M. De Revere with Rev. Edwin P. Ryland officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Annabelle Sears and Paul De Revere served his brother as best man. The bride was graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles and is a member of the faculty at Polytechnic High School. Mr. and Mrs. De Revere are honeymooning at Lake Tahoe.

Betrothal Party

The home of Mr. and Mrs. H. George Beer, 1233 Arlington avenue, was the scene of a charming luncheon given July 26 in honor of Mrs. Beer's niece, Miss Emma Orland, whose engagement to Franklin L. Bush of Long Island, New York, was announced at the affair.

Miss Orland, who is a former resident of Pomona, has been studying voice in New York City for the past two years with an intermission of three months last summer for travel and recreation in Europe. Mr. Bush was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and Columbia University.

The wedding will be an event of the early fall and will be solemnized at the Little Church Around the Corner in New York City. Following the wedding trip the bride and bridegroom will reside in Kew Gardens, Long Island, New York.

Entertainment at the betrothal party was provided by the Misses Evelyn and Ethelyn Weaver of Virginia avenue and by Miss Ruth Harper of Pomona. The home was beautifully decorated with baskets of pink gladioli and hibiscus with yellow dahlias for relief. A pink and green color scheme was carried out in the appointments for the luncheon.

Guests bidden to the affair were Mrs. Etta Parcells, Mrs. E. P. French, Mrs. Lewis Somers, Mrs. James Bolton and Miss Margaret Brandt of Los Angeles; the Misses Ruth Harper, Katherine Fleming, Emily Kemp and Mrs. J. Hunt of Pomona; Mrs. R. Randall, Pico; Mrs. Harwood Thayer, San Marino, Mrs. F. Watson, Monrovia; Miss Katherine Barkley, Pasadena; Miss Dorothy Dye, Charter Oak; Miss Helen Chapin, Burbank; Miss Dorothy Halleck, Orange, and Miss Josephine Orland, sister of the bride-elect.

Honor Authoress

An elaborate dinner-dance and entertainment for more than 100 guests was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Von Kalb in honor of Miss Fifi Golden, talented young authoress. The honoree surprised the guests with the diversity of her talents when she appeared in solo dances in costume, accompanied by a Hawaiian quintet.

Church Ceremony

A wedding of lovely appointments took place the 24th inst. at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, Glendale, when Miss Lucile Cordelia Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Wright of Long Beach, became the bride of Kenneth Lorne Riedman, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Riedman, also reside in Long Beach. The bride's gown was of white satin with a court train and she carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Various shades of chiffon were worn by the bride's attendants who were Mrs. Caroline Knights Saunders, Miss Betty Gimper and Miss Eloise Wray. Fred C. Riedman served the bridegroom as best man and the ushers were Odie Wright, Jr., and A. E. Saunders. The service was read by Rev. G. D. Knights of the First Baptist Church, Whittier.

The bride was graduated from the University of Redlands and is a member of Alpha Theta Phi Sorority and the College Women's Club. She is at present a teacher in the Long Beach city schools. Mr. and Mrs. Riedman are honeymooning in Yosemite.

Recent Wedding

The St. Thomas Church was the scene of a smart wedding recently when Miss Arlene Miller became the bride of Charles Feigentraeger, Jr. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, John A. Miller, 1124 South Mariposa avenue, wore a gown of powder blue chiffon trimmed in ecru lace, with a hat to match and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Violet Bowes, who wore an orchid taffeta frock with a picture hat to match and carried pink rosebuds. F. Wilbur

CHURCH CEREMONY CELEBRATED

Announcement of Wedding Made

[Witzel studios]
Mrs. Donald Foulk Gaylord

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Fulton of Monterey Park of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Carol Fulton, to Donald Foulk Gaylord, son of Rev. and Mrs. Edward Dickinson Gaylord, the ceremony taking place in Church of the Messiah with Rev. S. J. Kennedy of East San Gabriel officiating. The bride, in a French blue lace gown with hat and slippers to match, wore a corsage of pink roses and valley lilies and there were no attendants. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord left on their wedding trip and after the 15th inst. will make their home in Berkeley.

Mrs. Gaylord was graduated from Pomona College and taught last year in Pomona city schools, while Mr. Gaylord is a Pomona College man and last year took his master's degree at Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley. He is a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma Fraternity, at Pomona.

WEDDING AFFAIR OF LAST MONTH

[Daniel Sheehan studios]
Mrs. Wellman Perry Thayer

With a charmingly appointed background of flowers and foliage, the wedding of Miss Virginia Dempsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Riggs Dempsey, and Wellman Perry Thayer, took place in the ballroom of the Town House July 26, the ceremony being performed before an altar banked high with ferns and wild flowers in sunset shades, the same color motif being carried out in all the appointments.

Miss Ida Theresa Dempsey was her sister's maid of honor and Misses Pricilla Thayer, Durlene Branham and Margery Hill were bridesmaids, while William Dardin of Salinas served as best man and John Anson, Robert Oaks, Ferdinand Mendenhall of Van Nuys ushered, and little Jane Strathearn was flower girl.

After a honeymoon in Del Monte, Mr. and Mrs. Thayer will make their home here. Mrs. Thayer was graduated from Cumnock and attended Marlborough School, while Mr. Thayer, an alumnus of Stanford, where he is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity, also attended George Washington University.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS of THE ARMY AND NAVY

Mira Mar Beach Club at Santa Monica was the scene of a delightful party last week when Mrs. Olney Place, wife of Col. Place, United States Army (retired) of West Los Angeles, entertained with a luncheon and bridge honoring Mrs. Joseph H. Twyman, recent bride of Lieut. Twyman, U. S. A. The Twymans are guests of his parents, Capt. and Mrs. J. H. Twyman, at Fort MacArthur and are being feted at a round of smart events prior to their departure for the Philippines this month. Bright summer flowers added charm to the luncheon table and place cards were bathing girls under gayly striped beach umbrellas. Guests were Mrs. R. S. Granger, Mrs. R. C. Davis, Mrs. Harvey Bagley and Miss Helene Granger of Santa Monica, Mrs. Clyde W. Allen, Mrs. David H. Loring and Miss Alfreda Kerwin of Los Angeles, Mrs. C. W. McMillan, Mrs. J. H. Twyman and Miss Helen Virginia Twyman.

Miss Ruth Irons of Iowa, house guest of Lieut. and Mrs. Alfred Gerard Mumma, U.S.S. Saratoga, was the incentive for a bridge-luncheon at which Mrs. Wayne Caward of Long Beach entertained Thursday. Old-fashioned bouquets of garden flowers in pastel shades and candles of harmonizing hues were used as a background and the out-of-town friends included Miss Rachel Crowler of Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Edna Griffith of Los Angeles, Mrs. Theodore Hutchison, Hollywood, Mrs. C. J. Caward and Mrs. Valmore Cole, Inglewood; Mrs. Curtis Goodenow and Mrs. A. G. Mumma, Long Beach.

Mrs. Emory Land, wife of Capt Land, U.S.S. Texas, and her mother, Mrs. Dwight Chester, have returned to Hotel Virginia after several days at Hotel Del Coronado During their sojourn in the south Mrs. Land and her mother were guests at several charming affairs arranged by Capt. and Mrs. Adolphus Staton of Coronado. Capt. Staton is in command of Destroyer Squadron Eleven with headquarters aboard the U.S.S. Decatur.

Capt. William D. Brererton, recently detached from command of the U.S.S. Neches, and Mrs. Brererton left for Newport, R. I., where he will be on duty at the Naval War College. Relieving Capt. Brererton is Capt. Charles S. McWhorter who comes from duty as commandant of the naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Capt. and Mrs. McWhorter are at home at 904 D avenue, Coronado.

Members of the naval colony are interested in the approaching wedding of Ensign Marvin Granville Kennedy, U.S.N., and Miss Lorence Lohr Stitling of San Francisco, which is to be a brilliant military event at the post chapel in the Presidio of the northern city next Wednesday. Ensign Kennedy was graduated from Annapolis with the class of 1928 and is stationed aboard the U.S.S. Idaho. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Kennedy of

HOME TO BE IN SAN PEDRO

[Lansing Brown studios]
Mrs. Norman David Wright

Mr. and Mrs. Norman David Wright, whose wedding was an event of July 16, in First Methodist Church, Hollywood, will make their home in San Pedro for a while. Mrs. Wright was formerly Miss Margaret Moreland, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Moreland of Buckingham Road, while Mr. Wright is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Wright of Pasadena. Both claim University of California at Los Angeles as their alma mater the former being a member of Zeta Phi Fraternity, while the latter is affiliated with Alpha Phi Sorority.

Mrs. Marshall Patton was matron of honor, other attendants including Misses Bernice Wright, Catherine Wilson Jane Cole and Mrs. Walter Nevins, all wearing frocks of blue from dark to paler shades, and carried bouquets of pink and blue, Mrs. Patton's bouquet being of orchids.

Donald Wright served his brother as best man and Walter Nevins, Richard Corbaley, James Wright and Marshall Patton ushered.

Henrietta, Mo., and following the wedding will bring his bride to join the smart naval contingent at the harbor.

One of the enjoyable parties of the past week took place in the Sunset dining-room of Pacific Coast Club, when Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bannister of Los Angeles were hosts at dinner and dancing for Maj. and Mrs. Charles Harris of Fort MacArthur, Mrs. Zulime Graham of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Hart Reaves, Mrs. Guy Culver Smith, Hal Whitney of Los Angeles and Miss Louisa Gibson of New York.

House guests at the home of Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. James Crutchfield, U.S.S. West Virginia, at the harbor have been Mrs. Crutchfield's brother-in-law and sister, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. Ingram C. Sowell, who are en route to their new station at Great Lakes, Chicago, where he has been ordered after having been in command of the Destroyer Wazmouth at San Diego. Mrs. Sowell and Mrs. Crutchfield accompanied by their mother, Mrs. Jack of Chicago, motored into Los Angeles last Monday evening to attend the opening of "Rebound" at the Belasco.

Preceding the hop at Fort MacArthur Saturday night, Lieut. and Mrs. H. H. Newman, Jr., were hosts at a buffet supper at their quarters for Capt. and Mrs. Charles S. Harris, Mrs. Zulime Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Hart Reaves, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Regan of Los Angeles, Capt. Parmelee, Capt. Don R. Norris and Lieut. John Ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Linthicum of Long Beach entertained with an enjoyable beach breakfast and swimming party Sunday morning arranged for Mr. and Mrs. Leighton Collins of Little Rock, Ark., who are friends of their son, Lieut. T. D. Linthicum, U.S.S. Idaho. Mr. and Mrs. Collins are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Banks in Santa Monica. Those who motored to the beach for the day were Mr. and Mrs. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Banks, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Holmes and Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Jacobus of Los Angeles, J. F. Vardaman, Ken Harrison of Little Rock and Lieut. and Mrs. Roger Edison Perry, U.S.S. Saratoga.

The younger service set said goodby to Mrs. Harold Nielson when she left by boat Monday for Seattle for the remainder of the summer. A bride of early spring, Mrs. Nielson was Miss Gladys De Langie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter De Langie of Rhode Island, before her marriage to Ensign Nielson in Chicago May 14, last. The wedding was a quiet one, with the bride's sister, Mrs. George Consoer, as her only attendant and George Consoer, best man. Ensign Nielson was graduated from Annapolis in 1929 and is attached to the U.S.S. Tennessee.

News has been received of the marriage of Miss Katherine Lenore Seidel, daughter of Mrs. Charles Seidel of Rochester, N. Y., to Lieut. James Elbert Briggs, United States Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin R. Briggs of Penfield, N. Y., in St. Luke's Episcopal Church July 19. The bride, given in marriage by her grandfather, William C. Walker, wore white chiffon, her veil of tulle caught to a coronet of rosepoint lace, and she carried white sweet peas and larkspur. Miss Lulu Mabel Williams was maid of honor and Lieut. Frank Maerdain of Fort Niagara, best man. After the honeymoon they will be at home in San Diego while Lieut. Briggs is stationed with the Seventh Bombing Group at Rockwell Field.

FRATERNAL AFFAIRS

STATE SOCIETIES

Greatest of all State society events in Southern California is the annual picnic of former residents of and visitors from Iowa and about half of the 400,000 Hawkeyes of the Southland are expected to attend the picnic next Saturday at Bixby Park, Long Beach. All the usual attractions will be offered. The music will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Mills, known as the "Victory Gospel Singers." The college hour, from 3 to 4 p.m., is always a happy time when hundreds of persons who have attended educational institutions of Iowa meet again.

President Ralph H. Clock will preside. Congressman Joe Crail and Senator Frank Merriam will speak.

The special event of the day will be the golden wedding pageant under the direction of John O. Spielman. All couples who have lived in Iowa and have been married fifty years or more will take dinner together in a reserved shady section and then all will go to the platform for the program. There will be special music for them and several prizes. Bullock's department store has contributed a golden damask lunch cloth and napkins as one of the prizes.

The weekly lunch meeting of the Federation of State Societies will be in the special room of the cafeteria at 542 South Broadway tomorrow at noon. The speakers will be Mr. Ray L. Riley and Lieut.-Gov. H. L. Carnahan.

The annual "round-up" of the Wyomingites will be held today at Sycamore Grove. President William Owen has arranged for county registers and for distribution of coffee and silk badges.

President E. I. Thompson announces that there will be no meeting of the Wisconsin contingent this week, but that the annual summer picnic for Badgers will be on the 23rd inst. at Sycamore Grove.

The New England States Society will omit the evening meeting this week and will hold the annual fall picnic on the 30th inst. at Sycamore Grove. Vermont maple syrup will be served and Boston baked beans and hot coffee supplied.

Texans will meet next Friday evening for their monthly reunion, with program and dancing, at the hall at 1127 South Hope street.

'Duane' Film Contains Many Lively Scenes

Cattle round-ups, rustling parties, midnight rides over the deserted mesa are some of the thrilling scenes seen in the Fox picturization of "The Last of the Duanes," Zane Grey's novel, starring George O'Brien.

O'Brien again assumes the character of Buck Duane, outlaw and gentleman, which he played in "The Lone Star Ranger," first of the Zane Grey series of the Duane family.

On completing "The Last of the Duanes," O'Brien commences work on "Fair Warning," which is adapted from Max Brand's novel "Untamed." Marguerite Churchill, who just returned from playing in Raoul Walsh's "The Big Tall," will be the feminine lead opposite the star.

by Myra Nye

In celebration of her husband's birthday anniversary, Mrs. Sigmund Romberg entertained Tuesday evening with a dinner dance in his honor, honoring the entire Embassy Club for the event.

Featuring the autumn trend in costume, the costume worn by Nadine Moorhead proved of unusual interest to the assemblage, since it was fashioned conclusively the dictum that the brief evening wrap of last season is no more. Her sumptuous model, an Ilari Luick model of contrasting chartreuse and jade green velvet, reached the floor, ending in a long train of the chartreuse, while the flowing overcape of the jade velvet, deeply edged in red fox fur, fell in front gave the effect of short sleeves. The gown was of jade velvet, most decollette and caught at the straps of rhinestones. Long gloves and a tiny turban of jade velvet with a large, soft velvet bow at the back completed the fascinating costume.

Among the eighty-five guests bidden to the affair were Messrs. and Mmes. Oscar Hammerstein II, J. L. Warner, Otto Harbach, Jerome Kern, Darryl Zanuck, William Koenig, Hal Wallis (Louise Fazenda,) Ernst Vadja, Karl Steinland, Jean Hersholt, Victor Varconi, Harold Lloyd, Ralph Blum (Carmel Myers,) Leighton K. Brill, Dr. Harry Martin, Eric Von Stroheim, Erno Rapee, Lou Silvers, Bobby Crawford, Richard Rodgers, Albert Snellenberg and Don Alvarado, Mrs. Arthur Bloch, Natalie Moorhead, Margaret Schilling, Colleen Moore, Leatrice Joy, Dolores Del Rio, Constance Bennett, Marjorie Blanchard, Eleanor Blanchard, Vivienne Segal, Bernice Claire, Alan Crosland, Walter Pidgeon, Reggie Hammerstein, Milton Douglas, Cedric Gibbons, Larry Hart, Herbert Fields, Herbert Somborn, Edgar Allen Wolfe, William (stage) Boyd, Alexander Gray, Eastman M. Markell and Joseph Hasen.

Premiere Parties

Many after-theater supper parties will be given by film notables at George Olsen's Club following the premiere of "Holiday" at the Carthay Circle Thursday night. In keeping with the spirit of the occasion, George Olsen and his orchestra will introduce a new group of musical selections dedicated to Ann Harding, the star of the picture.

Bridge-Tea

Preceding the regular bridge party given Tuesday afternoon by the Dominos at the clubhouse on North Sycamore avenue, Mrs. James Gleason was hostess to a small luncheon party. Among those bidden were Mrs. Paul N. Boggs, Jr. (Dorothy Dwan,) Miss Woodie Lou Hunsaker, Mrs. R. R. Byrd, Mrs. Edgar Wilson, Mrs. Robert Armstrong, Mrs. Anthony Bushell (Zelma O'Neal) and Jo Wallace. The guest of honor for the afternoon was Mrs. Gleason's mother, Mrs. Daniel Webster, who recently came from Oakland to visit her daughter.

Beach Party

Delightful diversions were offered for the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Price, who were the hosts at a novel affair given recently at the Lido Isle Yacht Club. In the afternoon the guests enjoyed bathing, yachting, speed-board riding and bridge. The dinner, which was served in the colorful patio of the club, was followed by a moonlight ride on Newport Bay and dancing in the clubhouse.

Among the guests were Mr. William Courtenay, Miss Louise Dresser, Mrs. Ida Kerns, Mr. Jack Gardner, Mr. Ralph Lewis, Miss Vera Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. John Sainpolis, Mr. and Mrs. David Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Barker, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Haggarty, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Hillyer, Mrs. Louise Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. William Thorner, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. McDevitt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mathewson, Dr. Earnest Trattner, Mr. Charles Buckley, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Miranda, Mrs. Pearl Canfield, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cooke, Mrs. Mel S. Wright, Mr. Dudley Wright, Mr. Malcolm Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tierney, Mr. David C. Duncan, Mr. Ernest Grill, Mr. C. N. Sheetz, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hammond Beall, Mr. William Wickersham, Miss Ella Wickersham.

Wedding Celebration

One of the recent weddings of interest in film circles was the marriage of Miss Peggy Thorneycroft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thorneycroft, to John L. Wheeler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wheeler. The bride's father was associated with Sid Grauman for a number of years. The bridegroom is a film editor at the Paramount studios.

The couple were schoolmates at Hollywood High School some years ago, but the romance began when they met at the home of William Macy two years ago. Following a honeymoon trip through the northern part of the State they will make their home at 624 North Sweetzer avenue, Hollywood.

Regains Popularity

A renewal of the old-time popularity of the Montmartre Cafe was seen Wednesday evening, when a gay throng of cinema folk was in attendance to enjoy a program of dance numbers arranged by the Mosconi Brothers, who were guests of honor. The honoree was Nell Allen, "Miss Oklahoma City." This event marked the beginning of a series of Wednesday night festivities.

Unique Party

Prominent film folk and other guests were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Dimitri Tiomkin (Albertina Rasch,) at a novel Russian party given Friday evening at their residence at Sunset Boulevard and Fairfax avenue.

Decorations and entertainment reflected the atmosphere of the land of the steppes. New and old Russian songs were presented by talented musicians, folk and military dances and oriental novelties were interpreted by stellar performers as special entertainment. Served in native style, the refreshments were suggestive of the land where East meets West and included many dainties ranging from sakuska, to numerous dishes served with caviar.

Two orchestras provided both Russian and American music for dancing, which entertained the guests until a late hour.

Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie McClintoch, Dudley Murphy, Audrie Morrison, Robert Wyler, Edmund Goulding, King Vidor, Eleanor Boardman, Harry Edwards, Jack Buchanan, Sigmund Romberg, Joseph Mankiewicz, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Selznick, Marcel De Sano, Aileen Pringle, Walter O'Keefe, Jeanette Loff, Robert Dolan, Josephine Dunn, Lester Cohen, Mrs. Cohen (Eden Gray,) Frederick Lonsdale, Lady Stanley, Louise Brooks, Frank Tours, Irving Berlin, Rod La Rocque, Dashiel Hammett, Chamdler Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rapf, Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Selznick, Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Fort, Mr. and Mrs. William De Mille, Agnes De Mille, Warren Leonard, Colleen Moore, Lothar Mendez, Ernst Lubitsch, Carey Wilson, Carmelita Geraghty, Harold Grieve, Julanne Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hornblow, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Lowe (Lilyan Tashman,) Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bromfield, Constance Bennett, Willis Goldbeck, Mary Duncan, B. P. Fineman, Margaret De Mille, Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Bogart, Paul Bern, Kenneth McKenna, Kay Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Glazer, H. E. One of the brilliant social affairs of the week in the cinema world was the party given Tuesday evening at the Embassy Club by Mrs. Sigmund Romberg (right) in celebration of her husband's birthday anniversary. Mr. Romberg is here seen with his wife.

RESORT AND HOTEL NOTES

Announcement of the definite opening date of the newly-built Rim-o-the-World Bowl at Crestline in the San Bernardino Mountains was made this week by Clyde Garrett, program director of the Bowl Association. The dedication and first program will be held next Friday evening.

Have you ever had trouble in planning your trip or vacation? Peck Judah, 749 South Hill street, will arrange your itinerary, sell you tickets, make your reservations and do everything but bring the resorts or points of interest to you. All of this is furnished without service charge. Complete information on hundreds of resorts and the various modes of transportation may be had for the asking at the company office.

Cool sparkling atmosphere describes Forest Home in these warm summer months.

Dances every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday have been proving popular at Forest Home this summer and are having even better attendance since the opening of the golf course. Excellent meals, trout fishing, tennis, swimming and hiking are also enjoyed at the Forest Home resort.

The travel and information women of Los Angeles have formed an organization which is to be known as the "Travellarians." This organization held its initial meeting at the Alexandria Hotel after being the guests at dinner of Senator Charles B. Hamilton, assisted by Faye Smalley and Mrs. Smalley as hostess.

The art of riding an aquaplane plowing through the water behind a powerful speedboat is one of the features of the course that is proving highly popular with boys enrolled at the Black-Foxe Boys' Camp at Lake Elsinore, according to Capt. L. L. Cunningham, camp director.

Full instruction in balancing oneself on an aquaplane is being given by Capt. Triggs, in charge of all aquatic activities at the camp. Some of the boys at the camp have become highly efficient in this exhilarating sport.

A list of socially prominent people who have been guests at the Santa Maria Inn during the past week are: Mr. and Mrs. Alan Hale, Mr. and Mrs. Frank May, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Earley and Miss Earley, all from Pasadena; Mrs. Oscar Lawler, Mrs. John D. Stern and Mr. Oscar T. Lawler, all of Beverly Hills; Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich B. Peck, Mrs. Arthur R. Peck, Mrs. James H. Cheek, Mrs. Eleanor F. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Hill, Dr. Lowell C. Frost, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Balch, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Brockman, and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse B. Alexander, all from Los Angeles.

Sunday School Lesson

"The International Sunday School Lesson for August 10 is, "Hannah, a Godly Mother."—I Samuel i:28; ii:1-11, 18, 19; iii:1-18.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

In life's deep experiences, everybody does business with God. That is why women are more religious than men. They go down into the depths of uttermost reality to give a new child to the world; and in this realm of pain and joy and mystery, they know what the event is with a Power beyond themselves. As they watch, with brooding tenderness and anxiety and fear and hope, the growth of the child whose wellbeing means more to them than their own existence, they become aware of a reliance upon One greater than themselves. None of the world's so-called wisdom can expel prayer from the heart of a mother.

In the simple, beautiful and natural story of Hannah, the mother of Samuel, which is the present Sunday-School lesson, we impinge upon the profundities which transcend book-taught knowledge. All penetrating observers of life perceive that there is a woman-wisdom which goes beyond everything that the schools teach. Underlying and overtopping all education, is the woman-quality of an intuitive sense of real and abiding things. Surely this gift, which, in life's deepest valleys and upon life's mountain tips, so often makes the woman more discerning than her mate, is God's special endowment of the mothers of men. They see that final values are spiritual values; and that in the ultimate things, the human soul must traffic with the Infinite.

There are worldly women, it is true, but, usually, only temporarily so. Mother hearts cannot keep away from the altars of God. In that truth lies more of hope for the race than in all the ecclesiastical machinery that men have built up throughout the centuries.

WHAT WOMEN WANT

A lately-popular school of literature—which, happily, is fast going out of fashion—sought to portray woman as a sex-obsessed creature of carnality. It shut its eyes to the outstanding and beautiful truth, illustrated in every avenue and in every alley, that mother-nature is self-sacrificing, spiritual and loyal. Kipling's "Female of the Species," at which professional feminists raged, expresses one of life's great and eternal truths.

And there never was a mother who did not want her son and her daughter to be good. For the discerning spirit, which is heaven's endowment of mothers, gives her to know that the godly life is the happy life. Good men and women make good husbands and wives, and good neighbors and good friends and good citizens. These "emancipated" selfists, who flout God and society's laws, are an unstable lot, and unreliable folk to live with. Nobody who reads the daily newspapers can have missed that point.

ONE MOTHER'S PRIDE

During the war, I saw a mother with her husband and two sons enter the dining room of a New York hotel. All three of the men were in uniform, clean, upstanding soldiers, who had gone into service because, as I happen to know, it was the habit of the whole family to bear their part in every duty that arose. The look of happy pride on that mother's face showed that she envied no queen or wealthy social leader.

Not by word or look had she restrained her men from the free offering of their lives to dangerous duty. She herself at home bore a heroic part in meeting the nation's need. That mother has never had her picture in the papers; and her name is not found in the society columns; and her voice is never heard in public meetings: but she is a successful woman, in the highest meaning of the term, because a happy and wise mother. No wonder the painted-faced habitues of the hotel looked at her with unconcealed envy.

A DOMESTIC TRAGEDY

But I am making the Hannah applications before telling the Hannah story. It is a short and simple one, but every line of it throbs with the red blood of reality. Because of its naturalness, and commonplaceness, it is no less a romance: for there are more romances in every street, and in every village, than are told in a year's fiction.

Elkanah lived at Ramah, a dozen miles from Shiloh, the religious center of Israel at the time, where were the Ark and the Tabernacle. He had two wives, but the favorite, Hannah, had no children; which was sorrow's crown of sorrow to a Hebrew woman. On the yearly visit to Shiloh, for one of the feasts, Hannah tarried at the Tabernacle to pray for a son; even as the Jewish women of the Bagdad region today make pilgrimage to the Tomb of Ezra, on the Tigris River, for the same purpose. So likewise the women of Hebron pray at the tomb of the Patriarchs. All the Orient is dotted with shrines to which childless women resort.

Her lips moved, but her voice was silent, as in agony of supplication Hannah prayed for the supreme boon. Old Eli, the high priest, sitting at the door of the Tabernacle, thought that the overwrought woman was intoxicated, and rebuked her. But when she told her tale he gave her his blessing, and added his prayer to hers.

"UNTO US A SON IS BORN"

That prayer was answered. To Hannah was given the son whom, in advance, she had dedicated to the service of Jehovah. No pen can describe the happiness that thrilled the father and mother in the home at Ramah. In a reverent family, there is something sacramental about the arrival of a new life, fresh from eternity. This son was a direct answer to prayer; and before his birth he had been marked as God's man.

Long it has been the pride and privilege of Christian parents to dedicate their first-born son to the service of the Lord. Thus many of the greatest ministers of the Gospel have become such. In Hannah's case, the gift of Samuel to the church meant that, as soon as he was weaned—perhaps when 5 or 6 years of age, by not uncommon oriental usage—he was set doing boy's work about the Tabernacle.

BULLOCK'S AUGUST CLEARANCE

"THE ONE SALE OF THE YEAR"

THE FIRST MONDAY AUGUST 4

THE FIRST MONDAY

—Three words significant in Bullock's August Clearance—those who have known Bullock's August Clearance in previous years—as well as those who have already contacted Bullock's Twenty-Fourth August Clearance on its first day, Friday, and on "One o'clock Saturday" have a definite vision of what "The First Monday" will mean—and that, on Monday, Bullock's August Clearance will take on the aspect of

---A New Beginning

—All over the store values will be out in a great, gala spread of Opportunity.
—All over the store Enthusiasm, sponsored by sincerity, will reign supreme.
—All over the store Bullock's principles will be in force, directing service toward the winning of Friends prior to the making of Sales—

And Yet This Is One of the Great Sales-Making Events in the World of Merchandising

—The difference and distinction of Bullock's August Clearance and its strict adherence to Bullock's Ideals have won for it a consideration that has enhanced its possibilities as well as its prestige.

—It is because of the high regard in which it is held by highly regarded manufacturers and distributors that they have sought, in many instances, the outlet of Bullock's August Clearance for their clearances, too.

—The fundamental purpose of Bullock's August Clearance—that of clearing Bullock's own stocks—has constantly expanded. Its limits are storewide, as its appeal, from Basement Store to topmost floor. Every section holds its important interest.

—The lower regular prices of today have reached to lower levels of fascinating values.

—Those of us who expected much and should be in the know have been astonished, as well as delighted, at the magnetic nature of the offerings.

—Their character and quality match the attraction of their prices and uphold the reputation of Bullock's; as Bullock's, in turn, stands back of every item with the full strength of this organization. This means something, too.

—Those who have participated in past Bullock's August Clearances know and will continue to come. How good it is to see them—to renew old and to make new friendships; to enjoy the surprise and delight in Bullock's offerings; to see in eyes and to hear from statements the good news that Bullock's August Clearance has again exceeded fond expectations! Almost like a family reunion—this getting-together under the auspices of an occasion that means so much to everyone.

—A glorious adventure. Upstairs and downstairs and from every rack and counter and shelf, story after story unfolds itself telling of merchandising preparation— with its happy ending of savings for Bullock's customers.

—The apparel for women and men and children—the jewelry, the shoes and stockings and gloves—the many accessories, the millinery, the luggage and books and stationery, the silks and velvets and cottons and woolens.

—The negligees, lingerie and corsets—the rugs and chairs and drapes and lamps and suites and occasional pieces for the home—everywhere—value—value! Value!

—And above all and through all the thrill of "The One Sale of the Year"—on its First Great Monday—Every woman, man and child should come—and Thousands will.

LIONAIRES PLAY IN FILM

Worth $51,000,000 Act in "Cimarron"

Bacon Rind to Have Important Role to Travel on De Luxe Railway Trains

BY JOHN SCOTT

Tippee! They're coming, Bacon Rind and fifty good and true from the plains of ma, to make "whoopee" in ood's own back yard. And than that, they are to travel special train, leaving their ends, if any, to browse about pasture.

The vanishing race is ing into the movies. But not the mentary reward, because and every one is a millionaire own right and a substantial unds. Fifty-one million dol- will be represented in the un- and certainly novel caravan, will take part in "Cimarron," film with an 1889 atmosphere Radio Pictures will produce, Richard Dix.

Edna Ferber story is to be a spectacular background by .O., according to present plans. Indian atmosphere of ory is invaluable to the tale the western and southwestern were deemed not the right for the early Oklahoma ns to the Osage tribes were ed.

Chief Bacon Rind leads his rts in the film capital, he inguishes with the one thing ually associated with any Indian, is a tent. No hard ground ing for these idle rich. They register at one of our most lonaire hostelries, and, no , dress for dinner each night.

COLORFUL MONIKERS

Chief is 60 years of age and said to be well-preserved. His ian have names, too. There is Big Bird, Blue Cloud, Forty-five Gun, Young Plant, Flying Eagle, Bird, Willow Bird, Thunder , Iron Eye and Silver Moon, mention a few. Colorful titles, ed, seem to associate with weird ings in moonlight nights and ian schooners lumbering over the original Americans will ar- here about two weeks after ation starts on "Cimarron," h means about the middle of month.

Elaborate plans for "Cimarron" ude 300 horses and mules in stage sequences. These ani- will be imported from Mexico the production. The studio is ting up 1000 vehicles other than ssories which will, of course, be used. It is estimated that ut $100,000 will be paid to extras during the filming. This means that Hollywood players will work for six weeks as drivers, cowhide-riders and pedestrians. 5000 extras will participate the land-rush scene.

FIGURES TO JUGGLE

Statistic hunters will find plenty to wrestle with in this picture. A parade of covered wagons and other vehicles of the 1889 era, seven miles in length, will wend its way over the R-K-O. ranch in San Fernando Valley over Cahuenga Pass, through Hollywood, Los Angeles, Inglewood and to location points. It will require two hours for the procession to pass and the journey will take two days. Seven hundred Indian expert teamsters are being trained to guide the teams through the mazes of modern traffic. One ton of hay will be required daily to feed this assemblage of horses and mules. One hundred and fifty thousand gallons of water will also be needed each day.

Richard Dix is busy buying Stetson hats; the director, Wesley Ruggles, is figuring first on what sort of a deal a modern Indian eats, especially while working in a motion picture; then on how he is going to get the braves just what they want done, and lastly how to tell the difference between White Bird, Iron Eye, Forty-five and the rest.

INDIANS TO MAKE SCREEN MEDICINE

Chief Bacon Rind

Leader of fifty braves all reputed to be millionaires from the plains of Oklahoma who will travel by special train to Hollywood to supply atmosphere for the filming of Edna Ferber's story "Cimarron" at the R.-K.-O. studios. The band is expected to arrive here about the middle of the month and will be quartered in one of the most fashionable of Hollywood's hotels.

WILL SILENTS STAGE RETURN

Question Again to Fore in Hollywood Industry

Warner Emphatic Talkie Now Here to Stay

Mayer and Some Others More Moderate in Views

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

Can the silent picture ever come back?

Perennially, this question arises in Hollywood.

Even after it once quiets down, some event will resuscitate the bothersome inquiry.

Within a year and a half the public has apparently accepted the audible form of entertainment with unqualified zest. The successful talkie is a greater success than any silent film ever could be; but the unsuccessful talkie takes a bigger slump.

Foreign market conditions, and the falling off in box-office returns in many places in America this summer, seem to have induced a new query as to whether some silent pictures should not be made. No studio has actually taken steps in this direction, but it has been rumored that at many a conference behind closed doors the matter has been warmly discussed.

No silent film, of course, would be made without a synchronized score. That would be part and parcel of every so-called mute production—the use of the mechanical sound-reproducing devices for orchestral accompaniment and effects.

INTEREST IN CHAPLIN FILM

The question centers more on whether a film with pantomimic action, rather than dialogue, can be made, and it is undoubted that in this connection the results accruing to Charlie Chaplin's feature "City Lights," which will be released this coming fall, are being awaited with special interest. Chaplin himself holds a definite brief for the future of the silents.

In general, there appears no fundamental alteration in the belief of most motion-picture producers that talkies are the thing

BOWL MIXES TEMPERAMENTS

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

The Hollywood Bowl will mingle a great variety of temperaments during the remaining concerts of the current year. This is the mid-season but it implies no summer lull. Some of the most gifted artists, below, are just now coming to the amphitheater of the hills.

BERNARDINO MOLINARI

Molinari

Molinari, the Mephisto of conductors, supplies the electric sparks, is the dynamo of energy which keeps the Bowl broth boiling. He is an Italian volcano of temperament, in constant state of eruption. In his effective dictatorship there is the gusto of the Latin. On occasions he has been known to use the convincing gymnasium technique of Billy Sunday and his musical converts are numbered by the thousands in America as well as in Europe. As the West lacks Toscanini, Molinari does his best to supply the deficit.

PERCY GRAINGER

Grainger

Grainger, the eternally youthful Australian, returns to the Bowl to celebrate his wedding anniversaries. He is the delightful iconoclast among pianists and composers, a faithful champion of all Nordics, experiments in "beatless music," declares he is indebted to the United States Army, where he played oboe, saxophone, bassoon and Sousaphone for two years during the war, for much of his knowledge of composing and life, and is a believer in musical reciprocity among nations.

PIETRO CIMINI

Cimini

Cimini, a familiar conducting figure on the Bowl rostrum, and also Italian, served his apprenticeship under the great leaders of La Scala, is the best mimic of grand opera stars outside of vaudeville, wins the orchestras over which he presides by witty by-play and inimitable wise-cracks, can be as temperamental as the best of them in flinging down his music and tearing his hair but always recovers his sense of humor, has gained a true world-vision by successfully leading the great opera companies and orchestras here and abroad.

KATHLEEN PARLOW

Parlow

Miss Parlow, a Scotch-Canadian with an American-European education, will justify her reputation as one of the leading woman violinists in the profession, by appearing at the Bowl. She is tall, strong-armed, practical, forceful, an Auer pupil, suffers from stage-fright, and has concertized all over the world. This summer she heads a string quartet at Mills College, where the music lovers of the bay district gather in the new chamber-music hall erected by Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, foremost music benefactress.

ENRIQUE FERNANDEZ ARBOS

Arbos

Arbos, the most celebrated Spanish conductor of the day, will greet his transported countrymen of Southern California late in August. He is an exacting conductor but learned to express himself in Bostonese several years ago when he was a member of the famous Boston Symphony. His sarcasm and wit are only too intelligible to the players under his baton. It is an old Spanish custom to begin orchestral entertainments at 10 p.m., but Bowl routine will necessitate his foregoing this intriguing hour.

MICHIO ITO

Ito

Ito is a modernist among dancers. For the first time in choreographic history "Prince Igor" and "Scheherazade" will be given authentic oriental flavor in dance pageantry when Ito presents his original version to Bowl patrons. His distinguished father, Tamekichi Ito, famous architect of Tokio, and an artist brother who is visiting Hollywood, will aid the dance-master in staging this unique performance. Ito returns to Japan this fall for his first oriental tour since setting forth from home eighteen years ago to make his career abroad.

NO DEARTH SEEN OF BABY STARS

Wampas Would be Hard Put Picking Famous Thirteen

Hollywood Studios Swarming with Promising Players

Producers Expect to Spring New Talent Crop Soon

BY ALMA WHITAKER

If the Wampas were going to elect, as they have in the past, their thirteen most promising baby stars, they would have a tough time this year. Hollywood simply swarms with promising talent.

Each studio seems to have its coterie of "starlets." Hence, although the Wampas has stopped picking young ladies with bright futures, the various film companies are going about it in their own way.

One notes a marked leaning toward brunettes in the new charmers. Even the blonds, with a few exceptions, are the light brunette brand. As, for instance, little Dorothy Jordan, so successful with Novarro in "Devil-May-Care." "The Singer of Seville," and "In Gay Madrid." Dorothy is now elevated to stardom as the heroine of Lorna Moon's "Dark Star," which dear Lorna was never to see. They are enthusiastic about Dorothy at M.-G.-M.

VAMPISH BIT

Mary Doran played "bits" around the lot, after New York stage experience. She won eulogy for a vampish bit in "Divorcee" and so rises to leading lady with Bill Haines in "Remote Control."

Lottice Howell's minor role in "Gay Madrid" proved her a fine singer. She is now slated for quick promotion. Harriet Lake's soprano voice has won her affectionate attention at M.-G.-M., a little Los Angeles girl whose concert work brought her to the notice of the powers. She's barely 13 years of age and brunette. She is Arthur Lake's sister. Conchita Montenegro is another find they are bragging on out there, brought here from Spain where she shone as a dancer, first tried in Buster Keaton's Spanish version of "The Doughboy," and now considered a screen asset par excellence.

TICKET 'CURSE' UNDER ATTACK

New York Theater League Aims at Speculator

Brokerage Sales will be on New Foundation

Picture-house Merchandising Methods Educate

BY WILLIAM HAMILTON CLINE

The most hopeful recent sign of progress, so far as the legitimate stage is concerned—at least in Gotham, its fountainhead in America—is the formation lately of the League of New York Theaters under the presidency of Arthur Hopkins, one of its real leaders. As one of its prime purposes is the abolition of ticket speculation, "buys" and "cut rates"—the triple curses that have well-nigh obliterated it—the league hopes thereby to put the stage back on the basis which once justified its use of the term "legitimate," and at the same time to merchandise the shows produced there as other goods are sold—on a straightout, nongyp policy, at prices fixed and reasonable. As the lack of this selling method has been the greatest fault of the show world—peculiar almost wholly to stage plays—perhaps this is the rainbow in the clouds that have so long overhung dramatics.

Not that the league proposes to do away wholly with the sale of tickets through brokers. Quite the contrary; that custom is so firmly a part of theatrical custom there that in many houses about the only purpose of the box office is to count up at night. But the brokerage sales will be on a new foundation—at a fixed and unvarying advance over regular rates, no matter what the attraction or the theater, or its popularity.

GOLD-DIGGERS

Heretofore, in New York, a successful show whose tickets were in demand was used by the speculators as a gold mine and prices for seats were "all that the traffic would bear" and often much more. It was no trick at all, even in the case of sell-outs, to obtain front-row pairs as late as curtain time, if you would pay the premium at the brokers.' As everyone wished to see these particular offerings, especially the many out-of-town visitors, and buyers from the hinterland, the opportunity for gouging was ideal and never overlooked. The specs drew on a subservient management for all they wished; and, while the house received only the regular tariff—save in cases of a stand-in and a split, often arranged—the brokers fattened, the foolish paid and the great public in general perforce stayed away.

Again, the "buy" prevailed. A manager sold his show or large blocks of his choice seats outright to the brokers and they paid at a reduced rate per seat, which seats they resold at an advance, but still under the published tariff. Those who went to the box office found they were paying more than the speculators' rates and didn't feel any too good over it, nor did they keep still about it, either, as well may be imagined. The result was again an alienation of the regular public and an abbreviated run.

Between these two schemes the great mass of amusement seekers were simply driven away from stage shows.

LESSON FROM PICTURES

Taking a lesson from the smart merchandising methods of their picture-house brethren, the stage producers and managers are putting their business on a similar plane. They will cut out the gyps by keeping control of their own tickets, says Hopkins. A standard fee for brokers will be maintained and the public will be informed of it, as is the case in London, so purchases may be made with open eyes. Agencies that do not conform will be deprived of their quotas. "Buys" will be out, and so will cut rates.

It looks good—on paper. One flaw is that not all Gotham's producers are in the league. Another is that always showmen have regarded the dollar in the pocket as worth much more than others in prospect; having an eye, that is, only for the immediate profit. But at least—provided Hopkins and his confreres stick it out—a beginning has been made to clean up the Augean stables of New York theatricals. If only this new Hercules can stay on the job till it be finished!

FIESTA PLAY TO BE SEEN

California Historical Production Will Be Staged at Santa Barbara Tomorrow Night

One of the interesting features in connection with the colorful Old Spanish Days Fiesta, to be held this week at Santa Barbara, will be the production of an original California play, "Emperatriz" (The Empress) by F. Day Tuttle.

The play, enacted by members of the Santa Barbara community players group, directed by Irving Pichel, will be staged in Lobero Theater tomorrow evening.

RUTH NELSON IN TITLE ROLE

Ruth Nelson will be seen in the title role.

For three years the Channel City theater has produced its fiesta play. They have, on each occasion, dealt with the history of California. They have given to the world a purely local product, based upon a purely local theme.

In view of this it was with something of a task before him that F. Day Tuttle, for the last few years a resident of Santa Barbara, undertook the writing of this year's fiesta play. He searched the records of California's history, and hit upon the story of Lola Montes.

He found that little was known of her actual stay in this State, but that one story put her at the head of a plot to make a Spanish California empire out of the country. If successful, Lola Montes would become empress. Beyond this brief story, the curtain of Lola's history was drawn. However, possessed of a fine sense of dramatic values and possibilities, Tuttle saw his chance. He would bring Lola within the very shadow of this crown—at least for one night. So he wrote his play, "Emperatriz," weaving into its theme a thrilling plot which, had it ever materialized, would have altered the destinies of the South Pacific slope.

"LET'S PRETEND" TYPE

"The central action of my play," says Mr. Tuttle, "is purely imaginary. The only grain of fact on which it is founded is the report which has come down the years that such a plot existed. There is, I believe, a letter to that effect in someone's possession. However, the play is of the frankly 'let's pretend' theater. The snowstorm in the last scene, and the sleigh which carries the cast away from the audience's sight, is at the opposite pole from the psychological, sur-realistic drama with which we have been familiar now for more than ten years.

"I have taken the liberty of imagining the concert and the great banquet at which most of the action of the play takes place. All of it, however, is quite possible. Lola Montez was in Grass Valley, at the time of the play's action and the characters surrounding her are, in every case but one, real persons."

ROBERTS TO DIRECT

Stephen Roberts will soon start directing the second Mermaid comedy at Educational Studios. The story, as yet untitled, brings together a cast of well-known favorites, such as: Bernard Granville, Dick Stewart, Katherin McGuire, Jerry Drew, Al Alt, Marcia Manning and Rae Daggett.

TASTE IN BOOKS ADVANCES

Publishers' Lists Show Public Demand Ahead of What it is Being Fed Upon

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

That public taste is in advance of what it is being fed on is the conclusion reached after a consideration of the lists of best sellers put out by Brentano's, Baker & Taylor, Bowker and others, including reports from Los Angeles book stores.

The appended list gives the non-fiction titles in most demand during the last three or four months. What becomes apparent from a study of this from the welter of books offered the public has selected the best. By best I mean the most original, most vital and best written.

Heading the list is "The Story of San Michele," by Axel Munthe. This autobiography of a continental doctor was published about a year ago, had no special advertising, gave no promise of becoming a big seller. It got good reviews, the early readers liked it and told their friends about it and sales picked up. The publishers then began to push it by wide advertising and it forged ahead until it headed the list. Why? It is picturesque, frank, human. It records an unusual life, marked by independence of thought and action. And it takes the American reader away from his plodding routine to Paris and Capri and to new values and a new way of life. It is, in short a story of an adventurous spirit freely expressing itself. Certainly, it is no cheap, commonplace book.

One may hazard the guess that the popularity of the Maurois Byron is as much due to the yearning for romance, even if it has to be vicarious, to the wish to escape from the contemplation of bootlegging and stock speculation, harassing business conditions and a low state of social life, as to the way Maurois presents the self-willed, spoiled but courageous Byron, who flouted the society that had idolized him and was duly punished for his flouting.

LIFE WAS BATTLE

"The Grandeur and Misery of Victory," Clemenceau's last fulminations, is another revelation of an irreconcilable. His whole life was a battle, which was what he wanted it to be. Wanted it so fervently that he lashed himself into action even on his deathbed, determined to keep up the fight, and with waning strength, but no lack of fire, dictated these memories, opinions, attacks. Reading them, one says, "There was a man," even though he was wrong half the time.

"Marti Hari" is another book that appeals to the romantic in us and to our adoration of exceptional personality. Marti Hari was some spy! Her life is as thrilling as the best Oppenheim story. Mati is described as a less beauty and a peerless liar who captivated generals, politicians, cabinet members, diplomats, and who baffled the secret service agents of three countries. The moral seems to be if you are going to be a spy and a courtesan, aim high.

CHANGE REVEALED

"The Adams Family," by James Truslow Adams, likewise exalts personality, independence, courage. This fascinating, biographical study of our foremost family through five generations, all dissenters but the present one, reveals the change in American ideals as we have developed from a little group of colonies engaged in agriculture and smuggling to the greatest manufacturing nation trying to learn how to be a world power. It is scholarly, sympathetic, critical. The era that makes it a best seller is not so hopeless.

The award of the Pulitzer prize in biography to Marquis James's "The Raven" brought it back to the list of best sellers. It, too, exalts personality, courage, and the will to defy public opinion.

Why "Mary Gladstone" is popular is difficult to say. In diaries and letters it gives an entertaining picture of high life among the Victorians, with intimate glimpses of all sorts of bygone celebrities.

BEST DEMANDED

A masterly historical study is Fulop-Muller's "The Power and Secret of the Jesuits." That it is being widely read would alone prove that there is a large body of discriminating readers today who de-

COMEDY WILL OPEN TODAY

"Tea for Three" to be Presented at El Capitan Theater with Trio of Players Starred

Roi Cooper Megrue's comedy, "Tea For Three," hailed a few years ago as one of the most sophisticated and daring plays of the day, will be presented at El Capitan Theater, starting today.

It costars three players, who come from as many parts of the country. Ernest Glendinning and Tom Moore are the two men. Gladys George is the woman. Glendinning is a New York actor. He has just finished a season in "Candlelight" with Gertrude Lawrence. Tom Moore, of course, is well known locally for appearances on both stage and screen.

STOCK EXPERIENCE

Miss George, the third of the triumvirate, hails from the Middle West. She has played stock and super-stock in Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, and in such plays as "Dancing Mothers," "Rose Briar," "Why Men Leave Home," "The Squall," "Romance" and others.

This actress, blond and vivacious, was summoned from Salt Lake City when Kay Hammond, originally slated for the feminine lead, was taken ill.

"The play is charming and the lines sparkling," Miss George said during a brief rest in rehearsal. "The role is not an easy one, however, it requires poise and at the same time a vivacity and appeal. Without any one of these the character is apt to fall flat. The main interest is probably in the two men, one my stage husband and the other, the man my husband believes to be my secret lover. In carrying the brunt of individual scenes with first one, then the other and with both men at times, the role develops an importance not to be treated lightly, at least as far as my personal behavior on the stage is concerned."

ETERNAL TRIANGLE

The "eternal triangle" situation is the theme of "Tea For Three." The play is not new, but then again the plot is not old. The suave and witty treatment of the piece, brought up to date, of course, as far as properties, costumes and certain lines are concerned, takes a certain ironical trend, according to Miss George.

There is a somewhat different-than-usual punch at the end of the play that will more than make up for what might be somewhat stereotyped situations, she believes. And the last named are bound to crop out in any drama which has an "eternal triangle" plot.

The three main characters seem quite ideally fitted to their respective parts. Glendinning is the "at home in any situation" type. Moore, more of the substantial and easy-going character, and Miss George the pert and snappy wife gives the impression that she is quite capable of being unfaithful to a husband, but really isn't.

HONOLULU FOR MONTE

Monte Blue, the stalwart hero of many pictures, is leaving Hollywood for a month's vacation in Honolulu. According to Monte this is the first real vacation he has had in ten years. Following it he plans to take his family on a trip around the world.

MEMORIAL PICTURES ON DISPLAY HERE

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

An exceptionally pleasing group of paintings from the Phillips Memorial Gallery, Washington, D. C., is on exhibition at the Los Angeles museum until the 31st inst. These pictures are being circulated throughout the country by the American Federation of Arts.

For those who are not acquainted with the Phillips Memorial Gallery an explanation is due. The project is unique in America since its sole object is to present pictures of fine art value alone—was inaugurated in 1918 by Duncan Phillips in memory of his father and brother.

MOTIVES EXPLAINED

In the volume "A Collection in Making," written by Duncan Phillips and published by Weyhe of New York, Mr. Phillips explains how he conceived the building of a collection for public education and represents it as a creative activity which came when grief had almost overwhelmed him. His plan, that of "getting the best in art without any concessions to public taste, and placing the works in a pleasant, homelike environment, has been highly praised. And since the collection and its display is a one-man activity and that man has fine taste, the Phillips Memorial Gallery is considered one of America's finest since the founder's plan was to interest people in the best modern art he includes old masters only as these lead up to the achievements.

I am forewarned to the catalogue of the Los Angeles showing, the collector explains his motives in desiring to dispose of this group of pictures shown here.

The showing discloses his catholicity of taste—in other words, his ability to see art aside from any question of style. Every picture here has quality and illustrates its maker's special qualities. There are added to the group a few works loaned from other sources.

There are no old masters unless Courbet, Duveneck or George Fuller can qualify. All of these are finely represented, the Frenchman by a solidly built "Glen at Ornans," a landscape rich in limited play of red-bronze foliage against iron-blue hillside, the figure painter of Cincinati by what is claimed as his masterpiece, "The Music Master," a fine portrait which is reproduced on the books and art page. Fuller, who may be an ancestor of Arthur B. Davies, is seen in the full charm of his mystico-romantic style in a "Pasture With Geese," a beautiful work which suffers here from the color of the wall.

TWILIGHT POET

Another Frenchman, Le Sidaner, is here at top notch in "Gypsy Camp Wagon." This painter is both the analyst and the poet of twilight. Arthur B. Davies is superbly represented by "Rose to Rose," one dreamy, auburn-haired girl brushing another's hair in a dusky landscape.

Childe Hassam is also at his finest in a delicious small landscape with trees and a tiny nude, and so is Emil Carlson in a moonlight with a great tree and white house painted in subtle tonality. A canvas was worked on by both Monticcelli and Mathew Maris seems actually to combine the former's jewelled color with the latter's shy, mysterious atmosphere. Feasts of color in another vein are the two Venetian evocations of eighteenth century moments by Emma Ciardi. This Italian woman paints with light and her cool colors are refined and delicious. Her people and buildings live only in the light from which she seems to draw them with her brush.

FIVE LAWSONS

There are five Ernest Lawsons, all characteristic of this American colorist, a big poetic Paul Daugherty that looks like the California coast, a sober marine by Rockwell Kent that bears no signature, and two decorative pictures by that fine colorist, Augustus Vincent Tack, the mural painter.

A picture that obtains deserved public attention is "Cottage by the Sea," by the American, W. L. Picknell, a veritable summing up of all that is charming in the English landscape tradition. In it soft gold evening light brings a cottage out of shadow and beyond it one sees a long sound of the sea flat under a windy evening sky.

William M. Chase, Boudin, Frank Benson, Walter Griffen, Albert Groll, W. L. Lathrop, Hayley Lever, Rene Menard, Jerome Myers, Hobart Nichols, Marjorie Phillips, Camille Pissaro, Helen Turner and Irving Wiles are others whose works are included in the group, making an important and grateful exhibition that no art lover should miss.

ANN HARDING DISPLAYS VIKING QUALITY

BY ELENA BOLAND

There is about Ann Harding a Viking quality which makes her intolerance of weak stories and weak roles instantly understandable.

Since her first appearance on Broadway, which was in "Tarnish," Miss Harding declares she has had a run of characterizations who suffer and sob. "Mary Dugan" was her last for the theater, but her reputation for suffering preceded her to Hollywood and she has been "put upon" in every picture she has done.

Not that Miss Harding objects to suffering, for art's sake. She doesn't mind so long as the story and her part are direct, believable and powerful. For weakness and illogic she has no patience. Perhaps because those two entities are totally foreign to the mood and construction of "Holiday," Philip Barry's challenge to youth. Miss Harding is unstinted in her praise of the screen version which opens Thursday evening at Carthay Circle.

DIFFICULT TO ADAPT

"I never saw the New York production," she discussed. "I read the play and saw the Duffy presentation at the Hollywood Playhouse. I thought it was a splendid thing, but tremendously difficult to adapt to the screen. In the first place, the theme itself is alight with practically no action value. The play's whole importance depends on the dialogue and the various psychological moods. And it is through the lines alone that the story is told.

"We had long debates, line by line. I hated to see one of them go. Some scenes, of course, and some of the nicest had to be sacrificed for the sake of continuity. Linda, my part, proved difficult too. She is really an outsider, but what a grand person. She stands on the edge of it all and forces her way into the plot by sheer personality. In the first script Linda was practically nothing, but by fighting for a line here and there she has been built up to her true importance."

"HOLIDAY" HAS COMEDY

There is comedy to "Holiday," a light intangible humor tossed out of resentment and hurt. Much of it is Linda's. But the play's tone is tinged with tragedy, the only real kind of tragedy, according to Miss Harding.

"Tragedy does not exist unless it is built on inevitability, unless the circumstances of fate are too strong to combat. That is why I've never had any sympathy with 'Romeo and Juliet.' Juliet had her destiny in her hands and threw it aside. It was her own fault. She has always irritated me."

Ann Harding is one of the few exiles to Hollywood openly to declare her renouncement of the stage. She has no wish to see New York again. In fact, it is all she can do to tear herself away from the hilltop home which she and her husband, Harry Bannister, have just finished even to go into Hollywood.

"Had my memories of the theater been more pleasant, I suppose I shouldn't be so definite about not returning. But all I can remember is being sick and having to go on every night just the same. This went on for years. I played through laryngitis and tonsilitis (my favorite combination) two years of it once, played through sprained ankles and even measles. Here when I get sick the studio sends me home to bed and I get well. Is there any wonder I like pictures?"

ANY WONDER?

Miss Harding's interest in talkies is not limited to the actor's profession. She is actively concerned with the writing of suitable scripts and is collaborating on "Jane Eyre." Mentally she can never sit still and she looks ahead to the day, of which she has been told, when her acting days will be over. But by that time she will be probably turning out scenarios, and they will be intelligent, on a large scale.

Although Ann Harding is utterly happy in Hollywood, she is not of it. Laden with tales as to its horrors she arrived here nearly two years ago, frightened. The first thing she and her husband did was to remove themselves to the San Fernando Valley and now to their hilltop which seems to command a view of nearly all Southern California. They are too simple, and too wise, to compete with the crowds. Their pleasures are enjoyed together; Jane, their blond baby, and their home where they swim in a pool by day and at night rush to the roof to watch the stars.

WHAT?—NO EYE TO MOVIES?

Here's Strange Case of Robert Williams in 'Rebound' Who Wants to Go Back to New York

Only 30 now, and with twenty years of stage experience behind him! That's Robert Williams, who plays the temperamental, moody artist who fails to propose in time, in "Rebound" at the Belasco Theater.

It is Robert's very first visit to the Coast, brought here expressly for this role, which he created in New York with Hope Williams. When I met him he was nursing a sumptuous case of sunburn, acquired while playing bridge on the sands at Santa Monica in the irreducible minimum o fnegligee now permitted. His watch had also gone on the blink with the usual grain of beach sand. "My friends warned me," he sighed, "but like most easterners, I wanted to get the whole tan in one day, and couldn't believe one had to leave one's watch in the house. Ouch."

ROBERT WILLIAMS

But unlike most wayfarers to this clime, Robert has no eye on the movies. Instead, he continues as Al Woods's protege.

"Mr. Woods has guided my career for years now. He trained me for character roles, such as the brother in 'The Trial of Mary Dugan,' the son in 'Madame X.' Ann Harding was my Mary Dugan. . . . I think she is the finest actress in America today. I was crazy about her . . . and chiefly because she was crazy about her husband and baby. And when my present wife followed Ann in the role, why there you are! Dugan was my favorite role, I guess. But I like this moody artist-fellow, too. We always love roles we create, you know. I've had to do a great many young lover roles, but the character ones are better, and a man lasts a good deal longer in them."

"I am crazy about my next role, in Hemingway's "A Farewell to Arms." Williams went on. "I'm a coward, a deserter and finally lose all that I deserted from the army for. But somehow I'm a normal fellow, and win sympathy because of it. Hemingway is a very tender person, thinks of little human things that are so big in the final account. I leave here August 16 and we launch 'Farewell to Arms' on September 4."

Presently Williams was explaining that twenty years' experience. "We lived in South Carolina, my people are Welsh, I ran away at 10 and secured a child role with Mabel Page in 'A Little Child Shall Lead Them' . . . and sang between the acts. Later I was on a Mississippi show boat. We did all the plays after they had been first in New York, then in stock."

It was with the utmost innocence that he discoursed upon Hollywood manners and customs. The matrimonial situation, he said, saddened him. He spoke tenderly of domesticity and fond monogamy and small houses within one's income, as against prodigal display, so that I never would have suspected that the present Mrs. Robert Williams was Ms. 3 . . . (And the fellow's only 30, mind you!) Had not a person who "knew him when" crudely enlightened me, half an hour later. But then, of course, Al Woods trained the chap for a character actor . . . and he was feeling nice and domestic at the moment.

Robert says he believes enormously in the power of thought on conditions, wrong thought on bad business and unemployment, wrong thought on divorce in Hollywood, and so on. But he seems to have held some unwise thoughts on the matter of sunburn, which so far alive oil had failed to alleviate.

Cooley Still Has Status of Juvenile

Sixteen years ago he was signed for his first picture role as a juvenile. Today, surprising as it may seem, Hallam Cooley retains that status, though frequently a hyphen and "comedian" are added.

HALLAM COOLEY

Cooley, who plays an important part in "Holiday," the forthcoming Pathe attraction at the Carthay Circle Theater with Ann Harding, Mary Astor and Edward Everett Horton featured, has had a distinctly unique career. He has undoubtedly, during those sixteen years, played as many important roles as any screen artist. Yet through it all, he has never secured that coveted designation of "star billing."

Cooley himself regards this an asset, and a compliment. For while he has gone consistently along with more or less prominence, a myriad of other players have soared to stardom and declined to obscurity. While he has never been credited with "stealing" a picture, he has, in the vernacular, stretched many a "single" into a "two-bagger."

Though a holdover from the silent picture era since the old Selig days, Cooley was one of the first to appear in talking pictures. He has been prominently cast in more than a score of them in the past two years. Most recently he was secured by Fox for a role in Rube Goldberg's "Soup to Nuts."

Haines Gets Laughs With Naturalness

Seven years ago, when Fred Niblo, identified with comedy on the stage, directed his last comedy of the screen and turned to dramatic work, he thought that drama would be far more difficult to produce than stories with laughs.

Now he's not so sure. Niblo, who directed his first comedy in seven years in William Haines's new picture, "Way Out West," now at Loew's State Theater, inclines to the view that laughs are a good deal harder to get than tears.

"A laugh depends on a good idea plus the most accurate of timing," declared Niblo recently. "You can spoil the point of a good laugh by making it a bit too quick or too slow.

"Of course, Haines is a natural laughmaker. He is funny on the screen and off, and has the best comedy sense I have ever seen in an actor.

"I think that Haines's type of story is the ideal in comedy, because in addition to laughs, we have some fine serious moments, a thrill or two and a really convincing love story. Too often a comedy sticks solely to laughs and sacrifices realism in so doing. Byron Morgan and Alfred Block wrote a story in this case that I think is as good drama as it is comedy."

The new picture shows Haines as a circus barker who turns cowboy on a western ranch. Leila Hyams is the heroine, and Polly Moran and Cliff Edwards provide a comedy team as the ranch cook and a comedy cowboy. Francis X. Bushman, Jr., plays Haines's rival for the hand of the heroine.

Boyd Selected for Part in Sea Picture

William Boyd, who deserted the Broadway stage a year ago to become an equally important character in talking pictures, has finally been assigned to a role paralleling his most notable creation on the legitimate stage as the vagabond sergeant in "What Price Glory." The part is a museum navy officer opposite George Bancroft in Paramount's "Rollin' Down to Rio," described as a story of the sea as realistic as was the Stallings-Anderson war drama.

Boyd came to Hollywood for United Artists a year ago and was chosen for featured roles in several of the most important pictures on the forthcoming season's schedule. They include "The Storm" for Universal, "The Spoilers" and "Rollin' Down to Rio" for Paramount.

'Lucrezia' Now Being Shown at Filmarte

Once again history supplies a powerful theme for a cinema drama. "Lucrezia Borgia," which was filmed in Italy and is now showing at the Filmarte Theater.

Lucrezia, a member of the famous Borgia family of Italian history, is a dazzling figure against the background of the Renaissance. The story unfolded upon the screen reconstructs the life of that early day when the powerful Borgias wielded their influence over all Europe.

Lucrezia and her brother Cesare, portrayed by Lina Haid and Conrad Veidt, were the particular storm centers of a series of spectacular events that still thrill with their magnificence and cruelty.

The film, it is said, has been given a lavish production with magnificent sets, rich and picturesque costumes.

Bard Showing 'The Big Pond'

Maurice Chevalier is holding spotlight honors for Bard's Downtown this week in "The Big Pond," an adaptation of the stage comedy of the same name.

Opposite Chevalier is seen Claudette Colbert the French girl by birth, brought up in this country, who speaks without a trace of an accent.

The story follows the adventures of a young Parisian in his endeavors to become a successful American business man.

MODERN PORTIA SEEN

Elsie Ferguson makes her initial bow in talking pictures in "Scarlet Pages," current offering on the screen of Warner Brothers Downtown Theater. She has the role of a woman attorney who defends a young woman against a murder charge, not knowing until the trial is over that the girl is her own daughter.

The supporting cast includes Marion Nixon, Grant Withers, John Halliday, Helen Ferguson, De Witt Jennings, Charlotte Walker and Wilbur Mack. Ray Enright directed.

A Larry Ceballos Revue "On the Levee," featuring Pert Kelton, Fortunadio and Chunelli, Dave Barnum, Lu Anne Meredith, Gordon Smith and the Ceballos Girls accompanied by Warner Brothers Augmented Orchestra, is an added program feature.

CINEMA PERSONALITIES

Jack Oakie in "The Sap from Syracuse," Paramount

Robert Ames and Ann Harding in "Holiday," Carthay

Viola Dana headed Vaudeville, R.K.O.

REVUE HAS MANY STAGE FAVORITES

Cast of "Oh, Judge" Shows Numerous Celebrities of Other Plays

A "Who's Who" of the cast of "Oh, Judge," new musical farce now entering its third week at the Vine Street Theater, reveals many prominent stage favorites. Some are making their local debut in this attraction, and others are well known here.

NENETTE VALLON

Bernard Granville, comedian, was featured in the "Ziegfeld Follies" during the heyday of Fannie Brice, Lyn Pennington and the late Bert Williams. He afterward appeared in "No, No, Nanette," "Castles in the Air," "Yes, Yes, Yvette," and "The Desert Song."

Mary Hutchinson, ingenue, won popularity here in "Follow Thru" and in "The Yellow Jacket." Her outstanding film roles were in "The Potters," for First National, and in "Pick 'Em Young," for Pathe.

Rodney McLennan, juvenile, achieved an overnight success in Florenz Ziegfeld's notable musical comedy, "Rosalie," starring Marilyn Miller.

Nanette Vallon, as the girl reporter in the Vine Street show, enjoys the record of having been featured on the Coast for seventy-nine successive weeks in "The Desert Song," much of which time was played here at the Mason, Majestic and Mayan. Prior to "The Desert Song," she appeared with Louis Wolheim in "What Price Glory."

Peggy Cornell, specialty dancer, is an alumnus of Earl Carroll's "Vanities" and R.-K.-O. vaudeville.

Convict Role Assigned to William Powell

While William Powell appears as a convict in "Shadow of the Law," now playing at Pantages Hollywood, his new starring picture is not a prison story. The drama only begins with prison. The most breath-taking action begins with Powell's escape from the penitentiary.

William Powell has never had such a powerful and thoroughly sympathetic character to portray on the screen, it is said. The young engineer of the story is a believable person caught in a net of circumstances which might happen to anyone.

In the cast supporting Powell are Natalie Moorhead, seen opposite the star in "The Benson Murder Case," Marion Schilling and Regis Toomey.

Fanchon and Marco's "Gems and Jams" Idea is presented as the stage entertainment accompanying the screen feature. Slim Martin conducts the orchestra in the musical portion of the program.

Trophy To Be Awarded at Olsen's Club

A silver trophy cup will be awarded to the winning couple in tonight's dancing contest at George Olsen's new club, Culver City.

Opening April 23 to a notable assemblage of stage and screen stars, producers, directors, composers and other celebrities of the Hollywood colony, Olsen's has been setting the pace for nocturnal diversion ever since.

Eddie Cantor, Marilyn Miller, Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Vivienne Segal, Walter Catlett, Waring's Pennsylvanians, Mack Sennett, Jean Harlow, Olsen and Johnson, and others of the cinema and footlights have been guests of honor at Olsen's Wednesday night programs.

Murray Had Leading Part in Stage Play

"The Matrimonial Bed," now at Warner Brothers Hollywood Theater, was taken from the stage play, "What a Man," which John T. Murray produced at the Hollywood Playhouse a few months ago. Murray, it will be remembered, enacted the lead in the stage play, while Frank Fay will be seen in this role on the screen.

John T. Murray is not only a screen actor and vaudeville headliner, but an author as well. It is said that his rewriting of the last act of the stage play caused First National to buy the story for the screen. Vivian Oakland, his wife, has the featured feminine role.

Chester Morris in "The Big House," Belasco

Dolores Costello in "Hearts in Exile," Tower

Marion Nixon in "Scarlet Pages," Warner's Downtown

William Powell in "The Shadow of the Law," Pantages

WINNING JUST HABIT WITH FREDRIC MARCH

He took a chance and won. Then he repeated the performance.

Since, winning has become a habit with Fredric March, the young actor who takes the part of the district attorney that sends Claudette Colbert to prison in "Manslaughter," current attraction at the Paramount Theater.

Sure things never have appealed to March. That is why he is playing leading roles in talking pictures, rather than occupying a banker's office.

When he was graduated from the University of Wisconsin with a number of honors, including a scholarship, March had a career all cut out for him. The scholarship award was a position with the National City Bank of New York.

After a few months of handling other people's money, March decided he could make more for himself and have a better time doing it by following his intense desire to go on the stage. With nothing but ambition and experience in college theatricals to back him up, he resigned his position.

He won his gamble with fate by getting a place with the Belasco stock company in New York almost immediately. A part in the play, "Debonair," was his first and he made it stand out so that the Theater Guild engaged him to appear in a number of productions.

March flirted with chance for the second time when he elected to go west for more stock experience rather than remain on Broadway under contract to William A. Brady. He felt the additional experience would bring him bigger opportunities in the end.

How big those opportunities actually would be, March did not realize at the time.

Fortune played right into his hand by bringing him to Los Angeles in the leading role of "The Royal Family" in the autumn of 1928, just after the screen had found its voice. Paramount executives, on the alert for promising stage-trained talent, signed him for a role in "The Dummy." He spent his days on a sound stage in Hollywood and his evenings before the footlights at the Belasco Theater.

When "The Dummy" was finished, March signed a long-term contract with Paramount. Again, he took a chance. At the time, many still were predicting that talking films would prove but a passing fad. Others opined that stage players would not survive in the contest with established film favorites.

Once more, March emerged a winner. He has appeared in one picture after another, with each role bringing him added screen popularity.

He does not look in the least like a gambler, this quiet-mannered young man who has won so many tilts with chance. Nor does he consider himself one. His decisions all have been based on his best judgment. Time has proved it sound.

COLLINS PLANS FINE PLAYS

England's Youngest Producer, Now in Hollywood, will Present Only Good Drama

BY ALMA WHITAKER

The production of "Fata Morgana" at the Hollywood Playhouse has proved an astonishing success, and this in the dog-days, too.

The producer of Ernst Vajda's precious mirage is Arthur Greville Collins, 23 years of age, ex-hero of the Royal Flying Corps during the war, lent to the United States of America to test planes at the factory after he had been severely wounded. He arrived in Hollywood less than a year ago and was mainly introduced as the husband of our lovely Betty Ross Clark, whom he met and married here in a swift two-week romance during 1921.

ARTHUR COLLINS

We knew vaguely that he was London's youngest producer and that his production of Vajda's "Fata Morgana" had run two years in London. His first opportunity to "show us," however, came with "And So to Bed," for the Civic Repertory. It made no startling hit, but was an amusing novelty. Then came the ill-starred production of "Rope's End" for Noel Madison, too grim a thing to catch our favor.

Now in the long ago, every London manager had turned down "Fata Morgana" as being too uncommercial. Betty and Arthur read the play and met the author, and it was Betty who urged Arthur to take a chance on it, with the dazzling results now known. So again, it was Betty who urged the production here, and Betty's judgment is proven to the hilt. Martin Flavin, author of "The Criminal Code," says it is one of the finest productions he has seen. Just as Harry Rapf of M.-G.-M. has already seen it twice.

MELODRAMA FIRST

Before "Fata Morgana" in London, Collins had chiefly produced melodrama. But long before that, he says, "I learned the trade in the box-office of the old Vaudeville Theater when I was 10, where the manager was a friend of my father's. Later I was to take over that same theater and produce my own plays, Lucille La Verne in "Sun-up" and Olga Ludo in "Tarnish." Olga is a star now, but I was able to give her her first chance."

"But I started early. I played the heavy and managed a play called 'The Freedom of Suzanne' when I was 14," said Collins, "before I knew what a 'heavy' meant. I've always loved it. I want to be a producer here now, putting on first-class, fine plays, imaginative, poetical, but box-office successes, too. Ernst Vajda is writing another for me and Mrs. Vajda is keeping after him for me. He is the best author I ever worked with. Most authors shudder to see you change a comma or a sentence. Vajda can sit at rehearsals and never make a remark. But I'm sympathetic with authors. Successful plays are 75 per cent author, 20 per cent production and 5 per cent acting, which is why so many silent picture stars cannot make good on the stage. They are not used to revering the author.

WITH MEDIOCRE

"Talking pictures, by the way, only compete with the mediocre play. A good play can always fill the theater. But if 'Fata Morgana' is done in pictures, I would like to see Garbo and Tom Douglas do it. Garbo's voice would go well as Hungarian. Oh, but it could be a delicate, poetic thing."

Collins lost two brothers in the war and barely escaped death himself. It was after his service with the United States government that he came to Hollywood, met Betty, was married at the Riverside Mission Inn and returned to London to make his real fame. He has also produced in Australia, just before coming back here.

His mother lives in England and adores listening to them on the radio. Both he and Betty made quite a hit on the air in Australia. Arthur Collins is using a stylish lighter with a watch set in it which keeps perfect time. It was sent anonymously by an admirer "In gratitude for a perfect production" apropos of "Fata Morgana."

Betty, who starred here in "Remote Control," will soon be seen in another stage play. The only other member of their household is Gleek, a handsome police dog with a great weakness for being petted.

"HELL'S ANGELS" TO HAVE DUAL NEW YORK PREMIERE

Keenest sort of interest is being evidenced by Hollywood in preparations for the dual premiere of "Hell's Angels" in two theaters on New York's Broadway in view of the continued success of the Howard Hughes $4,000,000 aerial spectacle, as a Sid Grauman presentation now entering its eleventh week at Grauman's Chinese Theater.

Attention was directed to the production through its record-breaking world premiere here, hailed the greatest in theatrical history, and advices received from New York indicate a like reception is anticipated there.

At present, Grauman and Hughes are in Manhattan personally supervising the arrangements for the spectacular dual opening at the Gaiety and Criterion theaters to be staged about the 15th inst. Their plans call for a typical Hollywood premiere with the greatest electrical display ever employed promising to overshadow the most pretentious openings Broadway has ever known.

The combination of the aerial epic and Grauman's spectacular prologue, introducing Broadway stars and ensembles of beautiful girls, is attracting throngs to all performances at the Chinese. Grauman has instituted a series of special Saturday midnight matinees to accommodate those whose engagements prevented their attending daily afternoon and night performances.

MUNI USES PLAYHOUSE FOR TRYOUT

"The Man Saul" Being Put on in Pasadena Before Going East

Paul Muni, former New York star and known for his roles in "We Americans" and "Four Walls," and who has been at Fox Studios for two seasons, is now trying out a new play, "The Man Saul," at the Pasadena Community Playhouse.

Following the Pasadena run, which has been under the direction of Gilmor Brown and Arthur Lubin, the play will be taken on to Broadway for an early October opening. The Little Theater of Pasadena was selected for the whipping into shape of the play by Sidney Robert Buchman because of the artistic type of its productions, according to Muni, who has been a frequent visitor at its performances.

A notable professional cast was assembled by the joint efforts of Gilmor Brown, Lubin and Richard Krakeur, who will sponsor the eastern run.

Marion Clayton, with a long line of roles beginning with leads with the Morosi Olsen Players and continuing through "Elbitzer," a run with the Los Angeles Civic Repertory Company and in Pasadena's production of "Mary, Mary Quite Contrary" and "The Second Man," plays the only woman's part in the virile production.

James Eagles plays the brother, while Alexander Lockwood is the doctor, Mike Donlin, Ben Hall and Paul Maxey are fellow-conspirators, and Robert Griffin the chief prosecutor.

Former Jockey Has Part in Dixiana Film

Robert Woolsey has long been called a "different" comic, but he is different in other ways. He is the only man on record who ever won and lost on the same horse race.

"Sunny" Bayne Woolsey was a promising kid jockey years ago—the actor refuses to admit how many—when his horse fell during a race and broke his rider's leg. That ended his career as a young Sande. The erstwhile jockey tried "hell hopping" and later, acting in a stock company.

Flo Ziegfeld gave him his first real chance with Bert Wheeler in "Rio Rita." Then the team came to the Coast together to play the same parts in the Radio Picture of the same name. Now they are again appearing together in "Dixiana," Radio's dramatic spectacle now enjoying its world premiere at the Orpheum Theater.

Starring in "Dixiana" is Bebe Daniels, with Everett Marshall, former Metropolitan Opera star, opposite her. Included in the cast are Dorothy Lee, Joseph Cawthorn, Johnna Howland and Ralf Harolde. The picture was directed by Luther Reed.

Not All Roses, Says One Star

The life of a motion-picture actress is not all roses, according to Dolores Costello, star of "Hearts in Exile" now playing at the Tower Theater.

Screen heroines are reputed to use doubles for any hazardous stunts in their pictures, but Miss Costello points out that one could hardly use a double simply because she was called upon to stay out in the snow all day.

Frostbitten fingers were the lot of Miss Costello during the making of "Hearts in Exile." Many scenes in the picture are laid in the desolate wastes of Siberia, and to secure the proper atmosphere—and the snow—the company journeyed from Hollywood to Truckee, Cal., one of the coldest places in Western America. Here, far out from the town itself, Miss Costello worked for many days in company with Grant Withers, James Kirkwood and several hundred extras.

BY MURIEL BABCOCK

Five years from now when Mr. and Mrs. Motion Picture f start out for an evening of cinema, they will probably fo evening's entertainment by the simple device of choosing a a reputation for certain type shows.

In five years there will be motion-picture playhouses showing nothing but big musical revues, those with a reputation for boisterous comedies, "w...rn" theaters and centers for the showing of sophisticated drama. The classification will come about gradually, the bigger motion-picture houses of today falling into the habit of specialization in much the same way that the theaters of spoken drama in New York have done in years past.

This interesting phophecy was voiced last week by Ann Caldwell, one of the best known of New York librettists and lyric writers, who came to Hollywood in September to join the R.-K.-O. studio under the William Le Baron banner. (Miss Caldwell and Le Baron are old friends—they used to have shows running at rival theaters!)

ONLY SEVENTEEN SHOWS

Miss Caldwell, a bit skeptical as to whether, after seventeen shows on Broadway and years of writing pieces for the theater, she would like motion pictures, admits now a bad case of "movie eyes."

"I see everything with pictures in mind," she said. "I get twice the kick out of working in pictures that I did out of working for the stage. I like the outdoors. I like being around on the set where there is opportunity to work out details and change lines right on the spot. I like all this action that we can get in films—the way we can do things we had to talk about and explain through dramatic devices on the stage. I've gone thoroughly.

Warner Film Settings Cover Many Details

Psychology plays an important part in the building of motion-picture sets. An audience never knows how much of the enjoyment it gets from such a picture as Warner Brothers' "The Matrimonial Bed," playing now at Warner Brothers' Hollywood Theater, is due to details of the settings which are not apparent in the picture, it is said.

Visitors to the Warner studios often ask why the designers and decorators of interior sets go to such pains and detail in harmonizing colors when the photography is in black and white.

So far as the camera is concerned, a picture could be made with all the characters dressed in blacks and whites and grays, inside of sets in which only those same colors were used. It would be cheaper to do so and it has been tried, particularly in Europe, but the results reflect the drab surroundings and the picture is usually a failure.

Colors on Warner Brothers sets are planned with an idea of matching them to the spirit and speed of any given story. The Parisian home sets for "The Matrimonial Bed" were particularly colorful because it depends altogether upon its speed and sophistication for its tremendous popularity as a comedy.

"The Matrimonial Bed" is said to be one of the best "dressed" pictures ever released. The story is told almost entirely within the one beautiful and pretentious Paris home, setting off to advantage Lilyan Tashman, Florence Eldridge and Vivian Oakland.

Beery Makes Art Sacrifice

The moment Wallace Beery read the script for "The Big House," prison drama current at the Boulevard Theater, it is said, he began a private research into prison conditions himself. The reason was not devotion to art, but worry over the fate of his mustache and the way he has been wearing his hair. The script called for him to be clean shaven on head and face. Beery came back from his private inquiry with news that 80 per cent of the penitentiaries in the United States allow their guests to follow their own discretion in tonsorial matters.

After some deliberation, however, Beery decided not to take advantage of this fact, but to sacrifice his appearance for "art's sake." Consequently, he was deprived of his hair and the mustache had to go, too.

JOAN TELLS BEAUTY SECRET

Oil Instead of Powder Adorns Miss Crawford's Nose; Why? Freckles to Blame

They try pretty nearly everything in Hollywood in the way of beautification.

Recently some one made the startling discovery that Joan Crawford (young Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks) doesn't powder her nose. Tanned a mahogany brown by swimming and sunbaths the year around, Miss Crawford, according to the report, uses olive oil in lieu of dusting powder, thus attaining a slick, highly burnished, glossy complexion.

Joan admits this—with reservations.

Trapped into conversation on a hot Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer location site in Franklin Canyon, she explained it was all because she had to cope with freckles.

"I don't think anyone who freckles like I do—look," she said, extending her right arm for inspection, "should use powder of any kind. I never do. I use lipstick and sometimes mascara, but that's all. The oil? Well, not as a regular thing, only when I'm peeling from sunburn."

Miss Crawford is now on the screen of the Criterion Theater in her third audible picture, "Our Blushing Brides," in which appearance she will be accompanied by the Misses Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian, who were with her in the silent "Our Dancing Daughters" and "Our Modern Maidens." This latest piece, from an original by Bess Meredyth, is in no way a sequel to the first two, Joan carefully explained.

"Just the same girls. And there are mighty few blushes among us. A hot story? Well, no, it's not risque. It's unusual and has, I think, tremendous suspense. Nothing turns out the way one thinks it will. I liked the story a lot. I think it's the best I've had in a long time."

At present she is working with Johnny Mack Brown in a southern story. Joan's Texas accent is pleasantly intermingled with Johnny's Alabama drawl.

Joan doesn't think they're very dissimilar—the accents, that is. "Most southern people talk about alike, I think. Of course, I've been away from Texas so long that usually I haven't any drawl. It has been easy to swing back into it, though, in this picture."

The burning ambition of Miss Joan Crawford at the moment is, she confided, to do a play on the stage.

"Only I probably never will, because I have stage fright so. I can't make personal appearances. I die a thousand deaths before saying 'howdy-do' in public.

"No, I probably never will appear with Douglas. He doesn't think it a good thing for husband and wife to act opposite one another. Fans write to us all the time and ask us when we will make a picture together. We never will, if we can help it."

With this pronouncement Miss Crawford fled back to work on call of Director Harry Pollard. Her maid retouched her make-up, somewhat melted by the sun, and the scene was on.

(N. B.—This just - mentioned make-up—that's for pictures only. The freckles stand, for other-time wear.)

Shearer Film Being Shown at Uptown

The divorce problem has had many expositions at the hands of dramatists and scenarists, but perhaps never before from the viewpoint of "The Divorcee," Norma Shearer's new talking picture, which opens tomorrow at the Uptown Theater for a four-day engagement.

The picture casts a new light on divorce, and, incidentally, affords Miss Shearer one of the most starling, as well as one of the most charming roles of her career. The supporting cast includes Chester Morris, Conrad Nagel, Robert Montgomery and Helene Millard.

Cawthorne Has Dialect Roles

Joseph Cawthorn, one of the featured players in "Dixiana," now showing at the Orpheum, plays German dialect roles, but is of English parentage. Twelve brothers and sisters were born in England, but he was born in New York City.

Joseph Cawthorn has been before the public since he was 3 years of age. He made his greatest hit with his German dialect characters and Radio Pictures, with whom he is under contract, is planning to give him the same scope that he had on the stage.

Million Dollar Showing Grey's 'Border Legion'

Twenty-seven years after the filming of the first great cinema western, "The Great Train Robbery," comes the latest Zane Grey's outdoor thriller, "The Border Legion."

In the first film western, there was a handful of random-picked players. It took three days to make the picture and one camera recorded all the details, with the cameraman doubling as director after he had already served as scenarist.

In "The Border Legion," which is now being shown at the Million Dollar Theater in conjunction with a vaudeville show, there is polished dialogue, good acting, refinements of modern photography and realism of story, the film being more than 7000 feet with a cast of nearly 100 actors.

Great interest is being shown, it is said, in Lupe Velez's latest Universal starring epic, "The Storm," which will have its world premiere at the Million Dollar Theater Thursday.

TWO STARS APPEAR ON R.-K.-O. BILL

Betty Compson and Viola Dana on Same Program for First Time

After many years of intimate friendship and working together in Hollywood, Betty Compson and Viola Dana appear on the same bill for the first time in their lengthy careers, at the R.-K.-O. Theater this week.

Although they often worked at the same studio, they never worked on the same picture. It is only the fact that the R.-K.-O. is a combination theater, presenting pictures and vaudeville, that permits their joint appearance.

"Inside the Lines," the picture in which Betty Compson and Ralph Forbes are costarred, is not a war picture, but a story of espionage at Gibraltar during those strenuous times.

The R.-K.-O. vaudeville is headed by Viola Dana, so well remembered as a screen star, in a new playlet by Anita Loos of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" fame, called "The Inkwell." This marks Miss Dana's first return to the stage after many years of absence. When she was very small when she played with Thomas Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle," William Faversham in "The Squaw Man," with the Parnum brothers in "The Littlest Rebel" and in the "Poor Little Rich Girl."

'Big Pond' Now at Figueroa

Maurice Chevalier stars in his third Paramount release "The Big Pond" at the Figueroa Theater starting today.

Claudette Colbert, herself French born, plays the leading feminine role. She has been a Broadway favorite for several years, having come to New York from Paris in her early teens.

ORGANISTS ELECT OFFICERS

Harold Milligan Retains Presidency of National Group Meeting in Sessions Here

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

The National Association of Organists meeting in annual session during the past week in Los Angeles, re-elected Harold Milligan as president and thus continued a regime that has been unusually effective in the administration of affairs.

Mr. Milligan is also the principal director of the National Music League, the organist and director of the choir of sixty voices for Dr. Fosdick's undenominational church in New York and an important figure in the music life of this country. He is essentially an artist, a musician, but as a man of broad vision and a dispenser of parliamentary justice without friction, an organizer of griefless auditions for ambitious performers, he is exceptionally business like.

He is another westerner who has made a name in the metropolis, having started his career in Portland, Or. He has distinguished himself in the study and exposition of American, early American, composers and through his various works, is perhaps, the outstanding authority on American music and the reactions of all America to music.

The organists of this country are different in many ways from other musical performers. They are cooperative, they are constructive musical thinkers, they nearly all compose and improvise extemporaneously and they seem to be devoid of jealously and intrigue. A national organists' meeting is one of the most refreshingly intelligent affairs that a musical reporter is called on to attend.

One of the principal discussions of the concluded meeting in Los Angeles was that upon architecture and resultant acoustic difficulties.

Plans were also made for regional meetings of the organists to supplement the annual continental trek.

Well-known organists gave recitals on the important new organs of the city, among which the performances by Palmer Christian and Prof. Briggs at Immaculate Heart College were especially enjoyed.

The plans of the National Music League were furthered during the visit of Mr. Milligan, by the appointment of Mrs. Tripplet of Pasadena, as director of the activities of the western branch of the league in conjunction with Miss Ramona Little, western booking representative. Mr. Allan C. Balch is chairman of the National League board here. Mrs. Tripplet is from Springfield, Mass., and has had professional experience as a singer.

Cadman Finds Modern Speed

Charles Wakefield Cadman had an example of modern speed in the publishing business this month.

One month ago the composer sent a new sacred song, "Galilee," with text by Warner Van Valkenburg, to Chappell-Harris, Inc. Within thirty days a letter of acceptance came, a contract for the song and a finished copy of the song itself. Mr. Cadman telephoned a local dealer. It was already on sale.

WALES GIVES SUPPORT TO SCOTS' FETE

Highland Gathering of Canadians To Be Held at Banff

The coming Labor Day week-end will again see the highlands of Scotland transplanted to the Canadian Rockies in the namesake town of Banff. This mountain resort has just sounded the call for its fourth annual Highland Gathering and Scottish Music Festival, scheduled to last from the 29th inst. to September 1 with headquarters at the Banff Springs Hotel. Arranged as before by the Canadian Pacific Railway under the patronage of the Prince of Wales, the festival will offer in review the gems of Scottish minstrelsy, together with dances and pipers' lays which have survived through the turmoil of clan warfare in Scotland as well as through 301 years of Scottish settlement in Canada.

Seventeen Highland regiments in Canada have entered their best pipers to compete for trophies. Lads and lassies dressed in the flashing kilt will perform reels, sword dances and highland flings, competing for prizes in classes grouped according to age. In addition, the leading Scottish athletes of the Dominion have been rounded up for the traditional Caledonian games like putting the "stane" and tossing the caber, as well as the more usual track and field events. One of the races is entitled "the fiery torch," recalling the custom of the clansmen to summon the clans to war by runners carrying a burning torch.

The musical program this year will be concentrated on the songs of Robert Burns. Two ballad operas incorporating these songs will be presented—one entitled "The Ayrshire Ploughman," written by J. E. Middleton with arrangements by Healey Willan, a distinguished Canada composer, and the other Burns's own cantata of "The Jolly Beggars," a new version of which has just been completed by Mrs. Mabel Wood-Hill, a prominent American musician. The singers will include Brownie Peebles and Allan Burt, of the American Opera Company, Alice Wilson, well-known tenor of San Francisco, J. Campbell McInnes, internationally celebrated baritone, and members of the Alfred Heather Light Opera Company which is presenting light operas at the Banff Springs Hotel all summer.

"Iberia" Has Been Recorded Delightfully

BY I. M. J.

Those who are delighting themselves with the brilliant Molinari performances in the Hollywod Bowl this summer, looking forward to the Spanish conductor Arbas, will be especially interested in Victor's recording of Debussy's "Iberia" and "L'Isle Joyeuse," the last having been richly orchestrated by Bernardino Molinari. The playing is by a European orchestra under the direction of Coppola.

"Iberia" is a refined and masterly expression of impressionism in which Debussy has held his admiration for Spanish rhythms and the allurement of Spanish romance in the leash of a fine restraint. This is a much truer work than Ravel's Bolero, although not so suddenly striking.

The first movement, descriptive of street scenes, is a colorful music play of many actors whose parts are skillfully portrayed by the actors in the wood-wind and brass sections. There are fascinating snatches of melody introduced and whisked away with a musician's magic wand.

"Odours of the Night" is to many the most satisfying part of the work in that it evokes a poetic mood of ineffable and sweet sadness.

Screen Stories May Be Made Still Speedier

Demand for a faster pace in the action of screen stories is exerting a pressure that is sure to make itself felt more and more, in the opinion of Glen Tryon, comedy star, who has just completed a three-years contract with Universal. It is merely a reflection of the modern psychology that the fan is demanding the story move along faster and ever faster, he asserts.

"This tendency is only another manifestation of the speedy pace we moderns are traveling," said Tryon. "We see our modern literature following it, much to the disadvantage of the classic and Victorian masterpieces; and our stage drama took it up long ago.

"At first, it was necessary in producing pictures to devote a great deal of footage in establishing certain situations necessary to the progress of the story. These were of necessity tedious, especially to the fan who is quick to grasp ideas, but the necessity for that expedient is passing with the sound picture and dialogue.

"The demand for faster moving stories will bring us dialogue and scenarios designed to serve this demand, and it will then be up to the director to speed up," concluded Tryon.

Bowl Feature of New Novel

"The Mote and the Beam," by Pauline Stiles of San Bernardino, is the first novel to be written around the Hollywood Bowl. This is an early book by a young woman, which has recently attracted the attention of Doubleday, Doran Company, and which they have brought out in a popular edition.

Miss Stiles shows an understanding of the heart and mind of a violin virtuoso that is uncanny. Certain well-known incidents of the last three or four years which have transpired in and out of the Philharmonic Orchestra are caught into the tale and Bowl lovers have been so pleased with it as to make it obtainable along with photographs and other souvenirs of this celebrated summer festival.

PIERRE KEY'S Music Article

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Another serious opera by an American has been almost completed and will have its premiere in the Metropolitan Operahouse during the coming season. It is Deems Taylor's "Peter Ibbetson," in three acts. The composer, who is also the librettist, says he has the orchestration yet to do, but that four months of effort will dispose of that.

Lucrezia Bori, Edward Johnson and Lawrence Tibbett will have the roles assigned the leading soprano, tenor and baritone. Their selection is what the experts have anticipated. Two of these artists—the last two—figured in Taylor's "The King's Henchman," which had its first presentation at the Metropolitan.

A FIGURE PASSES

Leopold Auer is gone. The man who "made" extraordinary violinists has hung up his fiddle and his bow. Henceforth unusual talent for this stringed instrument must turn in other directions for its fullest development.

It was in a sanitarium, near Dresden, that Auer died. A victim of pneumonia, he had not the resistance at 85 to withstand the disease and succumbed to it soon after he was stricken.

A Hungarian, Auer came at length to European recognition as a violinist. It was his friendship with the great pianist Anton Rubinstein which resulted in his being called to the Imperial Music Conservatory, at St. Petersburg, to succeed Wieniawski.

His name first became legion in this country after Mischa Elman made his debut, in 1909. Other Auer pupils came, Jascha Heifetz among them. Presently they appeared in flocks, until if you wore an Auer badge you were accounted something out of the ordinary.

A member of the faculties of both the Curtis Institute of Music and the Juilliard Graduate School, Auer became an American citizen at 81. This country had been kind to him in a time of need (he came here during the World War) and he could not forget.

AMERICANS IN MUSIC

What new avenues offer for young men and women who have chosen music as a profession is something seriously to consider. The past few years have brought changes, many of them. Also so great an increase in the number of candidates for the concert, opera and radio fields that the competition has grown out of all reasonable proportions.

Opinions vary as to what the future holds forth, but there is considerable expert opinion to warrant the truly talented musical youth of our country sticking to their guns.

Ralph Errolle, American tenor and widely experienced as a stage director of opera, had something pertinent to say on the subject—following his recent return from a concert tour. "We are entering the broadest phase of mechanization of music," said Errolle, "but, also, the demand for the personal appearance is everywhere manifest.

"Singers, in particular," he continued, "will find more opportunities than ever during the next few years. Providing," he concluded, "they have exceptional voices and all the other requisites to really achieve."

PHILHARMONIC MEN RETURN

The last group of New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra players returned home from their recent European tour a few days ago, aboard the French Line ship France. They trooped down the gangplank in high spirits, led by First-'cellist Alfred Wallenstein.

"From the day of our departure aboard the De Grasse until we docked our journey was notable for the consideration we received everywhere," said Wallenstein (whom Toscanini holds to be one of the great artists of the day.)

"Recognition of our orchestra's efforts, and Toscanini's conducting, was so general as to be virtually unanimous. France, Italy, Germany, Hungary, Bohemia, and England paid us homage that can never be forgotten. In all my experience I have never witnessed such enthusiasm on the part of audiences."

Whereupon the 'cellist turned to wave a farewell to the commander of the France and his officers, who were grouped at the ship's rail.

VARIATIONS

Irving Schwerke, music reviewer for the Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune and European representative for Musical Digest, has been awarded the decoration of Officer d'Academie by the French Ministry of Public Instruction of Fine Arts.

One of the most active journalists of France, Schwerke has done more to aid his fellow Americans in gaining a musical foothold abroad than almost any other individual resident in Paris.

The American baritone, Robert Steele, who has been appearing in leading roles at the Wiesbaden Opera, will arrive home late this month to do a sound-film. Steel is also contemplating a concert tour before returning to his post in Germany.

A member of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony was greeted—as were other members of this orchestra—by a gentlewoman, who made her way back stage at La Monnaie after that organization had played its concert in Brussels. Less observing, and not quite so gallant as some of his associates, he responded to the congratulatory remarks of the lady in perfunctory fashion.

A few moments later, being informed that it was the Queen of Belgium who had addressed him, the player strove frantically to make amends.

Rushing up to her, and interrupting her conversation with another, he cried: "Excuse me, please, Queen, I was glad to meet you."

"RAFFLES" CLICKS IN EAST

BY NORBERT LUSK

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) Equal if not better than "Bulldog Drummond" is the verdict of all who have inspected Ronald Colman in "Raffles" at the Rialto and there seems no doubt that this opinion will in time be shared by the entire picture-going population, judging by the crowds that keep the theater packed for twelve hours daily. They find irresistible entertainment in a combination of elements that appeal to every taste. The movement and suspense of melodrama are shrewdly intermingled with the subtleties and refinements of what is called drawing-room comedy, and in the hands of the director, scenario writer and actors the rather old-fashioned story of the amateur crackaman pulses with life, reality and sympathy revealing such values that it did not possess on the stage years ago, however successful it was.

Certainly, in the course of many revivals, "Raffles" has never been impersonated with the distinction and easy grace and the humor and irony, to say nothing of the charm and naturalness that Mr. Colman gives to the role. Aided by the discreet and knowing dialogue of Sidney Howard the spectator actually is stirred to sympathy for the thief who cannot restrain himself, instead of looking on him as an actor in a series of made-to-order situations. This fortunate state of affairs is enormously enhanced by Kay Francis whose usual distinction is augmented by a gentleness and sympathy found in no other part she has played. Therefore, her present one is easily her most notable contribution to the screen and will do much to establish her as a heroine rather than a sleek menace.

MORE OF CAST

No less expert is David Torrence in catching the spirit of Harry D'Arrast's direction and making his Inspector from Scotland Yard a likable, humorous fellow rather than a blood hound on the scent of the hero. After his hit in "The Lady of Scandal" it is almost unnecessary to record the splendid performance of Frederick Kerr whose presence in any cast nowadaya means that acting has reached a higher level. And the first appearance of Alison Skipworth on Broadway proves that she has conquered the films as she has dominated plays good, bad and indifferent for—well, it doesn't matter how many years.

Another excellent picture is "Good Intentions" at the Roxy, in which William K. Howard shines both as an author and director, and in which Edmund Lowe is thought to give the best of all his performances. Though crook plays have been many and various, this is instantly recognized as one of the best from every standpoint, story, direction, dialogue and acting. Vigorous, surprising, tense and sentimental, it has every point to register popularity and to hold the spectator from beginning to end. It is a splendid example of showmanship in characterization, casting and narration, one of the cleverest touches being found in the last scene, a shot showing the night club operating smoothly, genteelly with the manager strolling among the tables with the poise and pride of the proprietor of a nice tea room. It serves as a graphic, eloquent commentary on what has just happened behind closed doors.

ADROIT SEQUENCE

The bank robbery, too, is ingeniously conceived and adroitly executed. Enthusiastically reviewed in every quarter, Marguerite Churchill comes through with her most outstanding performance. The changes she has effected in her appearance tend to increase her popularity. Incidentally, not the least of these changes is found in her make-up, which now emphasizes her charm and distinction. Earle Foxe is thought by many to exceed everyone else in skill and believability and Regis Toomey and Henry Kolker are also conspicuously interesting together with Georgia Caine, whose film debut recalls her success as one of the original "Merry Widows." But for that matter there is no member of the cast who has not scored.

"Manslaughter" at the Rivoli completes the trio of arresting pictures far exceeding the silent version in credibility, taste and dramatic crescendo, to say nothing of acting values, though this may be thought irreverent comparison. However, if the automobile accident in the earlier version were compared with that in the new one there is no doubt which would exceed in thrills. And so it is with every department of production. The addition of dialogue makes of the spoiled, headstrong society girl a much more believable character—that and the acting of Claudette Colbert, whose personal charm is equaled by her skill in giving delicate values to her speech. In spite of showing every trait to alienate an audience, Miss Colbert never permits the spectator to look upon the selfish heroine as other than as likable.

Fredric March, too, succeeds in achieving the District Attorney's descent from the courtroom to the gutter with more plausibility than was found in Thomas Meighan's characterization, which was too abrupt for the taste of many who remember the earlier picture. George Abbott's direction has naturally come in for due consideration because of his distinguished service to the local stage and his incisiveness and economy have been praised, although all in all the reviewers have not become excited over the picture as a whole because the story is thought to be too utterly "movieesque." However, the reactions of the audience indicate no such carping criticism.

SCOTT GETS OFFERS

Fred Scott, one of Pathe's latest stars, made so good an impression by his acting and singing in "Swing High" that various picture organizations have tried to borrow him. Scott, in addition to his fine voice, is also a linguist and needs no double for the foreign films. His last picture for Pathe was "Beyond Victory," with all-star cast.

SOPRANO WILL BE PRESENTED

Florence Russell

Florence Russell, soprano, will be presented in a recital series in the music room of the Sutro-Seyler studios following the Los Angeles Grand Opera Season. Programs of chansons, lieder and American compositions will display her versatility of temperment.

Thirteen years of teaching have contributed a conspicuous number of serious students and singers from Miss Russell's class. A lecture, "The reconciliation of apparent incompatibilities among vocal methods" from Miss Russell's thesis on "Practical procedure in voice teaching" will be given in August before a vocal critique at the Sutro-Seyler Studio.

Million Dollar Hears Diskay

Adding to a variety of vocal activities, Joseph Diskay, Hungarian tenor, is making a personal appearance as a solo artist this week at the Million Dollar Theater. Diskay has engaged in many different lines of vocal endeavor, including opera, concert, vaudeville and radio, talking pictures and teaching. In the latter field he has trained voices for screen and radio work.

JOSEPH DISKAY

Diskay recently completed vocal work on a new picture, "In Morocco," which is now under way at the Paramount studios, and is at present engaged in singing in German, and Hungarian in a picture. He has made foreign records for American phonograph companies, and he was recently engaged to make some records in English.

His radio appearances include engagements over the national as well as the Pacific Coast network.

Morando Pupils Gain Success

Some of the Morando pupils who have attained success in the films with their singing are Bebe Daniels, who is well remembered for her singing in "Rio Rita," the first spectacular singing picture of the R.-K.-O. studios, and her first singing picture, is again displaying her mezzo-soprano voice opposite Everett Marshall, a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, in "Dixiana." Two others of the Morando Studios are to appear in individual concerts at the Pacific Palisades. One of them is Fred Scott, tenor, who has climbed so rapidly in the films as a star, making successes in the "Grand Parade" and "Swing High," he will give a song recital at the Pacific Palisades on the 1st inst. The other is John Patton, baritone, singer and teacher, who will also be heard in a song recital at the Pacific Palisades on the 12th inst.

Grace Moore Tells of 'Mike'

Singing for the microphone requires less physical but far more mental energy than singing from a stage, it was discovered by Grace Moore, Metropolitan Opera star, when she had her first song rehearsal for her debut in talking pictures at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

"The microphone," she said, "needs much less volume, but because of its sensitiveness one must be very careful in enunciation, inflection, breathing, and must be much more careful in phrasing."

Miss Moore is now at work in her first talkie, a play based on the life of Jenny Lind, Swedish singer. Reginald Denny plays the leading male role and Sidney Franklin is directing the production.

Bowl Singer Goes East

Elsa Alsen is happily winging her way to the New York Stadium where, with Paul Althouse, she will appear in an all-Wagner program, Albert Coates conducting. Mme. Alsen's recent success in the Bowl singing Wagner with Molinari conducting, re-endeared her to her Southern California public.

Afro-American Jubilee to Present Chorus of ... Hollywood Bowl Tomorrow Evening

Preparations are being rushed for the mammoth Afro-... Jubilee, featuring a chorus of 1000, the largest ever assem... West, to be presented tomorrow evening in the Hollywood B...

The affair, which will present Negro spirituals and plantation melodies with modern compositions, will be directed by Elmer C. Bartlett, who conducted the winning chorus in the choir contest three years ago in the Bowl, which attracted music lovers from all parts of Southern California. Claude V. Pitts will be guest conductor.

The Jubilee, preceded by a twilight program from 6:45 until 8:20 o'clock, featuring instrumental and vocal music, will present by far the largest aggregation of famed singers of the race ever to be heard in California.

The songs to be rendered by the chorus of 1000, under Bartlett's leadership, will include such favorites as "Take Me Back to Ole Virginny," "Steal Away to Jesus," "Ole Southland" and "Dixie."

Mme. Florence Cole-Talbert, operatic soprano, has been brought here from New York for the program. She will sing operatic numbers, spirituals and works of local composers.

Including more than fifty vo... each, community choruses representing Long Beach, Santa Ana, San Pedro and Santa Monica will compete for the Southern California Championship. Four outstanding motion-picture choruses, including the Etude Ethiopian Chorus, the Al Jolson Movietone Chorus, the Melodian Chorus and the J. B. ## RHYTHM DANCE NEW CRAZE

Latest Step to Outdistance Taps According to Terpsichorean Authority

BY MARY MAYER

Life may be a routine affair to most people—but it's just one routine after another to Eddie Prinz, tap and "off rhythm" exponent who won fame staging the dances for some of New York's foremost musical comedies and revues.

Prinz is one of the latest of the dancers to join the "gold rush" to Hollywood, and has distinguished himself in the few short weeks of his stay by producing that, which promises to be one of the most unusual ballets yet filmed for the audible screen, "Ballet Mechanique" in Cecil B. De Mille's production, "Madam Satan," as well as the dance numbers creating much interest in "Oh, Judge," current at the Vine Street Theater.

RHYTHM DANCE POPULAR

"At the moment the 'rhythm dance' is the thing," Prinz said, as he discussed the many modern trends of Terpsichore. "The fact that it is much more difficult than tap will probably mean that it will not be as universally accepted by the amateur dancer—but it is destined to outlive the tap rage.

"The rhythm dancer is the one who will be in demand in the very near future," he continued, "but even it will cause a return to a definite form of technique, a thing which has been neglected in the past few years. It takes technique to hold the speed required of a good rhythm dancer."

Prinz has used a great deal of "rhythm" work in his productions during the past year. One of the outstanding dances of this type created by him, is "Snake Hips."

ORIGINATED WITH NEGRO

"All of the modern dances had their origination with the Negro," said Prinz. "There is not a number which has been popularly acclaimed in the last few years which was not taken, in part at least, from the old plantation numbers. When I was a youngster," he continued, "I used to watch the Negroes doing dances which were later known as the "Charleston" and the "black bottom," and this holds true of some of the later crazes as well."

Prinz, who is now affiliated with the Kahlet Studio, received his first interest in the art of Terpsichore when he learned to walk, his first step being taken on the highly polished floor of his father's dancing academy. His first professional work was done with the Nell O'Brien Minstrels who toured the country over a period of forty-eight weeks of one-night stands.

"One-night stands are the best training a dancer could possibly have," he smiled. "There can be no slow moving feet in a troupe that has to hop a train five minutes after the curtain on the final performance."

Children Hold Stage Center

A feature of the week at Loew's State Theater is the stage revue presented by Ethel Meglin, head of the Meglin School of the Dance. The revue presents seventy-five of the popular Meglin Kiddies. At the close of their engagement at the local film house they will appear in Pasadena, from there to Hollywood, and complete the circuit including Long Beach, Glendale and Santa Monica.

Another group of more than 100 children are rehearsing under Miss Meglin's direction for a series of talkie shots that will go into production in about two weeks. Several groups of older girls and boys are rehearsing for Panchon and Marco "Ideas" and new groups are forming weekly.

The Meglin School, is now operating as the only authorized Panchon and Marco System School in Los Angeles.

Premiere To Be Presented by Director

Edward Clark, actor-author-director, who recently opened an academy of stage and screen arts here, announces that the first full-lenth play to be presented at his little studio theater will be his own comedy, "De Luxe Annie."

EDWARD CLARK

The play deals with the subject of amnesia and was originally produced in New York, some twelve years ago, under the management of Arthur Hammerstein, and won immediate approval of press and public. In fact, no less authority on play making than Clayton Hamilton, then writing for Vogue, declared it to be "the best made American play ever written by an American author." The vehicle afterward served as a motion-picture medium for Norma Talmadge.

Stage Keeps Proteges Busy

Bud Murray, principal of the Bud Murray School for Stage, announces that in addition to the "Bud Murray California Sunbeams" unit now playing at Loew's State, Nelson and Thatcher, who took their first dancing lesson from Murray, are playing at the Egyptian Theater with Max Fisher's Band; Mae LaRue, the cowgirl appearing in the "Wild and Woolly" Idea is doing a Lake Page rhythm dance, and Evelyn Hayes, another pupil of the school, is playing a leading role in "Oh, Judge."

Sylvia Shore, singing and dancing comedienne, who opens this week in Pasadena with a Panchon and Marco idea, is said to attribute her success to the instruction and guidance of Murray, who has directed such well-known successes as New York Winter Garden for ten years, George White Scandals, Grauman's Chinese Theater, prologues at the R.-K.-O. Theater, and "Oh, Susana," which played at the Mayan Theater.

Dance Troupe Chosen by Fox

De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, writers of "Sunny Side Up," now preparing their second musical extravaganza for Fox Film Corporation, have selected the Mosconi Brothers troupe of dancers to appear in "Just Imagine," the picture that is expected to surpass their earlier triumph.

The Mosconi Brothers, whose school in Hollywood has attracted many professional stage and screen personalities, including a number of established line girls who have appeared in many musical pictures, have recruited from among their many pupils the dancers for "Just Imagine."

OUKRAINSKY TO ARRIVE FOR COURSE

Russian Artist Divulges Plans for Ballet Work at Edith Jane School

Serge Oukrainsky, Russian dancer and choreographer, will come to this coast after an outstandingly successful summer course at his Chicago studio, to head the Pavley-Oukrainsky summer course as the next offering of the Edith Jane guest instructor series, following the summer course of Michio Ito. Mr. Ito's regular classes, however, will continue at the school.

During the summer course the Los Angeles Civic Opera Ballet, the San Francisco Civic Opera Ballet, the Glendale Symphony Ballet and others which Oukrainsky has been engaged to stage will be arranged. All soloists and members participating in the various performances will be chosen exclusively from his pupils.

During the Pavley-Oukrainsky summer course, the Edith Jane school staff will offer special teachers' courses in tap and acrobatic dancing, drama and fencing, in addition to the regular classes. Miss Jane will personally conduct a teachers' course in routines for children.

DANCE TAPS

In addition to the large enrollments for adults in the new summer classes at the Wills Studio of Stage Dancing in Hollywood, there are classes now forming for children in all departments, according to Walter S. Wills, executive head of the school. Working with Wills as his chief instructors during the summer term are William Ritchey and Buddy Eson.

The latter is forming new classes in which children are taught a combination of tap and acrobatic dancing blended with ballet work which is claimed to be highly beneficial to youngsters, giving them a well-balanced practical knowledge of these two widely diversified forms of the terpsichorean art.

Wills has also organized classes exclusively to teach dancers the proper manner to make a stage entrance and exit and also the art of holding the interest of an audience.

Elisa Ryan, head of the Elisa Ryan School of Dancing located on Wilshire Boulevard, states that she has had a large enrollment of teachers for her annual summer normal course. To accommodate new teachers who have arrived in Los Angeles since last Monday and wish to take up this work, Miss Ryan states that a new class for teachers will begin on Monday.

Rehearsals for the Elisa Ryan recital which will be given in October at the Windsor Square Theater are being held three times a week, Monday and Thursday at 1:30 p.m. and Monday evening at 7 p.m. Miss Ryan states that the older pupils are taking a great interest in the musical comedy production and she will feature a large chorus of boys together with a girls' chorus. The business girls' classes are also taking part in this recital. Rehearsals are being held under the direction of Roland Paul, while Miss Ryan is personally staging the dancing.

In Dance Spotlight

STUDENTS GAIN PROMINENCE

Hardly a week passes by that some representative of Neely Dickson's Hollywood Community School of the Theater does not appear behind the footlights of some Los Angeles theater.

Currently Miss Corinne Ross, one of Miss Dickson's most talented students, represents the school, playing one of the featured roles with Ina Claire in "Rebound," the Donald Ogden Stewart comedy success at the Belasco Theater. Miss Ross is a member of the original New York cast of "Rebound." Early last fall she went east and was immediately cast in the leading role opposite John Halliday in "Humbug." After the close of that play she was selected for the part in "Rebound," considered one of the plums of the season, and when the company was sent west, she remained with the cast in her original role. Los Angeles critics have been exceedingly kind to Miss Ross, who is the daughter of Gertrude Ross, composer-pianist of national note. Since leasing Miss Dickson's school, Miss Ross's career has been one of glamorous success, beginning with an engagement at the Majestic Theater, and followed by her New York hit in "Humbug." It is whispered that another interesting role is being held in reserve pending her return to New York in what promises to be one of the early fall successes.

In addition to Miss Ross at the Belasco, Hollywood Community School of the Theater is also represented at the Vine-street Theater by Miss Piuma Nolsone who is appearing in an important part in "Oh, Judge!" Miss Nolsone, together with two other students from Miss Dickson's school, were in the cast of Cecil B. De Mille's production, "Madame Satan."

The summer session is now in full swing at the studio-theater on North Bronson avenue with an enrollment which represents almost every State in the Union and many foreign countries, indicating that the fame of Hollywood's oldest dramatic school is widespread. Plays are constantly in rehearsal, summer and winter, and frequent public performances are produced as a part of the regular course of study.

Students Win Coveted Roles

Among the Hollywood dance artists who are gaining prominence through their contributions to stage and screen is Eddie Mack, who has maintained a studio on Hollywood Boulevard for the past four years. Mack toured the big-time circuits for twenty-three years prior to opening his studio, where he is now devoting his time to originating numbers for films and prologues. Among his pupils who have won recognition for their work are Billy Lehman and Martha Lee Sparks of film note. Others include the Nimms Twins, who do an original novelty toe-tap staircase number and who will appear at Warner Brothers' Downtown Theater soon as a feature of the Ceballos Revue. Betty Lee Bliss and Winifred Walker are also being featured in the same show, making a total of nineteen Mack pupils engaged at the present time in Ceballos revues.

FESTIVALS GAINING IN POPULARITY

Outdoor Dance Pageants Ideal, According to Local Ballet Master

California dancers and teachers are not making use of the opportunity afforded them to stage more festivals out of doors, Ernest Belcher, noted ballet master, declared yesterday. Outdoor festivals like those staged in Europe, especially in Germany and Austria, would give additional impetus to the dance in this section, Belcher believes.

"There is no section in the entire world," said Belcher, "that affords the climate or opportunity to stage these festivals as does California. Hollywood Bowl has done considerable to show the possibilities of outdoor terpsichorean work and Bowl officials should be praised for such dance numbers as the Albertina Rasch and the Michio Ito ballets staged this season. Bowl officials have been generous to me and in some of the Bowl ballets more than 100 of my artists have appeared.

"The new Greek theater built by the city in Griffith Park will lend itself to outdoor dances of the Grecian type and in the next year a movement should be started to have annual presentations of this type of dance in that theater. Such a movement would be in keeping with the cultural growth in Southern California.

"Also there are numerous gardens and parks throughout the Southland that would adapt themselves to this form of festival."

Studio Plans Active Season

Extensive arrangements are being made for next season's work at the Harrison-Wallack Studios under the direction of Riley Harrison, manager, according to report.

Among the additions to the school will be a department of languages embracing French, Spanish, German, Italian and English. Thoroughly equipped teachers have been obtained to co-operate with Edwin M. Wallack, head of the drama, not only in fundamental instruction, but in coaching and brushing up in languages and dialects for professional appearances in the stage productions which Mr. Wallack will stage and direct.

The complete curriculum of the studio will include drama, languages, music technique as well as theory, counterpoint and composition under Charles Arthur Ridgeway, voice production and training under Mme. Morgan-Machon and all forms of dance technique under Mlle. Praeger. Plans are also being made for a screen department which will comprise the fundamentals of screen acting, including the actual making of tests and sound pictures.

DANCE OFFICERS ELECTED

Associated Dancing Teachers of Southern California Choose Leaders for Coming Year

Of interest to all dance lovers in the Southland is the report of the last meeting of the Associated Dancing Teachers of Southern California, held last Thursday evening at the Carl Curtis School.

It was at this time that the annual election of officers took place, those elected for the coming year being Ernest E. Ryan, president, Boone W. Lowery, vice-president, Miss Elisa Ryan, secretary, and Martin Trieb, treasurer. Those elected for the board of directors were Miss Norma Gould and Miss Florence Gaynor.

The Associated Dancing Teachers of Southern California have done some excellent work in the furthering of dance art. Their aims are: To promote better and higher standards of dancing by the raising of ideals and the education of the public; to increase public interest in correct dancing as a fine art and as an amusement; to unite in an effort to better conditions and relationships of dancing teachers; to promote a code of ethics in regard to each other and to the public; to enact laws to protect the public from illegitimate schools and teachers and to protect the legitimate teacher, and through organized and concerted effort to advertise the benefits and usefulness of good dancing.

Plans for the coming convention which is to be held in the early part of September at one of the leading hotels of the city were made. It was voted unanimously to support every effort to bring the national convention of the Dancing Masters of America, Inc., to Los Angeles in 1931.

Dancer Signs Contract for Eastern Tour

Word was received here last week that Peggy Taylor, Earle Wallace dancer, has just re-signed her contract with Myer Golden, New York agent and producer, for another three years. Miss Taylor is heading her own act, "The Kitchen Pirates," which has played in New York and all the Eastern States.

Miss Taylor received all of her dance training from Earle Wallace and left for New York two years ago to go under the Myer Golden management. She was first featured in Earl Carroll's "Fioretta," in which she was said to have been a sensation.

Under the terms of her new contract with Golden, Miss Taylor is booked for a seven-months tour of Europe.

Miss Taylor will arrive in Los Angeles in August for a short vacation and several weeks intensive training and rehearsal under the personal direction of Wallace, following which she will sail for Europe to fulfill her new contract.

Students Will Organize New Dance School

Two former students of the University of Southern California, Elora Sornsen and Jean Maschio, announce the opening of a Studio of Dancing and Dramatic Art in the Women's Club of Lynwood Wednesday.

Miss Sornsen was graduated from the school of speech of the University of Southern California and Miss Maschio has directed the choruses of the annual Trojan extravaganza for the past four years.

They plan to hold summer classes twice a week until the opening of school terms about the middle of September, when a regular schedule of daily classes will begin.

Miss Maschio will instruct in practically all branches of dancing, tap, folk, esthetic, social and platform. Miss Sornsen will have charge of classes in dramatic art. The latter appeared in numerous campus performances while attending Southern California, being prominent in college dramatics during her university career.

PLAYS PRESENTED FOR NOVEL RUSSIAN CLUB

One of the interesting events of the week was a program given at the Russian-American Art Club by students of the Michael Visaroff Realistic School of Acting. The affair was attended by a large cosmopolitan crowd and the one-act plays including the "Farewell Supper," "The Anniversary," and "In Hollywood" were given enthusiastic receptions. The next production to be staged by Visaroff will be "The Cherry Orchard" scheduled for presentation the latter part of this month.

Texas Given High Average

Despite the large number of stage and screen stars who have graduated from the Major School of Acting—a "Lone Star" threatens to become the motto of the school. During the past year, almost three score of the students registered at the Major school have come from Texas, among them some of the outstanding artists of the school. Cities which have contributed most of these students are: Mineral Wells, Waco, Dallas, Paris, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Beaumont and Galveston.

To supplement this brilliant record, the chief supervisor of the Major school also hails from Texas, Mrs. Tullia C. Mistrot, who for many years conducted a school of drama in Waco.

Novel New Act in Rehearsal

Gladys Neill, pupil of the McAdam Normal School of Dancing, has returned from a successful eastern tour to join an act now in rehearsal, in which five McAdam dancers will be featured this fall. Numerous calls for talent for stage and screen revues are said to have kept the McAdam dancers busily engaged all summer.

The summer normal club courses at the school are attracting many visiting teachers, several from Texas, Arizona and Colorado having made a special trip this summer to study the production of spectacular pageants. Miss McAdam is reputed to have staged and produced some of the most spectacular pageantry productions ever presented on the Pacific Coast.

BALLET LEAVES FOR EAST

Albertina Rasch, ballet maestra accompanied by the first contingent of dancers trained in Hollywood for New York fall productions, will leave Los Angeles soon for Manhattan.

The importation of Hollywood talent into New York is in line with a policy recently established by Miss Rasch to exchange dancers for productions on both coasts in connection with the operation of her Hollywood and New York studios.

The local girls being taken to New York by Miss Rasch will appear in "Prince Charming," Bobby Connolly's new show scheduled to go into rehearsal about the 15th inst., and for "The Little Show," an Erlanger production to open the latter part of August.

The ballet mistress is selecting three or more dancers from the Hollywood contingent to appear as featured dancseues in connection with the New York shows. The names of these girls developed as specialty dancers by Miss Rasch shortly will be announced.

Other New York producers now are carrying on negotiations with Miss Rasch with a view to her staging the dances for other forthcoming productions, details of which have not yet been announced.

BEAUTY HELD UNESSENTIAL

It takes more than a pretty face to win a motion-picture contract this season!

Besides the need of possessing a pleasing speaking and singing voice the aspirant will also profit by the knowledge of a foreign language or two.

With the popularity of musical comedies and musical operas the ability to dance is also requested. And in this regard it is interesting to know that the actresses under contract to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios are called on to attend classes in both voice culture and dance routine.

With Dr. Marafioti, who trained Caruso and many other famous personages for their work, handling the vocal placement, and Sammy Lee, the originator of the dance scores of the outstanding Ziegfeld Follies numbers, teaching the dancing, the players are said to be assured of the proper training.

DANCERS' BRAINS NOT IN FEET

Chorus girls' brains are not in their feet.

This was revealed by a casual survey of the reading material absorbing the attention of a group of thirty dancing girls awaiting their calls to work in "Follow Thru" at the Paramount studios in Hollywood.

Eighteen of the girls were scanning books or magazines. The remaining were talking or practicing dance steps. Of the eighteen who read, twelve were interested in books.

The magazines showed one news periodical, two popular weeklies, two motion-picture magazines and one publication which is often classified as "highbrow."

The books showed a strange mixture of popular literature, established works, biographies and "thrillers."

The list of books read by these girls at this time, which speak for themselves, are as follows: "Best Short Stories of 1929," O. Henry's "The Four Million," "Laughing Boy," "Twelve Against the Gods," Anatole France's "Thias," "Ex-Wife," "Cimarron," Kipling's "Studies in Black and White," "Mothers Cry," Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," "Some Like It Hot," and "Green Pastures."

FICTION FOR ALL TASTES

Domestic Romance, French Realism, German Fantasy and English Mysteries Bid for Attention

BY ELEANOR C. FORD

An ambitious first novel is "Tears of Grass," by Margaret Ayers Barnes, playwright and short-story writer, and sister of Janet Fairbank, novelist. It resembles in plan "The Calmyr," by Susan Ertz, with American instead of English setting. Beginning with the childhood in Chicago of Jane Ward, it follows her development until she is a grandmother. Jane was always staunch and serious; at a time when her friends were satisfied with finishing school she begged to go to Bryn Mawr. After two years there her shallow mother made her come home and be introduced to society.

At a skip of a girl Jane had loved the French master, who had been rejected by her parents. He went back to France, promising not to write to her until she was of age. By that time Jane had been persuaded into marriage with another. She married life with a successful husband who seldom looked at her and with children who depended on nurses and governesses was not exciting. A possible lover or two appeared, but Jane went straight. At the last she is shown as a disillusioned woman accepting the half gentle life had afforded her. The novel is well written and holds the interest. It is one which women who look old but feel young will enjoy. The publishers, Houghton Mifflin, say of it: "No better picture of the American social scene in the last four decades has been painted."

In lighter fiction we have "Happy Landings" by Fanny Heaslip Lea, (Dodd, Mead.) When Malin Carlith's married lover was killed in an airplane accident she left New York for Hollywood, and on the way met Jed Traill, an aviator who had lost his nerve. It became Malin's pleasant task to build up his morale for him.

In doing so she works in the films in Hollywood, which gives Miss Lea her opportunity to present a sane and not uninteresting picture of life in our midst. That "Happy Landings" is just another romance, with true love winning out in the end, is another way of saying it is pleasant light reading for hot days.

The Hollywood Appeal

Two new translations have what may be called the Hollywood appeal. The first is "Whispering Gallery," by Charles Reed, by Colette, in which she tells largely in dialogue and letters the story of a Parisian show girl who owes her fall, her humiliation and her easy way of life to a business man whom she calls "friend." To her dressing room comes during the war a lieutenant in blue. Captivated by him, she starts a correspondence which brings him back to her lover. Then her ambition, its gratification and that, in spite of her way of life, she has tenderness and sensitivity, with aspirations to be kind and worthy, are shown by Miss Colette without sentimentality and without strain.

Janet Flanner in her introduction says of Gabrielle Colette, born in 1873 "in that part of Burgundy which produces small but beefy wines," that she is three times dead the only dominant woman writer in France, the one who supplied the organs, the sustenance, the mind and the heart" to the modern French woman in literature.

Ilya Ehrenburg, German author, in "The Extraordinary Adventures of Julio Jurenito and His Disciples," published in an English translation by Covici-Friede, has written a fantasy that is absurd or inspired according to your taste. It opens at the Rotonde on the Boulevard Montparnasse where Julio is sitting waiting for some one to liberate him by paying the patient garcon his six sous, and ends on a satiric note of self-pity because of the misunderstanding who will see in his book a vile lampoon. It is certainly as the publishers say a travesty of the human scene in which "Julio gathers about him a Cossy's army of disciples and teaches them his sick-eyed philosophy of satirical disillusionism." It is warranted to shock, violate and exhilarate the most jaded; as for normal human beings, it is plainly not for them.

Gangs Make Mystery

In mystery stories Sidney Horler supplies "Lady of the Night," (Lippincott) in which an international gang is run to earth by the combined efforts of a fragile but energetic young woman, a man about town who is devoted to her and a taxi driver who enjoys a scrimmage. Mr. Horler in the past four years has won prominence in his special field, with over 500,000 copies of his books sold. Thus he vies with J. Phillips Oppenheim in the field of mystery, intrigue and what not.

Egon Brock in "Murder on the Bridge," also unearths a gang. It is his clever and likable Chi. Gore who does the sleuthing, assisted by Inspector Lord, one of those professionals who is always in the wrong. It all begins with the murder of Dr. Melbuish, English physician. No clue as to possible enemies is discovered. Then an old scavenger is put out of the way. The letters Q. E. D. appear to be connected with the murders; a badge found on the rear bears these letters; they are pinned on the arm of a man who seems to be in the clear; they appear in a letter found among the doctor's effects. Col. Gore is certain they have significance; what that is develops slowly but surely. While it cannot be said that there is but a dull page in the book, "Murder on the Bridge" can be recommended as a logically developed detective story that compels the reader to break the seal on page 256, which marks this as "Harper Sealed Mystery."

THE SUPERFLUOUS DEBS.

By David Cecil. Bobbs-Merrill, Indianapolis.

In a different key is Lord David Cecil's account of the poet, Cowper's life, another soul unattuned to this world. In comparison to the shuddering turmoil of Strindberg's life that of this quiet, frustrated minor poet seems peaceful. Here he is shown as a sensitive, unworldly man who was crushed in youth. He, too, was passionately fond of his mother and her death while he was a child was a crushing blow to him. He found the usual lot of the shy, sensitive child at school, where he was bullied. Always misunderstood by his father, he was hurried into studying law, which he hated and in which he failed to win any kind of success.

Of his insanity and slow mastery of it the loving care given him by Mrs. Unwin, of his religious frenzies that so troubled him and of all that quiet, tortured life to which fame came too late, Lord David Cecil writes in a way to show that one may have all the awful idiosyncrasies of genius without possessing the genius. But he does it with active belief in Cowper and with kindly sympathy.

A Group of Recent Books

SKYWARD. A Book on Modern Aeronautics. By Gen. William Mitchell. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

Gen. William Mitchell entered the Signal Corps of the United States Army more than three decades ago and has had much to do with the development of army aeronautics. From his long experience and exact knowledge he writes this volume, which considers every practical phase of aviation, from engines, bearing to fly, flying fields and airways, safety devices, maps, commercial and military aviation to a glance at aviation of the future.

GOLD-RUSH DAYS WITH MARK TWAIN. By William R. Gillis. Albert & Charles Boni, New York.

The late William R. Gillis first met Mark Twain in the '60's, at Angel's Camp. The two shared a cabin for a time and were even partners of a sort. But the few new glimpses of Mark Twain as given here are of little importance. More valuable to the reader of memoirs is the author's first-hand account of his experiences in gold-rush days.

Woodcuts of E. Glittenkamp embellish a volume that makes pretty thin reading.

THE RHYTHM OF THE RED MAN. In Song, Dance and Recreation. By Julia M. Buttree. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

Ernest Thompson Seton in his introduction to this volume of Indian songs and dance attributes the change in dancing during the past two decades to the new-found vigor in our women due to the abandonment of corsets, tight shoes and invalid attitude, and the need of vigorous dances to meet the change. Experiments with dances from South America and Africa have not proven altogether happy. It is, thinks Mr. Thompson, to the Indian we must look for leadership in dancing; his dances are "clean, beautiful, dramatic, interpretive, rhythmic."

A vast amount of work has gone into the book, which gives in great detail directions for a graded list of Indian illustrations, with figurations and diagrams.

Gossip of the Book World

For Fall Publication

John Galsworthy's new play, "The Roof," will not be published until it opens in New York, Charles Scribner's Sons have just announced.

Charles Hopkins has submitted this opening for the early fall. The American premiere of "The Roof" took place on June 13 at New Haven and inaugurated the commencement exercises of Yale University. It was put on with undergraduate actors under the direction of Alexander Dean of the university's drama department.

A Scandinavian Journey

Harry A. Franck, the "Prince of Vagabonds," returned to England from the last of his adventures in the Scandinavian countries only a few days after the publication of his new travel book, "A Scandinavian Summer" (Century.)

Evelyn's Husband

John Metcalfe, author of "Kraft-Ebing," just published by Charles Scribner's Sons, and the husband of Evelyn Scott, has called on one of the United Fruit Company's boats as "quartermaster." "My duties," he should hasten to explain, "do not, however, involve my doing anything or what not. They are to do with the management or 'mates'—but with steering the ship—chiefly!"

Conquering the Air

A new revised edition—the fifth in two years—of "Conquering the Air," by Archibald Williams has just been issued by Thomas Nelson & Sons. It is a well-written story of aviation and aviators, from the first balloon flights, experiments with gliders, etc., down to the present time. The new edition includes much new material, including the trans-Atlantic flights of Williams and Barnes, Hinxman and Coli, Costes and Lefevre, the Brennan, the trans-Pacific and Australia-to-London flights of the Southern Cross, Lindbergh's "Great Will" flights, etc. There is an entirely new chapter on the Graf Zeppelin flight, an account of Wilkins's Arctic and Antarctic flights; and a chapter on Byrd's Antarctic flight over the Pole. Recent cross-continental records are included, as well as an enlarged section on the U. S. Air Mail Service, and a new section on passenger air lines.

BROTHERS OF THE BRUSH. By Liam O'Flaherty. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

Liam O'Flaherty, author of "The House of Gold" and "Mr. Gilhooley," has achieved something new in his war story, "Return of the Brute." He singles out one man of a bombing squad, all hard-bitten and ignorant except one youth, and shows how the terrible hunger and cold and fear degrade and undermine their natures, until they are reduced to the brute.

Gunn, a great ox of a man as they make them, does his best to protect the youth Lamont. All his hatred focuses on his corporal and at the last these two fight to the finish. It is a grisly hair-raising horror of a story, good medicine for those who still believe in war.

"Susan Lenox" Reissued

A continued public interest in David Graham Phillips's best and greatest novel has led Appleton to issue a new one-volume edition of "Susan Lenox: Her Fall and Rise." First brought out in 1917, after the author's tragic death, this novel aroused a storm of interest and discussion. It was in the vanguard of novels to depict American life with unflinching realism. A discriminating public was quick to champion Mr. Phillips's novel as a "milestone in the advance of our literature" (to The Bookman) and in a current issue they have of "Susan Lenox" has spread, winning a wider influence and respect for its honest stock, until it has assumed a place as an American classic.

"The Music Master," by Frank Duseneck

This fine Duveneck portrait is in the exhibition of paintings from the Phillips Memorial Gallery of Washington, D. C., now showing in the Los Angeles Museum.

PETAIN TELLS VERDUN STORY

VERDUN. By Henry Phillippe Petain. Translated by Margaret MacDough. The Dial Press, New York.

Marshal Petain's beautifully balanced, restrained but incisive account of the long battle of Verdun must take its place among the great war records. It is marked by bravery, simplicity, clearness. There is no least touch of bombast, no play of emotion, no attempt to win applause and none to withhold credit where it is due.

He begins with an account of the German attack:

"On February 21, 1916, a hurricane of iron and steel broke over the defenses of Verdun. The Germans attacked with a force and violence never before equaled. The French accepted the challenge, for Verdun to them is even more than a great fortress, an outpost intended to bar the path of the invader on the East; it is the moral bulwark of France. The German onrush at first overwhelmed all our advanced positions but was quickly found our feet, and from that time on, we held in check by our unaided strength the formidable attacks that the Germans launched unremittingly for five months. Thus the Verdun region became the scene of a terrific duel between the two chief adversaries on the western front."

Petain passed seventy divisions through the battle, knowing that soldiers who had been through the ordeal could not stand up a second time without chance of recovery. The Germans used the same divisions over and over, filling up the ranks with reserves. It was not until May that the French were able to begin the counter attacks demanded by the public. In October the last forts were retaken and the Battle of Verdun won. The Germans had lost nearly 500,000 men; the French, less.

Petain sets it all out with the precision of a logician. He avoids all expression of deep feeling over the horrors he witnessed and over the carnage he had to countenance, resorting to quotation to convey these ideas. He is fair-minded, devoid of criticism for his fellow generals and for his opponents. He gives the German Crown Prince due credit for his tremendous efforts and indicates that the blame for German mistakes belongs to others. He makes the strategy involved clear and yet is never too technical for the lay reader.

So Timeless Six

William Henry Chamberlin, Russian correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor since 1920, writes of the spirit of the Russian Communists in "Soviet Russia." "I think perhaps their strongest psychological similarity is to the English Puritans. Cromwell and Milton would feel at home in Moscow, with its utter absence of gay night life, its contempt for frivolity, its intense concentration on purposes far removed from individual enjoyment, in which respects it is strikingly different from the spirit which prevails in every other European capital."

ACQUIRING CHARM

Definite suggestions and directions for getting rid of the habits that make for lack of personality or for unpopularity, along with constructive ideas as to acquiring a pleasing personality, make this book one that the shy, moody, irritable or ineffective person who is willing to work in order to grow, may find of value.

TWO GOOD REFERENCE VOLUMES

DICTIONARY OF AMERICAN BIOGRAPHY. Edited by Allen Johnson and Dumas Malone. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

The fifth volume of this authoritative dictionary of biography, published under the auspices of the American Council of Learned Societies, is now off the press. It contains biographies of Americans from Charlotte Cushman to John Eberle, in alphabetical arrangement. The purpose of the work is to make available facts as to the life and work of all Americans but now living who have made some definite contribution to the world. It includes many names not ordinarily found in history and biography, which makes it of special value. Each sketch is written after careful research by an authority. The New York Times Company and its president, Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, made possible the publication of the work by a subvention of more than $500,000.

THE AMERICAN YEAR BOOK. 1929. Edited by Albert Bushnell Hart and William M. Schuyler. American Year Book Corporation, New York.

The latest number of "The American Year Book" seems to be more carefully edited and conveniently arranged than ever before. With the New York Times and forty-five learned societies co-operating, it is not surprising that here we find authoritative information conveniently arranged on current progress in many fields. Such an annual as this, which aims to keep the public informed on the developments in science, engineering, economics and governmental affairs, is invaluable for reference use. Nowhere else can such exhaustively arranged, authoritative information be obtained.

A third of the volume is devoted to public affairs, with the functions of government given generous space. Public finance and taxation, public resources and utilities and statistics on various subjects are given ample space. Chapters on the economics of business, on social and labor problems, on immigration and population, and on international relations are included. Hence, it may be said that this is an indispensable reference work for students of our times.

One discovers at the end a section devoted to the humanities, with informed reviews of the progress of literature, the arts and education. Each article is written by a recognized expert in his special field, which gives the book the authority that makes it recognized everywhere as a standard work of reference.

Reviews and News of Art

Curtiss's New Book

The art critic may tackle his subject from one of two angles: That of the specialist who seeks precision, taking much time to produce a thin essay that often proves dry reading, or that of the journalist, who writes his immediate reactions hot from contact with his subject. Royal Cortissoz in the Painter's Craft, just published at $3.50 by Scribners, uses the latter method, adventuring among such masters as Vermeer, El Greco, Goya, Tiepolo, Rubens, Van Dyck, Durer, Bellows, St. Gaudens and concluding with essays on the architects, Mead, McKim and White and "The American Collector." Sandwiched in between these subjects is a dissertation on Flemish painting, which alone is worth the price of the book for here the critic gives us an authentic record of the great Flemish exhibition held in London in 1927 together with a chapter devoted to a visit to the great altar piece of the Van Eycks at Ghent, once more seen in all its parts as a polyptych through the operation of the Versailles Treaty.

Curtiss brings to the job an immense fund of knowledge, gained during his long years of professional activity, made into delightful reading by his never-flagging love of art and his wide personal experience. Thirty-one essays in all are in the book and they touch many other artists such as Mantegna, Hogarth, Fragonard, Ingres, Chardin, Carpeaux, Davies, Stuart, Siddons-Mowbray and Edward McCartan. It would be hard to imagine better summer reading for the art lover who likes to combine authentic information with stimulating reflection. Twenty half-tones illustrate the text, and the spirit of the essays gains unity from the writer's feeling for the craft of painting as an element often overlooked by us when the idea to be expressed is elevated as all-important while technique is considered merely a means. He deals illuminatingly with this "merely" in his opening essay.

Paintings of Tahiti Shown

At the Hollywood Book Store is a showing of paintings in oil and tempera, drawings and a block print or two done by Paul Ronald, the Swedish-American painter, during a long sojourn in Tahiti. There is also one large mural scene with three duns in Gauguin, in that broadly decorative style with large flat areas of color and positive linear accents that give modern Scandinavian painting a character all its own. In Tahiti the painter did not so much paint each scene before him as extracts from its characteristic elements—such as the slender stems of plants, the green arc of their descending leaves, or the blue contours of mountains rising in curves from the tropical sea gurgles below—working these elements into compositions that give us at a glance the essence of the place. This habit of mind enabled him to make the fascinating drawings that charm principally by their designs, or the clear wood blocks, where the same qualities are made, by the medium, even more positive. The artist and his wife, who is an art weaver, have their studio at 5018 Sunset Boulevard. The exhibit at the Hollywood Book Store is on until the 15th inst.

A Denial to Judgment

James M. Burtnett was a British water colorist who died in 1873 after acquiring some reputation as an animal painter and exhibiting his works at the Royal Academy, the British Institute, the Society of British Artists and the New Water Color Society. Dictionaries of artists reveal little else about him but he left one work, astonishing for its size and treatment, behind him, and this immense water color, "The Angel Delivering Daniel from the Lions," is in Los Angeles, at present on view in the auditorium on the tenth floor of Bullock's.

In style this picture, painted on 240 square feet of water color paper mounted on canvas, is a typical biblical picture of its period, painted over 100 years ago in the days when there were still water-color "painters," as distinct from water-color "draftsmen." The stipple method of the time is almost defunct today, but it can be seen more effectively here in the eyes of each of the seven life-size lions as are not, unless, incidentally, these beasts are remarkably well drawn as is the gentle kneeling figure of Daniel, in whose robes the color is very pure and strong. The picture has been exhibited in England and America since 1848, when London first saw it, always receiving commendations in the press for its treatment of the theme and for its high degree of finish. It is loaned to Bullock's by Mr. George H. Pannell, who is agent for the Scottish owners.

Black and White Portraits

Two artists who specialize in black-and-white portrait drawings, Herman Armiater and Neale Dredell, chance to have returned to Hollywood at about the same time after several years in New York. Both are well known here, where they have executed many commissions. Dredell's studio is at 6764 Milner Road, Whitley Heights, and Armiater's at 362 North Windsor Boulevard.

Some New Exhibits

Among new exhibitions for August are those of Joseph Birren, well-known Chicago painter, at the Stendahl Galleries, etchings by Marylin Medjesky at the Dalzell Hatfield Galleries, paintings and prints by Michael Chepourkoff and Stephen De Rhapedar and photographs by H. C. Webb at the Los Angeles Museum. A full showing of the paintings of Boris Deutsch opens at the Braxton Galleries tomorrow.

"Tactilism" Here

Hooray! A new "ism is come to town. "Tactilism," claimed by Joseph Birren as a new dimension in art, is the title of his exhibition at the Stendahl Galleries till the 16th inst. If it's what we think it is the outlay for paint must be small.

OUR ARTISTS IN PERSON

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

When one considers John Bond Francisco—"J. Bond" as his friends usually call him—in relation to the art life of Los Angeles, feels he owes to the community at least a flowing patriarchal beard, a venerable air.

In this he disappoints us for he is a chipper, business-like man, wearing his 66 years like half their number, who is always ready to sling a paint-box and two canvases over his back, and with rifle, canteen and pipe elsewhere on his person, stride off for a day's painting in the high mountains or the hot desert.

He belongs to Los Angeles as few of our artists do, for he has continued to live in the house he built thirty-six years ago, to which he brought his bride, Nanette Louise Gottschalk, daughter of Judge Louis Gottschalk, Los Angeles lawyer, and that house, at Fourteenth and Albany streets, was one of the first erected in the then new tract opened by the artist's father, Andrew Wiggins Francisco. The tract, bounded by Fourteenth, Venice Boulevard, Figueroa and Alvarado streets, was at that time in the country and devoted to Chinese truck farms. And to this house of his own the young musician and painter came from the paternal home—five acres of orange grove at Ninth and Figueroa! His father, a veteran Ohio journalist, at one time owned an interest in the Los Angeles Times in association with Gen. Otis.

FILLED WITH SOUVENIRS

The Francisco house contains an immense redwood studio, hung with fish nets and quaint lamps, and in its many corners are odd pieces of furniture and bric-a-brac, souvenirs of journeys abroad or in the Indian country, or gifts from the hosts of artist or musician friends, for Francisco was not only one of the first painters to grow up here but one of the earliest influential musicians.

He had commenced to study the violin under Shermann Rickhardt at Columbus, O. When, as a youth, he went to Berlin, Munich and Paris he carried on his double studies. At 5 a.m. he would commence practicing the fiddle, leaving it for eight hours during the day at drawing and painting, in Berlin under Hans Fechner and in Paris at Julian's under Bouguereau and Fleury and the Academy Colarossi. When under Munich and Cincinnati influences, he was a student life that called for intense application.

FIRST CONCERT MASTER

Coming back to Los Angeles he held his first exhibition in 1888. All the pictures were of figures reminiscent of the Bouguereau era, a fine example of that period being "The Sick Child," notable for clear drawing, beautiful textures and skillful painting of white on white. At a stroke he became a leader here in painting and music. He taught the former and organized chamber music groups. In 1897 he aided Hadley Hamilton to form the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra and was that ensemble's first concert master.

The Francisco home is surrounded by others with steep pitched gables peeping out through tall trees. For several blocks about the house did one catch a breath of an earlier day and, despite the noisy thoroughfares so near by, a quiet where child and bird voices are heard in a green leafy setting.

He liked to paint figures but in California outdoors pulls the artist. Sometimes, with Elmer Wachtel and Tom Wilde, the organist, Francisco would hitch up a team and drive to the river bed for a day's sketching, pausing to buy vegetables fresh pulled from a Chinaman's field and coming home from a day well spent. Back in time he was to go further afield into the San Bernardino and other mountains. In the '90's the mountains were full of big streams for the pipe lines had not yet sucked them up for their turbines. Here he commenced painting the sugar pines and Douglas firs with sunlight falling between their boughs in soft yellow lines, often with a rushing stream to catch highlights.

LOVED THE MOUNTAINS

Love of the mountains led to building the Francisco lodge at Squirrel Inn, since destroyed by fire. He went farther afield, too, into the Sierras, the Yellowstone and Yosemite and the canvases he produced found purchasers and friends in many parts of America.

In recent years the painter has felt more strongly the spell of the desert, painting its blue distances and warm yellow light in New Mexico, Arizona and California, enjoying the opportunity it gives to work in clear, limpid color and atmosphere.

To addicts of fashion the styles of a decade previous to their own invariably seem ridiculous. They even turn up their noses at the clothes they wore five years ago. So younger folk will say Francisco is "old fashioned," and imagine that they have really said something. Mature people know better. Fashions come and go and whatever of beauty is produced during their sway remains permanently beautiful. So you will find many a household that has tested the enduring charm of Francisco's best work as it has hung, year after year, upon its walls.

FRIENDSHIP IS BEST

As for the painter-musician himself, sitting in his spacious studio in his sixty-sixth year, he quotes F. Hopkinson Smith to the effect that with a clean canvas and beautiful scene before him the painter owns the earth. The artist life has been a good one, he says, and perhaps the best thing of it has brought him has been enduring friendship of great and charming people.

J. Bond Francisco

"What evenings this old room has seen," he reminisces, "when Hamlin or Hunan would caress their violins for the hushed assembly or Mme. Bauer's limpid notes bring its beauties from the piano.

"The best things in life are free, friends it brings to you." And he said it a little bravely standing green branches that peep in at his big windows and we left him feeling that this fragrant, whispered softly of a continuously lovely past that must make it the envy of 1930 brand-new studios.

Japanese Prints Shown

Prof. Purham Nahl of the art department of the University of California, Berkeley, has placed his collection of Japanese prints in the art department of U.C.L.A., Westwood, where they are on view for students and visitors.

Fletcher Mysteries

"The Heaven Sent Witness" (Doubleday, Doran) is a collection of the best stories of crime and mystery by J. S. Fletcher, one of the most popular English detective story writers. The volume contains twenty-one tales, each one a miniature novel. In the title story a man in the vestibule of a theatre express train casually at his watch and from that slender clue police build up a case which leads to a murderer. Another of the stories, "The Button and the Bunk," explains how Detective Superintendent Ashbertson solved a murder which had puzzled the London police because he happened to sit next to a nervous young man in a tea shop.

that with a clean canvas and a beautiful scene before him the painter owns the earth. The artist life has been a good one, he says, and perhaps the best thing of all it has brought him has been the enduring friendship of great and charming people.

"What evenings this old room has seen," he reminisces, "when Yaw or Elman would caress their violins for the hushed assembly or Harold Bauer's limpid notes bring new beauties from the piano.

"The best things in life are the friends it brings to you." And as he said it a little breeze stirred the green branches that peep in at all the windows, and we left with a feeling that this pleasant house whispered softly of a continuous lovely past that must make it the envy of 1930 brand-new stuccoes.

Japanese Prints Shown

Prof. Farnham Nash of the art department of the University of California, Berkeley, has placed his collection of Japanese prints in the art department of U.C.L.A., at Westwood, where they are on view for students and visitors.

Fletcher Mysteries

"The Heaven Sent Witness" (Doubleday, Doran) is a collection of the best stories of crime and mystery by J. S. Fletcher, one of the most popular English detective story writers. The volume contains twenty-one tales, each one a miniature novel. In the title story a man in the vestibule of a through express looks casually at his watch, and from that slender clew the police build up a case which hangs a murderer. Another of the stories, "The Button and the Bank Note," explains how Detective Sergeant Hubbertson solved a murder which had puzzled the London police because he happened to sit next to a nervous young man in a tea shop.

The three-piece shorts costume is developed in shantung and consists of blouse, shorts and wrap-around skirt.

NO DEARTH SEEN OF BABY STARS

Goldwyn discovered Eleanor Hunt, chorus girl in New York, brought her out for "Whoopee" and has her under contract to insure sharing in her coming glory. She's 20 and auburn.

R.-K.-O. is frankly grooming several of their finds for stardom. June Clyde, who danced and sang so well that as a child she was billed as the Baby Tetrazzini, shone in the musical comedy picture, "The Cuckoos" as the prima donna ingenue, and in "Tanned Legs." She is one of the few blonds and listed as a dramatic comedienne.

Dorothy Lee is another comedienne, first seen on the screen as the comic dancer in "Rio Rita" and now being featured in "Half Shot at Sunrise." She is 19 and resembles vaguely Norma Talmadge, except that her hair is red.

FORMER ZIEGFELD GIRL

Irene Dunn was a former Ziegfeld girl. They gave her the lead in "Leathernecking" and she is now the prima donna in the operetta "Babes in Toyland." She is slender, brunette, pensive and has a lovely voice.

Another promising ingenue is Roberta Robertson, who came straight from school in New York to play in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," and so won a better role in "Half Shot at Sunrise." She is 17, rather blond and very "sweet."

TALENT PARAMOUNT

Paramount bursts with new talent. Frances Dee is considered their outstanding find. She was an extra in "Follow Thru" when Maurice Chevalier saw her in the studio restaurant and urged giving her tests. The studio doubted his judgment, but obliged him. She jumped right into the lead with Chevalier in "Playboy of Paris," and was so good that they have now given her a still more responsible role with Buddy Rogers. Frances is very small, wistful, brunette and with appealing blue eyes.

Claudette Colbert had made an immediate success. Her first picture was "Young Man of Manhattan." Later there was "The Big Pond" with Chevalier, and she is now slated for imminent stardom, another piquant brunette.

Marlene Dietrich, brought from Germany by Josef Von Sternberg, where, in her very first picture, she pretty well stole the honors from Emil Jannings, is now playing her first important role here in "Tu Morocco." Marlene is the Garbo-cum-Jeanne Eagles type, and the stills of her are charming.

ROSITA TALKS!

Rosita Moreno, Spanish, but speaking seven languages, is also regarded as precious. She sings well, besides being a sensationally good dancer. Rosita is soon to burst upon us as a screen starlet.

Lillian Roth, another brunette, made such a success of secondary leads in "The Vagabond King," and "The Love Parade," that she is also considered a suitable candidate for baby stardom at Paramount.

And don't forget little Mitzi Green, 9 years of age, the first child Paramount ever put under contract—a riot in "Honey" and "Paramount on Parade," with a good singing voice and a diabolical talent for imitating people, directed by Elsie Janis in the latter picture. You should see her take off Chevalier! So now they are starring this babe in "Tom Sawyer," "Huckleberry Finn" and "Skippy," to everybody's intense satisfaction.

LORETTA SIGNED

First National has just bestowed a five-year starring contract on Loretta Young. After three years in modest roles with them they featured her last year and now she plays the lead in "Kismet" with Skinner. She has a charming speaking voice but does not sing and she's a dark blond, with blue eyes, and only 17 now. No wonder they did not take her seriously for so long.

Laura Lee, a tiny comedienne who showed up well in two of Joe Brown's pictures, age 19, and now under contract with vast hopes, is another girl they intend boosting but there. Dancing is her long suit, too.

Universal has little Joan Marsh, who resembles Joan Bennett and used to play with Mary Pickford as a baby. She left school at 15 to play in "The King of Jazz," young Carl Laemmle having decided she was something in particular. She is so lovely they use her for the fashion stills. She has just finished "The Little Accident" and is to be featured in a comedy series now.

CANDIDATES LEGION

Warner Brothers have a dozen candidates for baby stardom. Lotti Loder, for one, very brunette, very young, whose first appearance was in the picture "Nancy from Naples." Now she is to be featured in the operetta, "Children of Dreams." Evelyn Knapp, a dark blond, played with Charles Bickford in "River's End" and now has an excellent role with Winnie Lightner in "Red Hot Sinners," in which she is the sweet young love interest. Claudia Dell just floats upward. After "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," and "Big Boy" with Jolson, there was "Sit Tight" with Winnie Lightner, and now two pictures claim her services, "Bad Women" and "Fifty Million Frenchmen." Claudia is, however, a blond with hazel eyes, the most dangerous kind of a blond.

And none has forged ahead so remarkably as Maureen O'Sullivan, the little Irish girl Borzage found in Ireland for "Song of My Heart." She is only 20 now, brunette, dainty, winsome. She hopped right into "So This Is London" as Will Rogers's daughter, and now is to have the leading role in "Just Imagine," the studio having discovered she has a sweet singing voice.

STARRY RECORD

Another successful babe is Marguerite Churchill, only 19 last Christmas, yet with a starry record with the New York Theater Guild before she was 17, and the winner of numerous university scholarships before that. Her first picture was with Paul Muni in "The Valiant." Then came the Fox contract, and "Harmony at Home," "They Had to See Paris" and numerous other pictures leading up to a chief role in "The Big Trail" filmed in Alaska. She is quite tall as screen girls go and regarded as the American home type in appearance.

Fox goes in for college girls. Joyce Compton went to Tulsa University, won a beauty contest, did extra work, despaired, dyed her hair red and made no end of a hit with Clara Bow in "The Wild Party," after which Fox signed her for "Salute," "The High Society Blues" and now intend promoting her to featured roles. Another dark blond.

Louise Huntington, another brunette, very like Florence Vidor as a girl, comes from Texas, and Dana Hall, Wellesley. She appeared on Broadway as "The Constant Nymph," went with the first American company to South Africa, and then hopped into the lead in "The Vikings of the North." Fox are now featuring her in "Fair Warning" and intend promoting her steadily.

LEAD ROLES AWAIT

Jeanette Loff is another Universal hope. She formerly played unimportant parts for Pathe, but Carl Laemmle, Jr., specially chose her for the wedding scene in "The King of Jazz." They have discovered she has a lovely singing voice and is a graceful dancer, so that leading roles await her.

Una Merkle, formerly with Helen Hayes in "Coquette," is selected for Ann Rutledge in "Abraham Lincoln," then hops into the feminine lead in "Eyes of the World." She typifies young romance and so pleased are Feature Productions with her work that she is now to play in Roland West's "The Bat Whispers." None of her pictures have been released yet but she is confidently predicted as a sensational surprise to come. Blond, southern, and with stage experience.

Warners have just acquired two new babies. Barbara Weeks, age 17, brunette, who played in "Whoopee" with such success that she is to be groomed for important roles as a member of the studio stock company; and Marion Marsh, 16, Hollywood High School, who has sisters and brothers on the screen, who helped her break in. She, too, was in "Whoopee," a cutie type, and her tests have proved most satisfactory. Marion is blond, with gray eyes.

SUPERLATIVE TEETH

And there's little Dorothy Christy, who played with Chevalier in "Little Cafe" and is to appear with Winnie Lightner in "Red Hot Sinners." She is rather patrician looking, blond, humorous, and received her original experience on the stage in New York in "New Moon" and "Follow Thru." She also has superlative teeth.

Some of the girls have been around for quite awhile, such as Helen Twelvetrees, whom the Wampas forsaw as a winner when they made her a Baby Star in 1929. Fox, however, cast her as a comedienne, with unhappy results, and it was not until Pathe took her over that she showed her caliber in "The Grand Parade" and "Beyond Victory." Now she is being starred in "Her Man," and Universal is borrowing her for "The Canary Crespe."

DISCOURAGING SPELL

Dorothy Burgess had a somewhat similar experience, for after "In Old Arizona" no one could see her as anything but a Mexican minx, till Pathe popped her into "Swing High" and other pictures. Now she is making "The Painted Desert" with William Boyd. It often takes a discouraging spell before stardom hoves in sight.

Last but by no means least, is Claire Luce, 22, a very beautiful blond, a Columbia University graduate, and a star dancer, whose fame spreads to Europe. Arthur Hopkins sent her to London as the star of "Burlesque." A. H. Woods gave her the lead in "Scarlet Pages" in New York, when the Fox casting director decided she belonged in Hollywood. Her first picture will be "Luxury" with H. B. Warner and the predictions are that she will be a whiz.

Marooned Film Players Fed in Novel Manner

Life-guard practice during the filming of sea rescue scenes for John Gilbert's new talkie, "Way for a Sailor," served a practical purpose when the troupe recently found itself stranded on a rock at Laguna Beach when the noonday whistles blew.

The rising tide surrounded the group of players and camera crews, cutting off the base of supplies on the adjacent cliff. With the Coast Guard strategy in mind, Director Sam Wood rigged up an improvised breeches buoy by means of which crates of food were lowered to the marooned troupers.

Leila Hyams plays opposite Gilbert in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Albert Richard Wetjen sea novel. Included in the supporting cast are Wallace Beery, Polly Moran and Doris Lloyd.

ARLEN GOES DOWN IN SEA

Richard Arlen goes down into the sea in a diver's outfit in "The Sea God," one of the most novel pictures on the new 1930-31 Paramount production schedule.

WILL SILENTS STAGE RETURN

Jack L. Warner, in charge of production at both Warner and First National studios, whose organization pioneered the new form, is emphatic in his declaration that the talkies are here to stay.

"Three years have proved it," he declares. "The First Vitaphone programs were, of course, presented four years ago, but everything dates from the first showings of 'The Jazz Singer,' with Al Jolson, and since that time the screen has been steadily given over to the talkies.

"There is a slump at the box office at the present time, but it is the natural summer slump. We had only a slight decline in attendance last year, and because of this the present falling off seems greater by comparison, but it is really not abnormal. Last year the box-office falling off amounted to only 20 per cent. This year about 35 per cent.

"The talkies were in such favor last summer that they held the size of the audiences close to normal. This year the novelty of the talkies is not so pre-eminent, and we are experiencing conditions that were more typical of the silent days. Also the movies are bound to be affected by general conditions, which are more pronounced in their slowness this year than usual.

"But whenever a good talking picture appears the crowds throng. This form of entertainment is here to stay."

Louis B. Mayer, chief studio executive of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, takes an attitude of greater moderation on the subject. "Right now I would say that there isn't a chance of the silent picture coming back, but who can really be sure that this will be true ten years from now?

"Personally, I have a very wholesome respect for the art of pantomime. Right now it seems to be permanently obscured by a talking screen. It is quite possible, however, that the present situation will so spur the minds of pantomimic artists that new methods of presentation will bring back the silent film as a definite and important competitor of the talkies.

HELD PRACTICALLY DEAD

"Such new methods have not yet appeared. The talking picture, expanding its technique, is gaining in popularity with each increase in its art. Therefore, I feel that if the silent picture does come back, its return, even to a fractional degree, is a long way off."

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Paramount, sees a field only for the highly specialized silent film. "To my mind the silent picture is practically dead and never will play as important a part in public entertainment as it once did. Better and better use can and will be made of sound and dialogue as a more perfect technique is developed. Such intelligent use of sound will further relegate the silent picture to the background.

"However, there occasionally will be an exceptional subject which will be produced and released and will gain public favor. Two noteworthy examples are 'With Byrd at the South Pole' and 'The Silent Enemy,' both of which have synchronized musical accompaniments and sound effects. Subjects of this type will come so seldom that they will not be an important issue."

While he does not anticipate any return of the silents, William Le Baron, vice-president of R.-K.-O., declares, that the public does not want as much dialogue as they have been given. "The proper formula as nearly as we can judge at this moment will be about one-half dialogue and the other half motion—action—pantomime that will explain itself," he said. "This pantomime will be enhanced by the necessary sound effects. The result will be closer to the silent motion picture. In striving for perfection in the new medium we will doubtless pass through a period of surplus action in more or less silent form, but there is no reason to assume that the screen will ever completely lose its voice."

"The public will never be satisfied with printed titles on the screen that are supposed to represent the dialogue spoken by the characters," is the belief of Sol Lesser, associate producer of United Artists, and who has been active in theater operations. "There is unquestionably much interest on the part of the producer in the forthcoming Chaplin film, and just what effect it will have on the industry but then a Chaplin picture is singularly free, as a rule, from any so-called written dialogue titles. It is difficult to imagine many pictures of this type being made at the present time, and as long as the characters are supposed to converse in a screen play, talk will be a necessity, because the public has accepted it as an adjunct to screen expression."

B. P. Schulberg, general manager of West Coast production for Paramount, tersely comments: "Pictures that are silent never again will succeed for one important public now is being sight and sound and ever be satisfied with the other."

THALBERG SEES

Irving Thalberg, executive of Metro-Goldwyn-dios, believes in the ev of the silent picture. pantomime is a very can never be compl But it will be some before we again have get spoken lines. The tion to talking pictures very definite one. They when they were very popularity of the new tinues to increase from as the directors and writ more deft in a new tech "It will be a long time fore we reach the peak talkies can do as a And for that time the ture will remain in a pension. It will certainly some time."

Describing himself as among the "die-hards" ject of the talking picture ing the pantomimic scre Cecil B. De Mille declare feels that the talking come to stay, without "Things have been done that no one believed pos said. "It is true that a story of the epic kind ha made, but I now think this kind of plot will be handled in the talking fore, being in the position ing former doubt of the unreserved acclaim I for hardly be correct in say about the possible return ture pictures. Certainly seems now a long ways

PUBLIC BOOK TASTE GROWS

mend the best—and buy it when it is offered.

Richard Dean Martin's "Liberty" is a stimulating exposition of the dangers of mob rule under a democracy. Open-minded readers may disagree with much in the book; that so many people are reading it indicates quick response to enlightened discussion of our era.

A book that has been near the top of the list is Ludwig's "Lincoln." Though scholars have criticized it for not being something other than a sympathetic and wonderfully interesting story of a man who honestly put his country before himself, it merits its popularity.

PITFALLS MADE CLEAR

Bleuniger's "The Human Mind" has had a wonderful success, proving the psychiatry may be made popular. It makes clear the pitfalls placed for us by the high-tension life of today. It is most entertaining to read of the victims of neuroses who prove the truth of the new science. If we are to live that full and free life the age enables, we must watch our step lest we become crippled, stupid, lonely, queer, moody, frustrated or perverse personalities.

Two books just published that are on Brentano's latest list are "Humanity Uprooted," by Maurice Hindus, which throws new light on the Russian social revolution, and "Man and His Universe," by John Langdon-Davies, which traces man's cultural development and attempts to make plain his place in nature.

BANCROFT AS SAILOR

George Bancroft will be a sea captain in his new picture for Paramount.

Screen Writing Depicted by Bradley King

Writing for the screen is a trade by itself, a fact which the industry is rapidly learning, according to Bradley King, who has a long list of successful scenarios to her credit. These include the screen versions and dialogue for "Adios," Richard Barthelmess's latest production. The author of best sellers and writer of stage hits is not necessarily a first-rate scenarist, and the record of many successful authors who have failed in the cinema demonstrates this, she points out.

"Since the talking picture with its dialogue requirements has dominated the situation, Hollywood has imported scores of men and women with attainments in various literary fields that seemed to assure their value to the business of production," Miss King declares. "Some have proved valuable, but the majority have been obliged to depart after having demonstrated to themselves and their employers that the work is not within their capabilities. The fact is that the faculty for preparing screen stories consists of talents quite from those used in other forms of writing."

LIBERTY SIGNS HERSHOLT

Jean Hersholt recently signed a contract with Liberty Productions, the newly formed national releasing and producing firm, headed by M. H. Hoffman. Hersholt will be featured in "Red Kisses" and "East of Asia."

STOMPIE NEW FIND

Stompie, the new colored "find" now supplying many of the laughs in "Loose Screws," a Pathe short, is a great friend of Stepin Fetchit, both comedians having been brought up in New Orleans. Stompie made his initial film bow in the recent Pathe western, "Pardon My Gun."

Village Being Constructed for New Film

Building an entire village on a rocky breakwater extending into the Pacific is the unique engineering feat now under way for the filming of "Dark Star," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's talking transcription of Lorna Moon's novel.

The village will be a replica of a northern fishing village and is being constructed on a breakwater near San Pedro. The materials are barged to the spot and a small army of workmen is engaged in the construction. When finished it will be surrounded on three sides by the ocean, and is far enough out on the breakwater to get the heaviest waves.

Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery will be among the featured players in the new play which George Hill, director of "The Big House," will direct from an adaptation and dialogue by Frances Marion and Marian Jackson.

Kingfish to Be in Picture

"Kingfish," that personality nightly woven into the lives of Amos 'n Andy, is to reach the screen in the person of Alex Robb.

Word to this effect came recently from the office of William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of R.-K.-O. production, following a long-distance conversation with Amos 'n Andy in Chicago.

Robb has never faced a motion-picture camera, but he is well known to radio audiences as "Kingfish."

BIRTHDAY VALUES TO PROVE THAT BUSINESS IS GOOD IF YOU GO AFTER IT!

SUGAR and SPICE
by Alma Whitaker

I WENT to hear Mayor Rolph at that Elks' Club luncheon and third party for the ladies. The mayor was wearing white sweet peas in his lapel, which, in the language of flowers, means "delicate pleasures and departure." The tables were also strewn with pansies, pansies for thoughts, fragile white pansies all drying for want of liquid refreshment. Someone had told me Rolph was "wet," hence the pansies must have sighed as they curled up and died.

However, there is nothing the matter with Mayor Rolph's tailor. And he got in all about the women and children, just as every right-minded candidate does.

All the same I abhor musical programs at political meetings. One snatches an hour to run in and hear the candidates, aching to get back to work, and then fidgets through silly groups of songs about silly emotions, and finally have to leave in the middle of the candidate's speech. One of these days I'm going to manage a woman's division of a political campaign and there won't be a drip of musical program anywhere.

So the Ebell Club is opening its dining-room every day in the week now, a genuine social club as well as a cultural institution. It always seemed such a waste to have that gorgeous clubhouse unoccupied on many days a week. Luncheons are to be 50 cents, too, except on program days. Dinner is to be $1, with a program once a month. That's what I call a regular club.

Spiritualism is having a remarkable renaissance these days. A short editorial on the subject recently brought letters galore from people anxious to tell their personal experiences. Patience Worth, author via the spiritual world of some remarkable books, visits the city, as does Arthur Ford, who so many believe received the Houdini message. Mrs. W. T. Stead, daughter-in-law of the famous W. T. Stead, and Dr. Outhwaite of St. Martins-in-the-Strand, London.

Then too, the Carl Wickland's are here, he the author of "Thirty Years Among the Dead," and she regarded as a remarkable and authentic medium.

E. K. Pray, wealthy resident of the Elks' Club, is an earnest believer and is entertaining many of these people. He gave a recent dinner in honor of several visiting mediums, and now sends a poem, said to have been sent through Mr. Ford from the spirit world. Mrs. Pray having passed on many years ago. It is an excellent poem, not the childish stuff so often offered.

Numerous friends of my own announce themselves as ardent believers, especially since Sir Oliver Lodge's radio talk on Sir Conan Doyle.

A delightful old lady of 90 passed on last week, Mrs. Jessie Cooper, mother of Miss Belle Cooper, vice-principal of the Los Angeles Evening High School. She came here from Scotland, via Canada, arriving in Los Angeles forty-three years ago. And every day during all that time she read The Times, or, for the last two years, had it read to her.

Belle Cooper has been the devoted daughter through the years, maintaining a charming home for her mother, installing radios and everything possible to make life sweet for her. There is a special halo in heaven for devoted daughters, they announce so much for one sublime love.

This Frank Lloyd Wright, architect extraordinary, who commands almost four pages of space in the New Yorker, by Alexander Woollcott, lives at Santa Monica and is every whit as interesting as that magazine claims. Although America is just discovering him, except for a marital scandal widely exploited a few years ago, he has been famous and admired in Europe and the Orient for years. Japan's Imperial Hotel, exquisitely beautiful, withstood dire earthquake shocks to the gratitude of that country. England, Germany and Holland have acclaimed him for years. Outside of the United States of America he is hailed as the father of modern architecture and his works studied by all students of his craft.

It is only recently, however, that Princeton and Cornell have invited him to lecture. New York held an exhibition of his work, and the Architectural League in New York feted him with a banquet. Even, I mean, when students come from all quarters of the globe to see his buildings.

So that Frank Lloyd Wright is very much the genius type, even unto the shaggy hair, the heavy brows, the long upper lip and the unsuccessful management of his private affairs.

I think we newspaper women should stage a party in honor of Mrs. J. C. Davis of Wrightwood. She is a witty old dear of 78, one of the earliest pioneers of our craft, beginning at a time when editors were quite sure they had no use for women writers.

It is such women as Mrs. Davis, Mary Holland Kincaid, Annabelle Lee, Ida McGlone Gibson, etc., who blazed the trail for us and were so capable, pleasant and desirable to work with that some of us moderns find them hard to live up to.

Mrs. Davis reads the papers pretty thoroughly and always has time to write nice encouraging letters to those who have succeeded her. Mary Kincaid is the honorary president of a large group of active newspaper women, who don't elect any other kind of a president. She is also an honorary member of numerous journalistic sororities, in which the rising flapper generation adore her.

It was a stylish party, with the nicest things to eat, that Samuel Goldwyn, via Hank Arnold, the publicity man, gave in honor of Sam's new find, Evelyn Laye, out at United Artists' studio. At least 100 members of the writing profession assembled and did justice to the fare provided. After a couple of hours, however, I felt it might be a good idea to meet the guest of honor. The rest of the press agreed with me. We were entirely in the right mood for a successful introduction. But it seems she hadn't arrived. In a general way there might be something eerie about an absentee guest of honor, but you'd be surprised how well this party went, anyway.

'EXTRAS' CARRY FAMED NAMES

Several Men Who Have Helped Make History Work in Film

The movies are the real melting pot of America, according to word from the R.-K.-O. lot.

Several men whose names are big in current history are working as extras on "Half-Shot at Sunrise," the Bert Wheeler-Robert Woolsey comedy now in production. They include former Maj.-Gen. Alexander Ikonnikoff, who was Admiral Kolchak's chief-of-staff; Maj. Owen Martin, dare-devil commander of the British Somaliland campaign in East Africa, and Stanley Campbell, Canadian war ace with twelve German planes to his credit.

CLUB NOTES

Mrs. George W. Turner, Fresno, has recently been appointed chairman of the State revision committee of the California Federation of Women's Clubs by Mrs. W. W. Slayden, president of the State Federation. Mrs. Turner will take the place of Mrs. L. G. Leonard, Oakland, who, due to ill health, was forced to resign.

Detailed plans for the coming year in the departmental work of the State Federation are now being received from State chairmen at headquarters here. Mrs. A. B. Brown, Fresno, State chairman of art, is outlining a program in commemoration of the two thousandth birthday of Vergil, which occurs this year. The intent of the program is to lead art chairmen in the women's clubs of California in fostering visits to museums and libraries, in featuring talks and programs on Vergil and in the study of his life. The study of California architecture will be another feature of the work of the art department for the coming year.

Details of a plan to assist women over 45 years of age, who are without employment, home or friends, are being worked out under the leadership of Mrs. A. P. Nelson, Santa Ana, State chairman of industrial and social problems.

Luncheon Honoree

Mrs. Charles Irving Walker, president of the California History and Landmarks Club, will be the honor guest at a luncheon to be given Tuesday by Mrs. Edwin S. Fuller of Inglewood. Among the other guests will be the board members of the organization including Mmes. Harry Leigh Bentley, Alice M. Letteney, J. Thomas Nash, E. K. Harkness, Albert Sydney Johnson, J. A. Colvin, C. E. H. Lloyd, Miss E. J. Quinn and Miss Eloise Furman.

Guest of President

Members of the Business Women's Service League were the guests of the president of the organization, Mrs. Robert M. Smalles, Monday evening at her home on Browning Boulevard. A waffle dinner, served to the guests on the porch of the residence, was followed by a golf tournament at Santa Barbara and Western avenues.

Final Session

Closing its regular meetings for the summer recently, the Woman's Breakfast Club will not convene again until the last Thursday in September when the fall season will be inaugurated with an elaborate program. Mrs. Hascie Freeman is president of the club.

HINES COMEDY STARTS

With William Watson directing, Johnny Hines's first picture under the new arrangement with the Christies, is now in production at Metropolitan Sound Studios. This, the first of a series of "Gaiety" comedies, to be released by Educational-Christie, is tentatively titled "Johnny's Week-end" and features the following players: Helen Bolton, Estelle Bradley, Vernon Dent, Adrienne Dore and Frank Rice.

The New in Stores & Homes

Novelties, Ideas, and Suggestions

By OLIVE GRAY

Let us concede that it is ignorance which leads visitors to the woods and fields to destroy every living creature that they see. Those who know and love nature, cringe before such wanton destruction of the wild innocents. Not only unharmful, but actually beneficial are the gopher snakes, tiny lizards and many other inhabitants of the outdoors; and yet man slaughters them on sight. If those who can enjoy the great open spaces only through killing, would concentrate upon the real pests, their destructive energies could be well employed. Let such arm themselves with ant-destroying spray-guns; or expend ammunition upon ground squirrels—California's pests supreme!

Gee Yee Bracelets

My curiosity was keenly aroused by those objects spread out in the window of my favorite Chinese store. Long strips, in silver and in gold, they looked somewhat like a skeleton fan, and yet—well, I could not guess and so I "asked the man." It seems that, for generations, a family in China has made those articles—flat strips in metal, carved and either gilded or silvered, and guaranteed to not tarnish. Their purpose? To hold in place the modish chignon of Chinese women! But, in our country? They here have a novel purpose. By a deft twist they become—guess what? Bracelets! The most dainty of band bracelets. Who, but the Chinese, would have thought of this?

Cantonese

Here, also, I discovered a novel flower-holder for the wall. Fashioned from Cantonese pottery, in that rough finish so alluring, these wall "pockets" show forth dimly molded flowers, birds and branches, most artistically designed. One more "must have" for our Chinese room, or for the porch.

Big and Furry

A flattering season, in furs is predicted. Never, within recollection, have the fur collars been so entrancing. The witchery of a pretty face, peeping out from those furry depths, cannot escape notice. Whether the upstanding collar be attached to a long fur coat of contrasting or matching pelt, or used as the finishing touch to the coat of fabric, its flattery cannot be disputed.

Advance

And not in memory have coats for fall and winter been offered so early or at such low cost, considering the quality, which is in advance of that heretofore offered. The August sales, present winter opportunities in the coat line, unprecedented. In some of the stores, making these alluring offerings, one may deposit a small amount and thereby gain the advantage of early prices, being assured that one's coat needs have been supplied in advance. Like placing money in the savings account it is to coat thus.

Hat Bandeauing

Those who have dreaded the unflattering effect of hats distinctly off the face, may now feel assured of the reverse by means of the bandeau which, placed next the brow, serves to soften the features. Moreover, the most becoming color may be chosen for this bandeau, further adding to the personality of the hat.

Short Wraps

The short wraps of velvet, which have made for themselves so enviable a place in summer couture, now are replicated in wraps of fur for winter. Especially attractive in lapin—which so cleverly mimics ermine, these wraps come in many different colors, and may be dyed to match any costume, or chosen in the season's popular browns, beige tones or in white. The latter is, of course, most sumptuous, since so seemingly a close relation to ermine—the royal fur.

Black Velvet

Black velvet, for formal frocks and gowns, no longer is confined to the middle aged—if there are any such! Embodying the most clever and youthful lines, this always charming material is incorporated in the highest of couturial creations for the coming season. With the touch of fine lace, either by way of collar and cuffs or other knowing features, the black velvet gown is one of the new season's delights.

Crystal and Jet

With the vogue of black and white as insistent as ever, the new necklaces in black jet and white crystal are happy assistance to the costume in this flattering combine.

The greatly elongated strands, composed of alternate beads or oddly shaped insets, in this consortment of semiprecious stones, add a touch of elegance unsurpassed.

Such necklaces, in that always authentic store, show the beads intricately carved, adding still further to their treasurefulness.

Rubber Carpet

Instantly that your foot rests upon this new rubber carpeting, it actually does rest; for the resilience of this new floor covering makes it as soft as moss to tread upon. Fashioned from strips of rubber, set edgewise, the process of making is ingenious, and the result, carpets, rugs and runners, of colorful beauty, as well as durability. Just about to be placed on the market, a collection of these novel carpets is being shown in a leading bank on Broadway—a bank favoring Los Angeles products, and exhibiting them as a fostering favor.

NEW PLANS COMPLETED FOR STORE

Swelldom's Reorganization Sale Voices Quality With Low Prices

BY OLIVE GRAY

Under a comprehensive plan of reorganization in policy, Swelldom has much to offer in the way of Angelo-patriotism.

Harry S. Goldberg, who has spent considerable time in study of eastern centers of trade, not only for assembling merchandise for his store, in pursuit of the principle embodied in the slogan, "Where style is inexpensive," but in scrutiny of the general business situation, expresses himself as fully confident—yes, optimistic—as to the future of our city and as to prosperity in the main.

"Women, and especially our Los Angeles women," said Mr. Goldberg, "always have been interested in good attire, and they always will be. When there is talk of economy, it is natural to somewhat restrict the clothes budget, but never to abolish it. In obtaining merchandise for our reorganization sale, which began yesterday, we have taken this fact into consideration, and—without any special favors from manufacturers, but from the situation existing, whereby a large class of merchandise may be obtained, at less than usual, cost, we are passing along to our patrons, these savings—presenting not only lower prices, but a higher quality at such prices."

Then Mr. Goldberg confided that his optimistic expressions are more than an attitude, for architects already are at work upon plans of enlargement and beautification of the facade of his building, plans whereby the already extensive window space will be doubled, thus presenting an effect of great attractiveness, on this "the women's corner"—the corner of Broadway at Sixth.

The reorganization policy of Swelldom is one worked out to meet the present-day situation, and embodies a general lowering of prices, with addition of quality, for these prices, emphasizing more than ever the fact that at this store, the woman of good taste, who is ambitious to remain always in the mode, may satisfy her wishes within a budget devised to meet the demands of economy. The merchandise showing in the reorganization sale, which opened yesterday, is such as to verify the promises of Swelldom and to more than satisfy the expectations of patrons, long loyal to this store.

Greta's Brother Making Talkie

Another Garbo is now appearing on the screen for an American motion-picture company. This is Sven, brother of the famous Greta, now developing into a leading film actor in Europe. He has lately been acting for Paramount in this company's first all-Swedish talking picture, "Where Roses Bloom," which has been in production at the Paramount studios in Paris.

Besides Sven Garbo, featured in the production, the cast includes Karen Swanstrom, who has been called the Sarah Bernhardt of Sweden; Margnita Alfven, Uno Henrning and Nils Wahlbom.

Veteran Actor Will Return

Coming all the way from London to repeat his success with Ronald Colman in "Raffles," Fred Kerr, veteran of the stage, will return to Hollywood this month to appear in Colman's new starring production now being completed by Frederick Lonsdale.

Kerr, who is 72 years of age, was signed by Samuel Goldwyn over the telephone recently. He has played, it is said, in more than 100 successful stage productions during his long career as a legitimate actor. In "Raffles" he played the role of Lord Melrose.

SONS OF PITTSBURGH

William Powell and Regis Toomey, Paramount players, were born in Pittburgh.

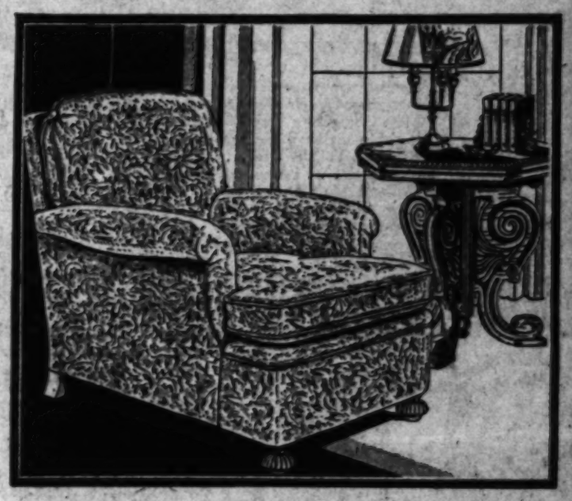
1880 — GOLDEN JUBILEE YEAR — 1930

Now! your dollar buys more style - - - more value

This store's adjustment to the new low level of prices is complete. Our stocks reflect directly, in new goods and in old, the established low level which we know to be the bottom. This is a new era of prices and values. August—in Barker Bros.—confirms it. We have foreseen that the public would want now, when prices have reached the bottom, not only old goods at new low prices but new goods at the bottom prices.

On this basis NOW, this store is prepared and August starts the era of new standards of value based on the new low level of prices. Now your dollar buys more style—more value! This is the time to buy!



Pillow Back Chair

Wilshire Club model of exceeding comfort $79

Imagine yourself easing into this chair after a long hard day . . . sliding back on the long deep seat (the seat cushion is a Barker Bros.' luxurious down and hair combination,) and nestling against the thick, soft back pillow! Perfect relaxation! The smartest style of the season, covered in a choice of 10 fabrics in the newest weaves and colors. (This season's fabrics show a decided fashion change.) It's a 1930 price achievement.

75 of these sold last month without advertising!

After months of research be sure it was perfect in style and comfort, Barker Bros. showed this chair on their floor last month. Immediately, before we had a chance to advertise it, they began to sell—five and six a day. Everyone who sat in it wanted one for their home. They are new—they're fashionable—they're comfortable! Choose yours now!

Young Russian to Write Music Theme for Film

Announcement was made yesterday by Carl Laemmle, Jr., of the signing of Dimitri Tiomkin, Russian composer, to write the music for the production of Tolstoi's "Resurrection," which Edwin Carewe will direct for Universal with John Boles and Lupe Velez as the stars.

On account of an intimate knowledge of Russian life and music, Tiomkin was selected for the assignment.

Tiomkin plans to interpret the emotions of the military, the peasants, the Siberian prisoners and the romance of young Russiana.

Starting when a lad in Russia, Tiomkin obtained his musical education in the St. Petersburg Conservatory and won a scholarship at an early age. Later he made concert tours through Germany and Russia. Both his father and uncle were leaders in the anti-imperial movement in Russia.

Doctor from India to Talk

Dr. Hildreth Caldwell, recently arrived from India, will speak in the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood Wednesday evening.

Dr. Caldwell is a graduate of the University of California, class of 1926. While at the university, she was a member of the tennis and hockey teams and the women's crew. Since graduation she has been in India and for the past year she has had her own hospital at Kasganj.

She is spending part of her furlough visiting her brother, L. B. Caldwell, 5838 Saturn street, and on September 1, next, will go to Rochester, Minn., to study at the Mayo clinic before entering Johns Hopkins University for post-graduate work. She plans to return to the North India Presbyterian Mission this fall.

CHAMBER LAUNCHES NATION-WIDE CAMPAIGN

SIX MILLION WILL HEAR OF SOUTHLAND ADVANTAGES

Three-Month Publicity Endeavor to Be Conducted by Organization; Great Benefit Expected

BY CHARLES C. COHAN

Throughout the East, Middle West and in Canada the story of Los Angeles county will be carried in the next three months in special enlightenment on the soundness of investment and mode of living conditions in this area. By word of mouth and photo exhibits supplemented with the distribution of 500,000 pieces of Los Angeles county literature, this information will be made available to fully 6,000,000 persons, it is estimated, who will come in personal or publicity contact with State fairs and other exhibitions.

It is believed that such widespread efforts will bring about 20,000 families, or approximately 80,000 residents, to this locality within a year, as nearly as can be estimated from prior results.

On the basis of the net spendable income figured for the residents of this county by Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce computation, new arrivals would indicate additional buying power of more than $100,000,000 annually for the Los Angeles metropolitan area. Coupled with the large number of new arrivals, for several years will come thousands of others who it is expected, who eventually become home seekers here.

It is contended that in the time and institution of this method of advertising for Los Angeles county as a factor in population increase, this area has had its greatest growth.

Preliminary work again will be in the direction of Charles Bud, secretary and manager of the field service and exhibit departments of the chamber, accompanied by his staff, who last left for Springfield, Ill., for the 1930 exposition program started. The exhibits will be sent and literature distributed in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Kentucky, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Wisconsin and Texas. State fairs to Kansas Free Fair, the Ohio National Exhibition at Columbus, the National Flower Show in March and the International Flower Show at Chicago.

NOT ON SOUND BASIS

This campaign is not an intensive, organized plan to induce an exodus to Southern California, it is said, but is an economically sound campaign intended to influence a number of thousands of new residents fully aware of the existing conditions here as well as mindful of the obligations that devolve upon them. There is an especially great opportunity in this region for the acquisition of homes, for the acquisition of acreage that will give industrious and sincere families an additional chance to supplement other income, or make a living from what they produce on the land. The nearness of these areas to the city and the availability of good roads are advantages, give them the benefit of city conveniences with the rural charm. The people of Los Angeles county are also will be impressively set forth as well as the industrial and commercial components that back up the industrial character of the district.

"We are not out to paint any fancy picture," Bayer declared. "We deal with facts. We stress the fine climate and in many instances, this region means a home. We present true details of our industrial and shipping facilities and their future possibilities while we, of course, em-

FACT AND COMMENT

Realty boards throughout California soon will begin enrolling property owners in a recently created division. The purpose is to fully acquaint owners of real property with all matters pertaining to taxes and to enlist their support in the California Real Estate Association's plan to lessen the amount of taxes paid by realty and shift it to other sources.

The movement undoubtedly will be of benefit, but just how far-reaching it will be and whether or not it will greatly help the small property owners of the State and include them in the membership will depend upon the fee.

Influence may be brought to bear upon the State Legislature should membership in this division of the Realty Board become general and property owners exert themselves in the the mattrs. This influence will be in direct ratio to the number of property owner memberships obtained and the fee to be charged will largely determine the size of the membership.

Leaders in realty boards may well consider this if they hope to make the new division an influential body. Small property owners need the advice and information which the boards plan to supply, but if the fee is high the great majority of them will not take kindly to it and will not enroll.

While it is true that large property owners will not be deterred by the fee, realty boards will place themseves in an unfavorable light unless dues are within the reach of the majority. Some plan permitting a range in fees according to the amount of service granted and which will permit both large and small land owners to become members is worth consideration.

Decision Affects Realty

A recent Superior Court decision on subdivision restrictions may have considerable influence in the development of Los Angeles. The court failed to support such restrictions when the property was shown to have outgrown them, due to changes which were not traceable to their violation.

Los Angeles is the fastest growing large city in the world and there are many sections in it that in years gone by were developed for residential purposes. Time has wrought changes and in frequent instances the general character of the property is such that to enforce the restrictions would be both a handicap to development and also would be contrary

CAPITALISTS BUY CORNER ON WILSHIRE

Loomis - Street Property Changes Hands in Recent Realty Deal

For a consideration of approximately $400,000 the northwest corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Loomis street last week was sold by Mrs. Barbara Campbell to the Properties Holding Corporation, a group of Los Angeles capitalists including Marco H. Hellman, banker.

The property fronts 117 feet on Wilshire and is improved with a five-story brick building known as the Campbell Apartment-Hotel. This structure will be modernized at once, it is reported. Hellman was represented in the transaction by Ralph H. Ensign of the F. C. Ensign Company, realty brokers.

As part of the purchase price Mrs. Campbell acquired the Fra ranch in Tulare county. This property contains 220 acres, the principal development of which is a full-bearing orange grove.

Advertising Given Approval of State Board

Unanimous approval of the National Association's plan to supply advertising service to California real estate boards and individual realty brokers, was expressed in a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the California Real Estate Association.

The service will be available from the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and it was recommended by the directors that the State association lend its co-operation to make the advertising campaign a success in California.

VALUATIONS DURING JULY SHOW GAINS

Decrease in Large Building Construction Evidenced in City Report

Building permit valuations for the month of July showed a gain compared to those of June, figures released yesterday by J. J. Backus, superintendent of buildings, disclosed. July figures were $5,841,626 while those for June were $5,485,138.

The report disclosed a falling off in large building construction, but one such project being started within the month. Modernization work under way is shown in the report which cites 886 permits being granted during the month for a total of $486,318.

A total of 107 permits was granted for golf course buildings, showing the activity in this field. Such structures, however, were not large, total valuations amounting to $50,526.

Dwellings reached a total of $1,766,337 in permit valuations, $1,268,487 being for single dwellings and $497,850 for doubles. Apartment-house construction for the month totaled $807,392. Housing construction provided accommodations during the month for 936 families, 532 in dwellings and 404 in apartment-houses.

Construction work for the first seven months of the year is still below that of the corresponding period last year, figures being $45,554,527 for 1930 and $62,013,732 for 1929.

LAUNDRY BUILDING STARTED

REDLANDS, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) Work was started this week on erection of a building for the Sanitary Laundry on Sixth street between Citrus and Olive avenues. The building will cost about $15,000.

LABORATORY STRUCTURE ANNOUNCED

Film Manufacturing Plant to be Erected Immediately in Hollywood

Announcement is made by H. B. Lewis, general manager of Multicolor, Ltd., of the immediate erection of a Class-A structure to be located between Orange, Romaine and Sycamore streets in Hollywood.

The building will be two stories in height, contain approximately 50,000 square feet of floor space and will have a completely equipped laboratory for the manufacture of Multicolor film. General and executive offices of the company will also be located in the building.

The Multicolor structure is being erected by Myer Brothers, contractors, and is scheduled to be completed and ready for occupancy within ninety days. It is stated that the laboratory plant will have a capacity adequate for future requirements. According to Lewis, the plant, when completed, will represent an expenditure of approximately $500,000 for land, building and equipment.

SKYSCRAPER PLANS TOLD

Forthcoming Building Operations of Newly-Formed Income Trust Organization Made Public

Plans for the erection of four limit-height structures, three in Los Angeles and one in Santa Monica, featured structural announcements of the week. The four buildings will involve a total expenditure of approximately $4,500,000 and will be erected by the C. C. C. Tatum Building Income Trust, a recently formed organization with a capitalization of $5,000,000.

Sites for the structures are at the southwest corner of Second and Hill, where an office building will rise, West Seventh street between Valencia and Union streets, on which site will be built a hotel, the vicinity of Tenth and Alvarado streets, which is to be the location for an apartment-hotel, and a fourth location for the Santa Monica project to be announced at a later date, according to Cecil B. Barker, general manager and member of the firm of C. C. C. Tatum Realtors.

O. W. Heinz & Co., headed by O. W. Heinz, former president of the Apex Motor Car Company, has been named fiscal agent for the trust. The concern has leased the second floor of the Merritt Building for fifteen years. The trust department, Bank of America, is trustee and the trust is for fifteen years.

The office structure will have 120 feet frontage on Hill, 165 feet on Second and 120 feet on Clay street. It will contain 300 offices and a 75-foot tower will surmount the building. The hotel is designed to have 285 rooms and will front 70 feet on Seventh street and extend to a depth of 107 feet. It will be managed by a national chain hotel concern, Barker states. This structure will be built this year and the ofing building in the spring, according to the announcement.

Plans for the apartment-hotel provide for 118 suites. It will cost approximately $500,000 with furnishings costing an additional $100,000.

The Santa Monica project is a fourteen-story apartment, office and theater building. It will cost $825,000 to build and $125,000 to furnish, the announcement states. It provides for a 1500-seat theater, 168 offices, twelve stores on the ground floor, and 168 apartments.

EXPERIENCE OF BROKERS AIDS COURSE

University Correspondence Studies Contributed to by Authorities

Realty brokers with long experience in handling California real estate have contributed to the correspondence study course of the University of Southern California, which provides a convenient means of obtaining practical and technical knowledge of real estate matters at home, according to officials in charge. The Southern California correspondence study department, with headquarters at 1306 Transportation Building, issues twenty-six lessons by mail, applied to California law and conditions.

Authors of the real estate course include W. H. Daum, president of the California Real Estate Association; Harrison Lewis, first chairman of the educational council of the association; George W. Zent, present chairman of the educational council; Peter Hanson, chairman of the appraisal committee, Los Angeles Realty Board; G. Gordon Whitnall, former director of planning, Los Angeles; Harrison R. Baker, chairman, subdividers' division, C.R.E.A.; George A. Schneider, lecturer in real estate, University of Southern California; O. O. Reed of Fresno, chairman of the farm property division, C.R.E.A.

Los Angeles County Leads Nation in Realty Activity During Last Six-Month Per

FILING SURVEY INCLUDES MOST POPULOUS AREAS

Instruments Recorded Here Exceed Aggregate Volume for Six Other Leading Counties of Country

With a total of 236,336 realty instruments filed in Los Angeles county during the first six months of the current year, this county ranked first in volume of real estate activity among twenty-three of the most populous counties of the country, according to a nation-wide survey of filing activity completed this week by the Security Title Insurance and Guarantee Company.

The survey includes counties in California, Illinois, Ohio, New York, Michigan, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and other States, each county having a population of more than 500,000 people.

The second greatest volume of real estate activity was centered in Cook county, Illinois, of which Chicago is the county seat. While Cook county leads Los Angeles county in point of population by more than 1,500,000 people, the latter had a lead of more than 50,000 filings for the first half of the year. The latest available population figures give Cook county 3,396,808 inhabitants, and Los Angeles county 2,190,857. There were 191,371 realty instruments filed in Cook county from January 1 to June 30.

AGGREGATE RECORDED

The total of realty instruments recorded in Los Angeles county during the last six months exceeds the total of such instruments filed in the counties of San Francisco; District of Columbia; Allegheny, of which Pittsburgh is the county seat; Suffolk of which Boston is the county seat; Erie of which Buffalo is the county seat, and Hamilton of which Cincinnati is the county seat.

Los Angeles county, during the first half of the year, averaged more than 39,000 realty instruments per month; Cook county, Illinois, 30,000; Cuyahoga county, Ohio, 21,000, and Kings county, New York, with a population comparable to that of Los Angeles county, 10,000.

Cuyahoga county, of which Cleveland is the county seat, held third place in the survey with a total of 130,140, or 106,193 less than the total for Los Angeles county. Its population is estimated at 1,255,897. Queens county, New York, and Wayne county, Michigan, were in fourth and fifth places, respectively, in the survey. Queens county filings totaled 91,000 and Wayne county filings were 90,469.

SAN FRANCISCO FOURTEENTH

San Francisco county, with 36,081 instruments recorded since the first of the year, ranked fourteenth in the list of counties in the country in volume of real estate activity. This shows nearly six and a half times as much activity for Los Angeles county as for San Francisco county.

The following tabulation gives the name of each of the twenty-three counties covered by the survey, and the total number of instruments filed in the county during the six months' period.

| State and county | |
|---|---|
| California: Los Angeles | 236,336 |
| San Francisco | 36,081 |
| Illinois: Cook | 191,371 |

CANYON DWELLINGS TOTAL HIGH WATER

BURBANK, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Forty-five homes, representing a total investment of nearly $750,000, now occupy sites in Sunset Canyon, according to Maud Fleming, secretary of the Sunset Canyon Country Club, which, as the owner of the canyon, has strenuous, year-round residential rather than real-estate subdivision construction. Five homes in the Skyline Drive addition are valued between $75,000 and $80,000 each.

CONTRACT AWARDED ON BOILERS

Units to be Installed in Municipal Power Plant, Pasadena

One of the largest boiler contracts let in Southern California in recent months was awarded yesterday by the city of Pasadena to Consolidated Steel Corporation, Los Angeles.

The contract calls for fabrication and installation of two 1560-horsepower, forged steel, stirling-water type water tube boilers, built to operate under a working pressure of 400 pounds. This type of boiler is among the largest made for industrial purposes. The contract price for the units installed was $120,000.

The boilers will be installed in the Pasadena municipal power plant on Elevarn street and will be used to generate power for a new 20,000-kilowatt turbine. About four months will be required to complete the contract, according to George Blankenhorn, manager of the boiler department of Consolidated Steel, who will have charge of the installation.

Brick Building to be Erected for Car Agency

SOUTH GATE, August 2. (Exclusive)—Another business building is to be erected on Santa Ana street, between Long Beach Boulevard and Seville avenue, the structure to be occupied when finished by Baumgartner, Inc., Ford dealers. Fred Ott, owner of the property, who has leased it to the Ford agency for a period of ten years, said will be 110 by 110 feet in dimension on a lot with 175-foot frontage on Santa Ana. The remainder of the lot will be given over to a used-car department.

The structure will be of brick and concrete and will be erected at a cost of $25,000, with an additional $10,000 for equipment. It will be finished the middle of September or the first of October.

Concrete Used Increasingly in House Flooring

Giving greater rigidity to the entire structure, concrete flooring is being used more and more in the small home builders' state. This material reduces fire hazard and may be colored to lend an artistic atmosphere within the home.

Floors of concrete act as fire stops. A basement fire cannot go beyond that floor and such is the case with the first and second stories. The application cost of concrete flooring is slight, for such material will not sag, warp or shrink and will hold walls and ceiling tight. The maintenance of a high resale value is another important factor in using concrete in the small home, it is declared. Hardwood, clay, vertex or rubber tiling, linoleum and other finishings can be laid satisfactorily over this material.

NEW ROADS SPUR LAKE LOT SALES

Officials Lay Increased Activity to Completion of Highway

Recent activity in lot sales at Lake Arrowhead has demonstrated the close relationship of good roads and an active realty market, according to officials of the Arrowhead Lake Company who announced yesterday that completion of a major portion of the new high-speed, daylight highway leading to the mountain resort district has met with a heavy increase in sales and inquiries regarding the property.

"This we attribute directly to the new highway," one official said. "Large numbers of people who have never visited the lake before have been circulating in all the resort, but since the last accessibility has been made easy."

The new road to the San Bernardino mountain lake eliminates all the old switchbacks and steep grades. It is practically completed to a point where it is used by a road slightly more than a mile in length, recently completed directly to Lake Arrowhead.

Many homes are in course of construction at Arrowhead and plans for a large additional number are being prepared by resort lot buyers, it was stated.

to the value of the property owners.

Sections that once were quiet residential areas now are noisy with traffic, making them undesirable as home sites. The court decision opens the way for property owners in such neighborhoods to have early restrictions removed and their property further developed for other purposes.

Southland Confidence

Announcement last week of the $4,000,000 building program of the C. C. C. Thatun Building Income Trust, by which four skyscrapers are to be erected, three in Los Angeles and one in Santa Monica, is further evidence of the confidence large realty operators hold in Southern California.

This project has been cogitated months in the formulative stage and the intention of officers of the trust to build comes at an opportune time.

Once building operations here return to normal, business in general will be greatly benefited.

VALUATIONS ESTIMATED

State's Real, Personal Property Values to Total $20,000,000,000 in 1930-31 Rolls

California will reach the $20,000,000,000 mark in actual appraised valuation of real and personal property, based on total assessed valuation, with the completion of the 1930-1931 assessment rolls, according to a report compiled by Gilbert H. Beesemyer, secretary of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association, which shows that from a total of $6,626,202,074 in 1930, California's assessed valuation has advanced to $9,080,092,002 in 1929, a gain of 1384 per cent.

The actual appraised valuation of real and personal property in California has increased $18,449,850,978 during the fifty-year period, as property in this State is assessed on a 50 per cent valuation, the report states.

The Guaranty analysis shows that Los Angeles county with a 1930-31 assessed valuation of $3,589,462,469 has within $2,100,000,000 of one-half of the State's total actual appraised valuation of $20,000,000,000.

The greatest increase since 1880 was registered during the 1920-29 period, assessed valuation showing a gain of $6,358,811,280 or 117 per cent for the ten years.

Increase in assessed valuation for the five ten-year periods since 1880 follow:

| | Increase | Per cent |
|---|---|---|
| 1880-90 | $ 440,[illegible] | [illegible] |
| 1890-00 | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| 1900-10 | [illegible] | 109 |
| 1910-20 | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| 1920-29 | [illegible] | 117 |

The Guaranty survey indicates that the average yearly increase in the assessed valuation of California for the last fifty years has been $184,60[illegible] or $[illegible] every day for the full period. Between 1920-29 the average increase was $633,811,113 each year, $12,381,196 each week, $1,766,888 each day, $81,770 each hour and 1[illegible] each minute.

CHAMBER PLANS PUBLICITY DRIVE

theatre the attractions of this locality for tourists, our mission is essentially to interest those who are looking for a new location and have property prepared to make the change."

BOOSTER ADVERTISING URGED

A significant part of the campaign in the avowed purpose to avoid urging any and all encouragement to assist (either with cash or otherwise) they can afford to come or not. The Southern California cannot be expected to take care of the country's unemployment, overflow nor can it afford to urge an indiscriminate influx to this land of promise, is stressed by Bayer. "Our method," he stated, "is to find out from those who inquire from us regarding coming here, whether they are in position to come and if so if they can take care of themselves for a reasonable time after they get here before making an income in their new location. And if the newcomer will do his business with reliable persons he won't find himself saddled with worthless land."

On this basis it is set forth the new arrivals can have a considerable part in the upbuilding of the community while at the same time enjoying its many advantages.

Corner Leased to be Occupied by Gas Station

For a total consideration of $100,000, the Spotthouse Mercer Company has taken a 10-year lease of the southwest corner of Washington street and Eighth avenue and construction of a service station structure now in under way at the site, it was reported yesterday.

The site has a frontage of 100 feet on Washington and a depth of 150 feet, and is owned by G. W. Hedde. Contractors O'Hanlan and Flannery are handling the construction work, which is scheduled for completion within thirty days.

Attorney Buys Home in Tract

Another name has been added to the roster of home owners in Huntington Palisades, Rollin L. McNitt, Los Angeles attorney, has purchased the Monterey type home which was under construction for Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hardie, for a consideration reported at $60,000.

HIGH SCHOOLS TO BE ERECTED

Work Starts on Completion of Final Drawings

Spanish Renaissance, Tudor Styles Employed

Provisions to be Made for Future Expansion

Construction work on two high-school plants, one at Culver City and the other at Griffith Park Boulevard and St. George street, involving an aggregate expenditure in buildings, land and equipment of $1,475,000, will be started as soon as architects have completed working drawings.

The Culver City project will be known as the Alexander Hamilton High School and will occupy a site on eighteen acres of ground recently acquired by the Board of Education. It was designed by Architects John C. Austin and Frederic M. Ashley. The structure will be of Class A construction, the frame being of reinforced concrete, outer walls of ruffed brick and the trimming of terra cotta.

The main building will be three-stories in height and will contain an administration department, library, science department and twenty-four classrooms. There also will be a manual training building and another for physical training. A fourth structure will be used as a cafeteria and for domestic science work. The capacity of the plant will be 1000 pupils, but plans will permit of increasing to 2500 capacity. Spanish Renaissance style of architecture will be used. The building costs provide $460,000 for the structure, $200,000 for equipment and $125,000 for land.

John Marshall High School at Griffith Park Boulevard and St. George street, was designed by George M. Lindsey and Elwood P. Eisen, architects. English Tudor type of architecture will be used. The main building will be three stories in height and will contain twenty-five classrooms.

In addition there will be a home economics building, physical education building, and a shop structure to provide quarters for classes in woodworking, electricity, auto mechanics and printing. The plant will provide accommodations for 1000 pupils and provision has been made for future enlargement. Cost of the plant will be $400,000 in buildings, $150,000 in land and $200,000 in equipment.

DWELLINGS UNDER WAY

HUNTINGTON PARK, August 2. (Exclusive)—Magdamina Helwig has started the erection of two residences on Cerona street, one to cost $8000 and the other to cost $1800. Carrie Chaplin is erecting a $4800 duplex dwelling on Zoe avenue.

INCREASE IN FILINGS RECORDED

County's Total Last Week Exceeds That of Previous Corresponding Period

Bringing the number of instruments filed in Los Angeles county during the first seven months of 1930 up to 289,493, a total of 6211 instruments pertaining to real estate transactions was recorded last week as compared with 6980 for the previous week and 7048 for the corresponding 1929 period.

The 1930 filings to date are greater than the total number of instruments recorded during any year in the history of Los Angeles up to 1922 which was on the eve of the so-called "boom" period, according to the regular weekly report of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. In 1920 total filings were 255,000 and in 1921 they were 282,196. At the present rate 1930 filings will make the year's total greater than that of 1922. Los Angeles banner real estate year, the Title Guarantee survey predicts.

A total of 2801 deeds was filed last week as compared with 3422 for the previous week; 1479 trust deeds as against 1548; 163 mortgages as compared with 159; 1071 reconveyances as against 1094; 521 releases of mortgages as compared with 516; 203 notices of completion as against 169 and 175 leases as compared with 153.

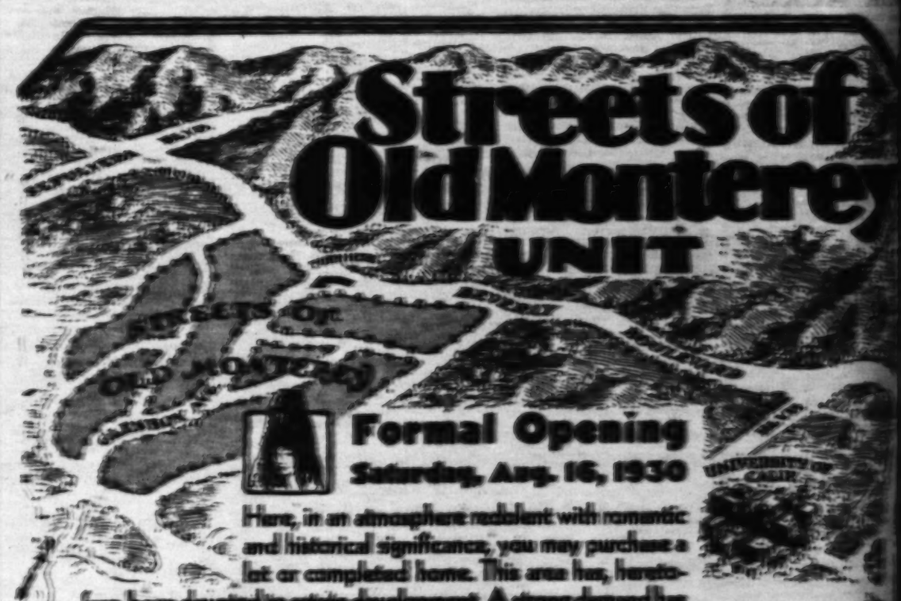
Streets of Old Monterey UNIT



Formal Opening Saturday, Aug. 16, 1930

Here, in an atmosphere redolent with romantic and historical significance, you may purchase a lot or completed home. This area has, heretofore, been devoted to estate development. A strong demand has materialized, however, for a well restricted residential district embodying the same climatic and cultural advantages enjoyed by the estate owners but at an extremely moderate cost. LOTS WILL AVERAGE FROM SIXTY TO EIGHTY-FIVE FEET IN WIDTH.

Westwood Hills

A number of early California homes are nearing completion on "The Streets of Old Monterey." They will be opened Saturday, August 16th amid fiesta scenes.

As a background to this tract, there is the Santa Monica range, carpeted with a rich foliage. To the west "the crescented swing of the purpled Malibu" and to the east...The City..."with its Babylonian tower," the right distance away to insure you peace, comfort and an environment of refinement.

SUNDAY MORNING. Los Angeles Times AUGUST 3, 1930.—[PART V.] 3

Higher Material Costs Held Forerunner of Building Activity

LUMBER AND CEMENT IN FIRST PRICE INCREASE

Los Angeles Dealers Anticipating General Upward Trend in Many Lines Within Short Time

Building material prices have reached the bottom and in some instances already have begun the upward climb, it was disclosed yesterday following a survey of building conditions conducted by D. H. McDonald, secretary-manager of the modernizing and building bureau of the Builders' Exchange.

Definite increases in prices are reported in lumber and in cement, the former advancing $3 per 1000 and the latter 30 cents a barrel. Electric conduit material has increased 10 per cent in cost, McDonald reports. The survey showed that material dealers of the city are convinced that within the next few months the material prices generally will begin a steady climb," McDonald reported. "This is due in a measure to the general belief that building activity is scheduled for a great and that before the end of the year this city will witness a much greater building activity than in the past."

PRICES LOWER THAN 1925

Despite the fact of recent increases in cost of lumber and cement, building materials still are selling at prices far lower for 1925, the survey shows. Other materials which do not expect to follow the lead of lumber and cement also are below 1925 prices.

Increases of these costs follow: lumber, 10 per cent less; construction labor 20 per cent less; hardware, 15 per cent; sash, door and trim, 25 per cent; electric equipment, 10 per cent; plumbing, rough and finish, 25 per cent; rock and sand, 10 per cent; paint, 10 per cent; hardware 20 per cent; heating equipment, 20 per cent; glass, 20 per cent; metal lath, 22 per cent; reinforcing steel, 8 per cent; steel sash, 11 per cent; steel joists, 10 per cent; structural steel, 10 per cent; common brick, 30 per cent; face brick, 50 per cent, and labor costs through increased efficiency 15 per cent less. The figures show an average reduction of 20 per cent in the cost of major materials.

EXAMPLE OF ADVANTAGES

The advantages of present-day building and modernizing are shown in a survey which points to the fact that in 1923 a gas furnace to heat an average five or six-room house cost $100 and today this furnace may be purchased for $115. In addition lines bronze butt hinges which sold in 1925 for 22 cents are sold today at 16 cents.

"The illustrative of lowered building costs, McDonald declares, is an average six-room house which was built in 1925 for $7,500 and was duplicated by the same owner this year at a cost of $5,000."

NORTHWEST CAPITAL TO BE INVESTED

Syndicates Plan to Buy Interest in Chain Store Properties Here

Capital from the northwest aggregating more than $1,000,000 will soon be invested in Los Angeles business properties, according to C. H. Lind, executive vice president of Burton & Co., realty brokers, who returned yesterday from an extended trip to the North Coast States and Western Canada.

CLARENCE H. LIND

While in the north Lind contacted syndicates headed by John Sherman Robinson of Seattle and Frank M. Lamborn of Tacoma and arranged for Burton & Co. to represent them in making investments in Los Angeles business property developments. The major portion of the syndicate's finances will be in chain-store enterprises, said Lind.

As the money is invested more funds will be forthcoming and it is expected that more than the original $1,000,000 appropriated for the initial investment will soon be available for conservative Los Angeles business projects.

CITRUS MEN REORGANIZE ASSOCIATION

Chamber of Commerce Leader in Co-operative Movement

Under the leadership of the Fontana Chamber of Commerce, a general reorganization of the Fontana Citrus Association is under way. Fontana growers expect to make more complete their co-operative marketing arrangements and to lower their handling costs by shipping through the local house a larger volume of fruit than has been handled here in the past. Petitions are now being circulated, and it is expected that many more than the required minimum of 200 carloads of fruit will be pledged to the project.

Sixty-two growers attended the reorganization meeting, which was addressed by Paul S. Armstrong, assistant general manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, and others prominent in co-operative work. The report of the Chamber of Commerce committee which had been appointed to confer with the county horticultural expert showed that heretofore only 25 per cent of Fontana's citrus produce was being shipped through the local packing-house.

Broker Lists Three Recent Realty Sales

Several recent realty sales are reported by A. M. Fellows, realty broker of North Los Angeles.

Joel K. Gregory, attorney of St. Paul, Minn., acquired the Stanley property at Saticoy street and Oakdale avenue, for $9000, and plans to locate on the property as soon as he can conclude his business affairs in St. Paul.

Harry Abernethy of Glendale purchased the Manning home on Roscoe street near Winnetka avenue, for $7500, and O. Stuetzel, poultryman, purchased an eleven-acre site at Topango Canyon Boulevard and Roscoe street for $16,500 and plans erection of poultry equipment to house 25,000 hens.

Wholesale Drug Company Plans Plant Erection

Construction to be Started in Ninety Days

Building plans of the Brunswig Drug Company were made last week when it was announced that the building pictured above, to cost $780,000, would be erected within three months on a site bordered by Second and San Pedro streets and Central avenue. This will be the first unit of a project which eventually will house all departments of the concern.

INDUSTRIAL STRUCTURE ANNOUNCED

Demolition of Company's Present Buildings Causes Change in Location

One of the largest industrial structures in Los Angeles is to be erected by the Brunswig Drug Company, which during the week announced that construction work would begin within three months on a manufacturing building and laboratory on Second street, near Central avenue, to cost $780,000.

Demolition of four structures now occupied by the company on North Spring street, preparatory to widening this street in connection with Civic Center plans, necessitates the erection of the structure, Lucien N. Brunswig, president and owner of the company, reported.

The new building will be of reinforced steel, five stories in height with a basement twenty-two feet deep. It will front 250 feet on Second street and extend back to a depth of 150 feet. A sixth floor will be added later for a roof garden and recreation place for employees.

For forty-three years the Brunswig Drug Company has been located in the Main-street area, where general offices of the plant now are maintained. For the present these offices will remain where they are but later the entire activities of the company will be moved to the new location.

CLASSES AT UNIVERSITY CONTINUED

Twice-a-week Preparations for License Examinations to be Conducted

Because of requests from prospective brokers and salesmen who desire to pass the required examination given by the State Real Estate Commissioner the first part of September, the University of California Extension Division has decided to continue its twice-a-week classes through August. This course begins the 5th inst., and will be completed the 28th inst. Two lessons of two hours' duration will be given each week on Tuesday and Thursday at 815 Hill street Building, Eighth and Hill streets; classes starting at 7 p.m.—Ivan A. Thorson will be in charge.

This will be the fifth class of its kind which the university has offered.

Georgian Type Home-Building Permit Issued

PASADENA, Aug. 2. (Exclusive) A $350,000 residence will be erected in this city for C. Pardee Erdman, Occidental College professor, it was learned today when F. H. Ruppel, contractor, was granted a $25,000 permit for erection of the foundation.

The residence will rise on a two-acre site at 1085 Glen Oaks Road, will be of Georgian style throughout and will contain forty rooms.

During the current month building permits to the amount of $346,332 have been issued here. This total is $50,000 more than for the same period last year.

CITY'S WAGES RANK HIGH

Los Angeles First in Western States in Factories, Workers, Pay Roll and Output Annually

Los Angeles ranks first among Mountain and Pacific Coast States in number of manufacturing establishments, wage earners, total wages paid and value of manufactured products in the course of a year, according to the current issue of Trends and Indications, published by Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., Inc., New York business experts.

Working from United States census of manufactures figures from the last completed report, 1927, the house reports for Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle, its nearest rivals for industrial supremacy, a table which shows as follows:

| City— | No. of Establishments | No. of Wage Earners | Annual Wages Paid | Annual Value Manufactured Products |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Los Angeles ..... | 2965 | 66,608 | $99,845,000 | $610,539,000 |
| San Francisco .. | 2092 | 41,909 | 61,134,000 | 429,728,000 |
| Seattle ..... | 1154 | 20,601 | 29,623,000 | 168,032,000 |

From these Federal census figures the article determines that Los Angeles' industrial workers receive an annual average wage of $1498, San Francisco's $1461, Seattle's $1438. These figures were scanned with satisfaction by local open-shop exponents as showing how Los Angeles, an open-shop city, pays its workers compared with San Francisco, a tight union town.

Further arithmetical calculations based on these figures give for Los Angeles workers an average individual output per year of $8160 compared to San Francisco's $10,250 and Seattle's $8160, the article sets forth. This figures Los Angeles' wages in ratio to manufacturing cost at 16.3 per cent, San Francisco's 14.3, Seattle's 17.6.

At first thought this might appear to those unfamiliar with such figures, it was pointed out at the Chamber of Commerce, as indicating that Los Angeles and Seattle workers are less efficient than San Francisco workers. However, no such deduction actually is justified because the bases of comparison are different. If all were steel mills, it was pointed out, then such a conclusion might be drawn, or if all manufacturing establishments were of any one kind or in any parallel sets of kinds, which they are not.

The great difference between the nature of manufactories permits of no such comparison. For instance, it was shown, in Los Angeles the annual average manufactured products of a number of industries, including shirts, is $3640 while that of motion-picture workers is $15,300. This cannot, it is plain, be taken as an indication that the workers in the group, including shirts, were any less efficient than film workers. They simply deal in businesses admitting of no comparisons to determine worker efficiency.

So it is, chamber officials pointed out, that the Dorrance-Sullivan figures cast no reflection on Los Angeles' workers' efficiency nor any reflection on the per cent of wage cost to total manufacturing cost.

Another figure bearing out this view is contained in the publication which shows that the average plant here employees 22.4 persons against 20 in San Francisco and 17.8 in Seattle. No one would think, it was pointed out, of saying on this basis that it takes more men to run a plant here than in the other two cities.

The local experts do not question authenticity of the eastern experts' figures but caution against misuse of them because of what might at first sight be deemed apparent.

CITY FIRE HAZARDS CITED

Elimination of Antiquated Structures Declared Means of Normalizing Building Industry

Efforts that are now being made throughout the United States to restore the building industry to normalcy are due to receive a great impetus through the elimination of antiquated and unoccupied structures, which constitute the most serious fire hazards to be found in large communities, insurance company officials declare.

Advices received by Sam L. Carpenter, vice-president and general manager of Rule & Sons, Inc., insurance underwriters, reveal the fact that a move is now afoot, fostered by State fire marshals and State fire commissioners and State and municipal chambers of commerce in many parts of the country to hasten the removal of obsolete and abandoned property. It has been found, Carpenter stated yesterday, that the major part of the total fire losses of the United States, which last year amounted to well over $500,000,000, are caused by this type of structure, the second greatest contributing factor being cheap and faulty construction of new buildings.

While accurate statistics are not yet available for the nation on the percentage of total fire losses caused by these classes of buildings, it is known that it amounts to more than 50 per cent, a fact which is being utilized by all agencies interested in fire prevention and reduction to aid the campaign for utilization of fire resistant materials in dwelling-house construction. The trend to this class of home protection is now very pronounced, the executive pointed out, especially in certain western cities like Los Angeles, which has one of the lowest annual fire losses in the country.

ENSENADA HOTEL NEARS COMPLETION

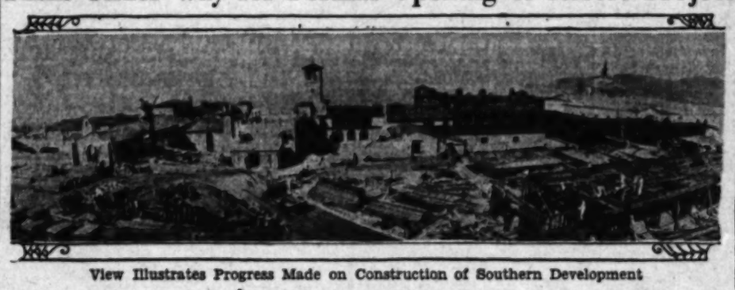
Plans Under Way for Formal Opening of Resort Project



View Illustrates Progress Made on Construction of Southern Development

INITIAL plans are being made for the formal opening next month of the Playa Ensenada Hotel and Casino at Ensenada, construction work now having reached the stage where the structures are about 90 per cent completed.

The Compania Mexicana del Rosarito S. A., sponsor of the project, is composed of Mexican and Los Angeles capitalists. It owns 587 acres along the shore line of Todos Santos Bay together with a lease on five miles of Ensenada Beach.

Activities of the company in addition to the hotel include the construction of a casino, a number of bungalows, a 100-car garage, service quarters, water and power plants, an eighteen-hole golf course and landscaped grounds. Plans for the harbor development include a pier now being built by the Rosarito company for the Mexican government, and a breakwater off Ensenada Point to provide all-year protected anchorage for yachts and coastwise ships. The company also plans the operation of two steamers to Ensenada.

The company has leased the hotel for twenty years to an operating company headed by James Woods, formerly managing director of the Biltmore hotels on the Pacific Coast, and to Charles B. Hervey, Los Angeles hotel man. Contracts for furnishing the hostelry have been awarded to Barker Brothers. Kitchen equipment will be supplied by the Dohrmann Hotel Supply Company and the Pioneer Nursery Company of Monrovia has the landscaping contract.

Officials of the company report that the Mexican government is planning a paved highway from Tia Juana to Ensenada at a cost of several million dollars. It will be operated as a toll road and will follow the shore line, reducing the distance to sixty miles.

Several hundred tons of fabricated iron grille work have been imported from Cuba and Spain and a series of murals is being executed in the patios and public rooms by Senor Carlos Ramos Martinez of Mexico, the company reports.

In connection with the development, the Border Light and Power Company during the past six months has expended approximately $500,000 in public utilities work in the Northern District of Lower California.

BROKERS EXPAND OFFICES

Space Adjoining Present Building Acquired for Occupancy by Real Estate Department

Additional expansions due to requirements for greater office space have been announced by La Bonte & Ransom, realty brokers, at 132 North Larchmont avenue, who report alterations to the building which they occupy, now under way at a cost of $15,000.

The company has acquired space adjoining its present quarters to the north, into which the real estate department of the firm will be moved as soon as alterations are completed and new furniture installed. The additional space is required due to the recent occupancy of a portion of the offices by the Larchmont branch of the United States National Bank.

JULIUS J. LA BONTE

According to W. A. Bowen, sales manager of the realty division of the company, the concern now embraces an extensive group of departments in every branch of the realty and banking field. These include an insurance department in charge of W. M. Grassman, and a trust deed and mortgage department in charge of C. B. Evans, with Donald Keith, escrow officer. J. C. Fisher is in charge of the La Bonte Building and Loan Association.

This latter company reports a heavy increase in resources during recent years. On January 1, 1925, its resources were $129,580, and on June 14, last, had grown to $1,506,276, the financial report discloses.

Officers of the various companies affiliated in the group are Julius La Bonte, president; Charles Ransom, vice-president and secretary; Frank A. Harvey, Vernon Hoxie and Stanley J. Martineau, vice-presidents.

Realty activities of the company are confined chiefly to the territory west of Western avenue and between Melrose and Pico.

Federal Census Shows New York Alone Outranks

Questionaires Received, Basis of Estimate

Inquiries Intended to Show Trend in Operation

California ranks second in the nation in number of hostelries, being outranked only by New York State, according to preliminary statistics from the Federal census of hotels, now being taken as part of the census of distribution, it was reported here yesterday by officials of Consolidated Hotels, Inc.

Of 25,000 report-blanks mailed to hotel proprietors in every part of the country, 11,000 already have been received, it was shown in figures compiled here. On the basis of the blanks received, it is estimated that the final total of hotels in the nation of twenty-five rooms or more, will approximate 17,000.

FINAL COUNT AWAITED

At present, in all cities of more than 10,000 population, the census of hotels is being completed by field supervisors and enumerators through personal visits, and indications are that the count soon will be completed, it was stated yesterday. In order to make the census figures as informative and useful as possible, a special effort is being made to eliminate all institutions not strictly hotels. Boarding-houses, Y.M.C.A.'s, Y.W.C.A.'s, Turkish baths, clubs, tourist camps, farm houses, auto camps, etc., are to be excluded.

While no definite statistics as to the ranking of the various States in number of hostelries have been released as yet, study of the number of questionnaires sent to hotels throughout the country revealed the high position held by California. The census report blanks were sent to the various States in the following numbers:

QUESTIONNAIRES MAILED

Alabama, 215; Arizona, 161; Arkansas, 272; California, 1455; Colorado, 400; Connecticut, 260; Delaware, 30; District of Columbia, 119; Florida, 988; Georgia, 322; Idaho, 151; Illinois, 1004; Indiana, 517; Iowa, 735; Kansas, 421; Kentucky, 274; Louisiana, 167; Maine, 455; Maryland, 204; Massachusetts, 723; Michigan, 773; Minnesota, 981; Mississippi, 193; Missouri, 820; Montana, 313; Nebraska, 292; Nevada, 81; New Hampshire, 263; New Jersey, 1113; New Mexico, 109; New York, 2207; North Carolina, 386; North Dakota, 196; Ohio, 760; Oklahoma, 478; Oregon, 275; Pennsylvania, 1224; Rhode Island, 109; South Carolina, 149; South Dakota, 307; Tennessee, 266; Texas, 910; Utah, 114; Vermont, 233; Virginia, 354; Washington, 548; West Virginia, 237; Wisconsin, 975, and Wyoming, 131.

The inquiries contained in the questionnaire are designed to show the trend in hotel operation. Each proprietor is asked whether his hotel is operated on the American plan, the European plan, or both; whether it is a transient hotel, a permanent hotel, or "mixed." For the purpose of the census, a hotel is to be classed as transient, if more than 75 per cent of its patrons are transient; as permanent, if more than 75 per cent of patrons are permanent; while a mixed hotel is one in which the proportion of permanent and transient guests is not more than 75 per cent one way or the other. Other questions refer to number of rooms, amount of business done, number of employees, wages paid, and normal seating capacity of regular dining rooms.

Road Extension To Be Started

MONTEBELLO, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Construction of an extension of Slauson avenue from its present eastern terminus at Laguna-Bell Road, to Telegraph Road connecting with Bluff Road in Montebello, will begin within the next few days.

The Montebello Chamber of Commerce has been urging the extension of this thoroughfare as a means of opening an outlet into the Central Manufacturing District. Efforts to continue the extension of Slauson avenue to the city of Whittier will be continued, according to an announcement made yesterday.

OUR ORGANIZATION

IS MADE UP OF SPECIALISTS, MEN WHO HAVE HAD YEARS OF SUCCESSFUL REAL ESTATE EXPERIENCE IN LOS ANGELES AND ELSEWHERE.

WE ARE READY TO HELP YOU WITH YOUR REAL ESTATE PROBLEMS.

"Let's Talk It Over"

ONE OF THE FINEST APARTMENTS IN LOS ANGELES

Strictly modern. Class "B" building. Over 180 rooms, luxuriously furnished. Large corner lot close to Wilshire Blvd. One encumbrance, only 6½ %. Income capacity over $145,000. Price $750,000. Will consider liberal amount exchange orange grove or good city property.

MAJOR INTERSECTION—IMPROVED

Bank and six stores. Shows good net income now and should substantially enhance in value. Price $125,000. One bank loan. Consider smaller vacant or improved, preferably business property.

HOLLYWOOD BOULEVARD IMPROVED

One of the best income properties on Hollywood Boulevard. Very attractive and well constructed 2-story building. 130 foot full depth lot. Stores all leased. Gross income $25,000. Will consider good lot, high-class home or mortgages as part payment. Price $250,000. Mortgage $100,000. Why not have income and future combined in one property?

OVER $30,000 YR. NET—ONE TENANT

Improved business corner in the heart of the city. Lessee pays all up-keep including taxes and insurance. Excellent security. This is an extremely low rental as there is approximately 180,000 square feet of floor space. Price $450,000. Owner will take back mortgage of $150,000 and consider cash and well located trade for the balance. Here is a secure investment property, combined with future.

WILSHIRE DISTRICT BEAUTIFUL 9-ROOM RESIDENCE

Greatest bargain that was ever offered in the way of a nine large room pleasant home located in a very high-class district. Close to Wilshire Blvd. and Windsor Street. This property is going to be sold and can be bought for about one-half its real value. Small amount of cash will handle this deal. This is not only a chance for a wonderful home, but also an investment opportunity.

MONEY TO LOAN

Refinancing improved property, construction and improved ranch loans. Amortizing and straight, at low rates of interest. Absolutely no charge unless loan is made.

WANT BUSINESS LOT EQUITY For Clear Hollywood Home

On famous Whitley Heights, exclusive and restricted, with magnificent views, close to the very heart of Hollywood. Artistic and well built two-story home worth $25,000 and clear. Will trade for vacant business lot in active west side section and assume a moderate mortgage.

New Wilshire Business Building Trade for Clear Unimproved Lot

On major artery in Wilshire section, this new "modernistic" retail business building is leased for five years to one responsible tenant on secured lease at good rental. Price $60,000. Will trade for clear business, apartment or residence lot up to $25,000; balance mortgage.

Want High Class Residence For Downtown Improved Business

Only a few blocks from Seventh and Broadway, three-story extra well built commercial building, leased for several years to one leading firm at $7800 per annum, but now worth much more. Price $125,000. Want clear home up to $50,000; balance, mortgage to suit.

Owners, we are having an increasing demand for good cash buys! "If you want real action, list your property with us!"

PER-CAPITA VALUATIONS RANK FIRST

Pasadena Leads Nation in Construction Average, January to July

PASADENA, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—This city led the United States in per-capita value of new construction started here between January 1 and June 30, according to an unofficial computation of figures based on a nation-wide poll, results of which were announced today.

Figures compiled up to the first of July showed that the New York City per-capita building total for the first six months of the year was $33. Los Angeles followed with $31, while Pasadena led with $30.8, based upon a 75,000 population estimate.

During July this city increased its lead over New York and smashed local July building totals for the last seven years. New construction started here in the last thirty days totaled $1,591,514 in value.

BASS LAKES ATTRACTION FOR WEEK-END TRIP

San Diego Back Country Spotted by Numerous Good Fishing Waters; Locations All Easily Reached

BY AL FARMENTER

This motoring trip is ideal for the bass fisherman.

But it isn't for the bass fisherman alone, for the country described contains a combination of some of the prettiest mountain, desert and coastal scenery in the southern part of the State. It merely happens that as an added attraction to the usual week-end trip it offers some of the best fresh-water bass fishing in the State. Camping sites are innumerable. Resorts are available or San Diego can be used as headquarters with side trips being made to enjoy the back country.

The objective is any one of the many lakes in San Diego county. A series of large lakes created artificially and primarily as irrigation and drinking water reservoirs have given this section a great appeal as a playground.

Reached easily in from four to six hours over 136 miles of the Roosevelt Coast Highway, San Diego, the city, lies on a natural bay just above the Mexican border. From the city it is then but a short auto trip to any one of the lakes.

There are those at Henshaw Dam, Lake Hodges, Cuyamaca (beautiful tree-bordered lake,) Otay Reservoir, and Morena Reservoir, and others. Those named are the major ones and the ones most often visited by the fisherman. Sweetwater has not been mentioned here be-

Great Power Contained in Automobiles

The man who doesn't know his own strength now has a counterpart in the motorist who doesn't realize the power of his automobile, asserts the State Division of Motor Vehicles.

The man driving a car weighing one and one-half tons at a speed of forty miles an hour is riding on a projectile which travels fifty-eight and two-third feet a second. It is a power that spells almost certain death in a head-on collision, it is stated, and also one which cannot be controlled instantly, even by the most alert driver, even with the brakes in perfect order.

ANOTHER SIXTEEN ALSO TO BE OUT THIS FALL

Multiple-Cylinder Autos Developed Solely to Cater to Expensive Field Requiring Greater Luxury

BY E. Y. WATSON

DETROIT, Aug. 2. (NANA)—News of the week brings the official assurance that a new line of twelve-cylinder cars will be produced in the early fall. Not for ten years has the list of American makes boasted any twelve-cylinder power plant. It signifies that the double multiple engine field is to undergo expansion for 1931.

The new twelve will come from the Cadillac factory and as the "V-12" will take its place beside the V-16 and the two V-eights now being built.

The first appearance of the new job, which is promised for early fall, is likely to transpire about October 1.

GREATER LUXURY

The addition of a twelve to the multiple-cylinder power plants signifies a growing phase of the trend manifested this year. Automobile design is showing expansion at the extreme ends. The high-priced cars are bigger, more luxurious and more powerful than ever before, while the lowest-priced models are becoming more numerous and more capable and have more passenger room in them than in any previous season.

In a sense the present widening of multiple-engine range represents the recurrence of a cycle dating back a full decade. In that period fine-car operation has progressed through the stages of balloon tires, four-wheel braking, antiknock fuels and other factors that represent advances in car performance and comfort.

Ten years ago the double multiple engines were deemed too complicated for the existing demands, and they gave way to sizes of large power and later to the straight-eight types.

ANOTHER SIXTEEN

The pendulum swinging forward has brought first a V-16 and now a 12. It is possible that a second "16" model may come from a factory outside Detroit before the end of the year.

The reasons that have dictated a revival of multiple engines by the designers give them, are based on the certainty that an exclusive market exists for super-quality cars beyond the price range of the straight eights.

CONTEST END APPROACHES

H. W. Dorsett Submits Snow Creek View to Win Prize; Best Picture to be Worth $120

The sixth week of The Times photographic motoring contest closing tomorrow at midnight leaves but four more of the weekly contests before selection of the $100 first and $50 second sweepstakes prizes in the $500 competition. But twelve of the weekly prizes of $20, $10 and $5 remain to be awarded before the close of the contest.

Winners of the fifth contest which closed last Monday midnight are:

H. W. Dorsett, 1750 East Second street, Long Beach, first prize, $20.

D. H. Clark, 330 Buena Vista street, Redlands, second prize $10.

Miss Luella Palmer, 1336 Thirtieth Place, Los Angeles, third prize $5.

The winning photograph by Mr. Dorsett is reproduced at the bottom of this page and is of a scene on Snow Creek, reached by way of Banning. Using the winner's words in describing the view:

PICTURE DESCRIPTION

"Snow Creek, having its source in the glaciers of the north slope of San Jacinto peak, the most rugged part of the San Jacinto range. Ice cold snow water the year around and plenty of timber and rugged scenery for outings and picnics.

"May be reached via Banning and east to the Palm Springs road, turn to the right following the Palm Springs road for two miles, turn to the right again and follow a dim road crossing the railroad and Whitewater Creek and on up to Snow Creek and timber three miles distant."

Mr. Clark's second prize was won with a view of the little-known mud pots and geysers situated at the

BLUE HOLDS LEAD FOR AUTO COLOR

Other Tones and Shades Come in for Considerable Popularity

Blue continues to hold its place as the preferred summer color in the automobile field. Shades such as Classic Blue and State Blue are increasing in popularity, though "an impressive gain for the current period has been recorded for Bennington, a clear lively shade of blue," according to the issue of the Automobile Color Index just released by the Duco Color Advisory Service, New York.

Black is showing signs of resistance to a decline in favor noted during recent months and the trend away from black is believed to be checked for the present.

FIRST PRIZE AWARDED PICTURE

SMOKERS TO BE WATCHED

Motorists Who Throw Burning Tobacco from Cars Will be Arrested and Punished

Careless motorists who throw burning cigarettes and cigars from their cars while traveling on highways or in brush or forested areas in California will soon feel the force of the law and will face arrest and possible fine and imprisonment, according to Col. Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. An intensive drive by traffic officers on "snipe throwers" will begin immediately.

The penalty for fire carelessness under the State law is a fine up to $500 and a jail term of six months, or both. Eugene W. Biscailuz, chief of the Motor Patrol, has instructed his officers to arrest everyone caught throwing burning tobacco from automobiles. Federal and State rangers, local and county fire departments and also officials under direction of the State fire marshal are now co-operating in the drive.

WHAT LAW SAYS

The personal consequences of conviction for careless smoking is detailed in the following paragraphs describing offenses and penalties quoted from the California Penal Code, Section 384.

"Any person who shall willfully or negligently commit any of the acts herein enumerated in this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $500, or imprisonment in the County Jail not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

"Par. 5—Throwing or placing any lighted cigarette, cigar or match or other flaming or glowing substance, or any substance or thing which may cause a fire, in any place where such lighted cigarette, cigar, match, ashes or other flaming or glowing substance, or other substance or thing, may directly or indirectly start a fire.

"Par. 6—Throwing from a moving vehicle any lighted cigarette, cigar, ashes or other flaming or glowing substance, or any substance or thing which may cause a fire."

Those arrested will be tried under the State law by local justices of the peace in the region where the offense was committed.

SERIOUS MENACE

How serious the menace of the careless smoker has become to the safety of natural resources, cities and local properties of California is indicated by the Federal and State fire records. Last year, 1631 fires were caused in the forests, brushlands and grain fields in this manner. Not less than 382,329 acres were burned over, and the loss is estimated at over $500,000.

Fires of this nature exceeded those for 1928, and were more than three times as many as in 1922. Wasted forests, ruined watersheds, burned recreational areas are of incalculable loss up wild life and fire-swept recreation to the State.

DEALER ORDERS SHOW INCREASE

Plants to Resume Operation Tomorrow Morning

DETROIT, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Due to the several lines of new and improved models, the automobile industry has started an encouraging upward swing, and orders from dealers throughout the country are being received in greatly increased volume. Production is being stepped up in many of the leading plants, and with the end of the vacation periods, during which time the plants closed entirely for two or three weeks, it is confidently expected that normal output and sales will be the rule.

There is an individuality in each of this year's new lines of cars, and in some cases radical changes. This is noticeable in the Studebaker line, which is featuring the "free wheel drive—something entirely new," and is being used by no other manufacturer. Demonstrators are being worked overtime in an endeavor to show the advantage of this new device. Retail sales of new Studebaker are nearly equal to those for the corresponding months of 1929, when sales were nearly at the peak for the year.

BUICK'S NEW LINE

Buick's announcement of four new lines of straight eights for the 1931 trade placed that General Motors unit in an enviable position in the industry. Dealers are placing orders in sufficient numbers to assure the plant a near-capacity output for the next few months at least. The entire line is made up exclusively of eight-cylinder cars, in four different series of varying wheelbase lengths embracing twenty distinct models.

Production is being stepped up almost daily in the Chrysler plants, result of the recent announcement of the new and improved lines of eights, and there is every indication that a new second-half year record will be established.

AUSTINS APPEAR

The American Austins are appearing on the streets of metropolitan cities throughout the country in rapidly increasing numbers. The Austin plant at Butler, Pa., has more orders for immediate shipment than it can build in the next three months.

Following a three-weeks' period of idleness, the Ford plants will resume operations tomorrow. Production will be resumed at the rate of 7000 cars and trucks daily. This means the recall to their jobs of 100,000 workmen. Other automobile plants that will reopen tomorrow are Packard, Oakland-Pontiac, Graham-Paige and Hudson-Essex.

It is now evident that production is on a sound basis, and that the automobile industry is in a good technical position. Factors which contribute to this outlook are the resumption of normal operations in several of the major plants after the usual summer shut-down; the stimulation of retail demand by an impressive array of new models now being offered to the public, and still more to be announced, and the necessity of replenishing depleted stocks of cars in the hands of dealers.

AUTOS TESTED IN WIND

Wind resistance becomes a more important factor in automobile speed as improvement of highways diminishes the road and rolling resistance, and at forty miles an hour begins to overshadow the latter factor.

Prof. Felix W. Pawlowski, the Guggenheim professor of aeronautics, University of Michigan, speaking before the Society of Automotive Engineers recently, described the manner in which automobile models had been tested in aeronautic wind tunnels.

As a result of his investigation, he states that (a) "ground effect" has no appreciable effect upon the lift or resistance to motion of the automobile. The wind tunnel test of a single model do not permit the prediction of wind resistance of an actual car even for comparative purposes, since the error might be from minus 3 to plus 21 per cent at sixty miles an hour, or from minus 5½ to plus 15 per cent at ninety miles an hour; (b) the zero-lift condition with ground effect would eliminate the induced-drag item from the total wind resistance, a condition that might not always be fully realizable; (c) the so-called perfect streamlining is not very well possible, as it would lead to longer bodies that would render the parking situation still more acute; (d) partial streamlining, rounding of edges and corners, beveling of flanks, streamlining of wheels and similar modifications promise a considerable reduction in wind resistance.

Prof. Pawlowski further points out that wind tunnel tests of automobile bodies are somewhat erroneous, due to the absence of a cross-wind force which tends to push the body toward the ground.

WHO HAD FIRST AUTOMOBILE?

Who had the first automobile in the world?

This question is often answered by the average guess that Elwood Haynes ran the first car, which is incorrect, according to authoritative records.

The first automobile which actually ran, which incidentally was self-propelled, was built in France between 1760 and 1770 by Capt. Nicholas Joseph Cugnot, this history declares.

The first gasoline-operated automobile in America was Charles Duryea's "Buggyaut," which came out in 1892. Henry Ford's first car followed in 1893, and in 1894 Elwood Haynes's historic automobile was brought before the public eye.

In 1892, history states, an electric automobile built by William Morris of Des Moines, Iowa, was sold to a Chicago citizen.

UNIFORM SIGNS URGED

Traffic Experts Express Belief that Important Step in Auto Regulation Must be Taken

BY CHARLES C. COHAN

Southern California needs a uniform system of street-corner sign guidance, traffic experts believe, as the next important step in making the Southland's traffic regulations and safeguards the best in the country. In no other place in the world has the uniformity of traffic hand signaling been better developed or is it more consistently used than here, and many other localities regard it as an especially good example.

It is contended, however, that Southern California has been lagging in adopting a uniform method, or style, of street intersection guides with the result that in some places the corner signs are on the curbing, in other centers they are somewhere on corner light standards and in still other spots they are on special posts that stand a little distance from the corner. Some of them are hard enough to locate in daylight, but at night all too many of them defy quick detection and others can be located only after protracted search.

Los Angeles has turned its attention to solving this problem and its success in this direction likely will prove a precedent for the entire Southland since admittedly some of the busiest street intersections in the world, day and night, are located in this city. Street corner sign tests here are being watched with close interest.

"A uniformity of such system is essential in this city," said Ivan Kelso, general counsel for the Automobile Club of Southern California, "but to reach its mightiest efficiency it must be generally utilized throughout Southern California."

By authority of and as a demonstration to the Board of Public Works, a type of four-sided sign has been placed at Wilshire Boulevard and Vermont avenue, Wilshire and Western and at West Adams street and Figueroa. It is a local product and apparently derives its name, Daylectric, from the fact that it is illuminated by reflected sunlight during the daytime and at night by the rays from the regular street lighting system. The Municipal Art Commission has approved it as to design requirements.

"Our traffic is as well regulated as the best anywhere else in the country," Mr. Kelso declared, "but we still have the street intersection proposition demanding our attention. Much has been done and properly so for the welfare and convenience of the thousands of tourists who come here annually and we will be doing them as well as ourselves a great service if Southern California will adopt a uniform method for marking street intersections. If we can install something at the same place at every intersection that in time will cause the driver to glance there instinctively for street names, it certainly follows that traffic will be materially helped and the chance of accidents considerably lessened. Especially beneficial will this be if such intersection information can be had at night as well as in daylight."

Air Violators Become Many

The aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce deals with 177 violations of the air commerce regulations during the second quarter of 1930. The total violations of the regulations for this period represented an increase of fifty-five over the first three months of 1930. Fines in the amount of $900 were assessed against and collected from fifty-three persons.

THE REO SILENT-SECOND TRANSMISSION

. . . Makes the REO Flying Cloud the easiest handling car on the road . . .

Take the wheel of a Reo Flying Cloud and its marvelous new Silent-Second Transmission will give you a new sense of driving mastery and control. Imagine being able to shift gears under any and all conditions—"never any feeling-in"—never any grinding or clashing. Imagine being able to shift from high back to second at 40 miles an hour—or from second to high at greater speed—and with one-finger ease. Imagine second-gear acceleration with high-gear quiet. You may not believe all this now. But visit your Reo dealer and try out this amazing transmission for yourself. Then you'll say that we haven't made the story half strong enough.

VARYING LAWS MET IN TRAVEL

Fixed Speed Limits Removed in Twelve States

Coasting Hills in Neutral Commonly Banned

Parking Regulations Often Copied in Codes

While uniform motor-vehicle laws are gradually being adopted by the States of the Union, the code developed by the Hoover Conference on Street and Highway Safety has not as yet become general and many differences in rules are still found.

The transcontinental tourist still has many laws in other States not found in his own which he must watch for. California autoists going east must beware of varying speed laws that range from Utah's fifty miles an hour to the twenty-mile prima facie limit in Massachusetts. Fixed speed limits have been abolished in twelve States to wit, Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Montana, Tennessee, Vermont, Wisconsin, Wyoming. These States stipulate a rate of speed that is "reasonable and proper" in view of traffic conditions or that permits stopping within the "clear distance ahead."

Vehicles approaching from the right, in general, have the right of way. In Idaho, however, the right of way is given to cars on State highway.

Thirty-three States and the District of Columbia prohibit overtaking on hills or curves where view is obstructed. This law is being strictly enforced in many States. Coasting down grade in neutral is another violation which concerns police in twenty-three States. Passing a street car on the left is strictly prohibited in twenty-eight States, and passing a street car discharging or taking on passengers is also frowned on with the result that even where safety zones are established, the motorist must be exceptionally cautious.

Parking on the main-traveled portion of the highway is a violation of the State code in the majority of cases, while in States where such parking is not definitely prohibited, it is required that fifteen feet of roadway be left clear. Fourteen States require that lights be dimmed when passing approaching vehicles. Oregon requires dimming of lights on wet pavements. Spotlights are prohibited in North Carolina, Oklahoma, Wisconsin and in the cities of Missouri.

Is Your Camping Equipment Ready for Vacation?

Check Your Accessories Before Leaving

Nothing is more disconcerting than to arrive in camp and find the tent or some other necessary article has been left home. To safeguard against this and to check up on the condition of camping equipment the practice of setting up the entire outfit in the back yard is recommended. Any missing items or damage can be replaced or repaired. This practice can well be extended to the tires, a vacation trip usually meaning that some hard wear is ahead for the casings.

1. The Times weekly motoring contests 5, and no entry will be received after are open to everyone except employees of that time.
the Los Angeles Times and their families. 8. No one contestant or member of his professional photographers, persons connected with advertising agencies, publicity family or motor party shall be eligible to bureaus or newspapers. It is not necessary to be a subscriber of The Times. The rules here published govern each of the series of contests.

2. Any amateur photographer is eligible to participate and may submit as many photographs as desired, provided that the picture submitted complies with the rules herein stated.

3. Subjects must be within one day's drive of Los Angeles by automobile. (Merely necessary to be within reach in one day, thus permitting a two-day round trip.)

4. Photograph must have been taken during 1930.

5. Contestant's must submit:
(a) Negative and one print of each photograph.
(b) Name and address of person taking picture and others in party.
(c) Date when photograph was taken.
(d) Not more than a fifty-word description of scene photographed.
(e) Not more than a fifty-word explanation of why subject of photograph is of interest to motor car.

6. To the person submitting the best photograph submitted, according to rules as outlined in section 5, a prize of $25 will be given. In each weekly contest the second weekly prize will be $10; third prize, $5. In the event of the duplicate prizes will be awarded to each lying contestant. Each contest is complete in itself and no photographs submitted during one contest is to be counted in a later one.

7. At the close of the series of ten weekly contests supplemental prizes of $100, $50 and $25 respectively, will be awarded to the persons whose photographs, in the discretion of the judges, judged best of the entire list submitted during the ten weeks. The first contest closed at midnight, June 30. The fifth closes at midnight, tomorrow. Entries intended for any particular contest must be postmarked not later than midnight of the day the contest is officially entered. Entries postmarked after that expiration they will be officially entered in the contest next succeeding. The tenth and last contest will close at midnight, September 6.

9. An entry with insufficient postage will not be accepted. The Times cannot be responsible for delay in mail or non-delivery of entries.

10. All entries must be sent by mail.

11. All negatives remaining negatives and prints submitted in this contest become the property of The Times and may be used, without compensation by The Times in other than that awarded as prize money. No other negatives or prints will be returned unless a stamped, self-addressed envelope is included.

12. The Times will be a committee appointed by The Times, and their decision will be final. Announcement of winners will be made in The Times as soon after the close of the entire contest as possible.

13. Statement of fact is an express condition of entry. The Times cannot engage in correspondence on the matter.

14. Two or more people may co-operate in submitting any photograph but only one person is to receive credit as author or to win any one award.

15. Duplicate and prints may be of any size desired. Transparencies may be submitted in any form desired, through prepayment on which paper size 8½x11 inches. Write on one side of paper only.

16. Mounting will be judged thus:
(a) Fifty per cent for the subject matter, whether human interest, scenic or historic interest.
(b) Twenty-five per cent for clarity and sharpness of definition of the scene and directions for motoring to it.
(c) Twenty-five per cent for photographic quality.

17. Photographs disqualified must be of such a character that by following the printed directions, other contestants may view them substantially as described.

18. Address all entries to Motoring Contest Editor, Times Building, 101 North Broadway.

LAKES ATTRACT ON AUTO TRIP

cause the bass fishing, the primary reason for this particular trip, is poor this year. But eighty-one fish had been taken from this once heavily stocked lake during this season according to a report made last week.

From San Diego the Lower Otay Reservoir, the most frequently visited, is reached by way of National City and Chula Vista thence inland and over a good gravel road to the reservoir, traveling meanwhile through a rich farming district, beans being the most frequent crop.

LIMITS TAKEN

Limits of the bass (fifteen is the limit) have been regularly caught in the Otay this season. The upper Otay is closed. Best bait is mud-sucker. Near dawn and dusk plugs get fair results.

Close to Warner's Hot Springs, one of the more popular resorts in the southern part of the State is Lake Henshaw, one of the largest reservoirs in the State. It also is good fishing water.

This, like the rest of the San Diego country is rich in California history.

Don Juan Jose Warner from the seclusion of this domain, first explored by Father Mariner of the San Diego Mission in 1795, ruled his own veritable little kingdom. He it was who boasted he could ride to the far horizon in any direction without once leaving his own domain.

ALL ONE'S OWN

This is kindred to the feeling the tourist will have today entering the area. There is a feeling of possession of the beauties of the country that cannot be denied one by lack of physical ownership.

Henshaw is reached without necessarily proceeding all the way to San Diego, the route turning from the inland route at Escondido. If approaching from San Diego it is necessary to retrace the road to this city thence through Valley Center and Rincon or another route via Ramona.

Also on the Inland Route is Lake Hodges. It is nearer San Diego than Henshaw.

TROUT MORE NUMEROUS

Cuyamaca is back in the mountains and almost directly east of San Diego. Both trout and bass are here but the trout are more numerous than in any of the other lakes. It is reached over the Imperial Valley road going through to Descanso and then gradually into the mountains to what is generally considered the prettiest setting for any of the lakes.

Moreno Reservoir is reached over the same road except that the route continues beyond Descanso through Pine Valley and to Buckman Springs, the route leaving the main highway there.

CLOSE TO SAN DIEGO

All the waters mentioned here are within a short driving radius of the city.

For the fisherman who is in strange country information on all the lakes is available in San Diego at sporting goods and bait stores. Live bait can be secured at the docks near the Coronado ferry. At most of the lakes bait is also available. Licenses should be procured no later than in San Diego since they are not always available at the lakes.

Twenty-Three Make Eights

Today twenty-three manufacturers are building straight-eight engines with the possibility of two or more being added by 1931.

As early as 1924 seven automobile manufacturers had adopted the straight-eight power plant among these.

CONTEST END DRAWS NEAR

southeastern end of the Salton Sea near Niland.

NATIVE FREAKS

Describing them Mr. Clark says that these freaks are of varying sizes and of colors as varied as their temperature which ranges from cold on through various degrees to boiling.

They are reached by following highway No. 99 to Calipatria, thence north on the Niland road for six and one-half miles turning west at a road posted by the Auto Club signs for five and one-half miles when the mud pots will be at hand.

Third prize by Miss Palmer is a picture revealing the lures of Aster Lake in Sequoia National Park. It is a beautiful natural lake surrounded by virgin redwood forest and pine trees at an elevation of 8300 feet.

Writing last week regarding the award of prizes in the fourth contest an entrant complains that the descriptions and directions given in the story are of over fifty words in length. It seems that his mistake is a logical one. Only where quoted is the description that of the contestant. Additional words are not supplied by the entry and are used for the obvious purpose of preventing a disjointed story describing the prize winners. Again, all the material supplied by the contestants used in this and other of the descriptions is placed in quotes.

HONORABLE MENTION

Honorable mentions awarded in the fifth contest include the following contestants' entries:

Robert R. Benson, Bishop; L. A. McVay, 1033 Oak Grove Drive; Miss Adelia Hawkins, 325 S. Reno street; P. E. Jungers, 2601 South Figueroa street; and Homer H. Elliott, 713 South Greenleaf avenue, Whittier.

Remember there are but four more contests for the weekly prizes after the close of the sixth tomorrow at midnight. Hurry to get an entry in the competition for the sweepstakes prize of $100. The picture winning this prize will automatically have already won a $20 weekly first prize and so will bring the amateur photographer $120 for his snapshot.

Oil Company Supplies Maps

Announcing to motorists the free distribution of specially compiled and copyrighted road maps for the entire western area, the Associated Oil Company has provided all its agents, garages and service stations with a map series.

The maps are in three parts to cover the western territory. The first of the series covers all of California; the next Idaho, Utah and Nevada, and the third Washington and Oregon.

RULES FOR FOREST USE ENFORCED

Public Offered Pleasure of National Land Free But Protection Urged

While Uncle Sam invites the free use by the public of the national forests there are certain rules that must be observed by those accepting the invitation, it is pointed out by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

In view of the present dryness of the grass, brush and timber, danger from fires is greater than usual. The Auto Club suggests that all motorists note the rules that must be observed in the California district forests. These are as follows:

A camp-fire permit must be secured before building any fire in stoves burning wood, kerosene, or gasoline, on national forest land. The nearest forest officer will issue a permit to you without charge.

Each automobile and pack-train party camping in a national forest must be equipped with a shovel and an ax suitable for fire-fighting purposes.

During the fire season smoking is prohibited in the national forests. In camps or at places of habitation smoking is allowed, but smokers must be careful with their lighted matches, cigars and cigarettes and pipe heels.

In periods of high fire hazard camping and camp or picnic fires may be restricted to posted camp grounds, and part or all of the national forests may be closed to public use and travel.

Build small fires. Clear an area not less than five feet in diameter before starting a fire.

Never leave a fire without totally extinguishing it with a plentiful supply of water.

Keep your camp clean. Where garbage pits and incinerators are not provided burn or bury all garbage and refuse.

Do not pollute the springs, streams, or lakes by unsanitary acts.

Observe the State fish and game laws.

If you don't know—ask a forest ranger.

New Branch of Monroe Chain Opens

The opening of a new branch location in Beverly Hills at 8534 Wilshire Boulevard to serve his Wilshire-Beverly district clientele, is announced by Al Monroe, distributor in Los Angeles and Vernon for Diamond tires.

This is the fourth link in the Monroe chain. The new Beverly branch, which is at the corner of Le Doux Road, will carry a complete line of Diamond tires and tubes.

A battery and ignition department, together with a tire repair and vulcanizing department, will complete the facilities of this branch.

"The manufacturers maintain a factory in Los Angeles, which is my source of supply and my arrangement calls for carload lot purchases which, together with the elimination of cross-continent freight charges, is a matter of real economy for my patrons," Monroe states.

Oil Company Issuing Maps

A road map of the Pacific Coast regions, printed in rotogravure, that shows mountains in semirelief and pictures rivers and lakes, prominent and unusual vacation spots, and places of historical interest is now being distributed through the service stations of the Union Oil Company.

The area covered by the map includes Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona and portions of New Mexico, Idaho, Nevada and British Columbia. The maps are so designed that they can be folded up to a size that will fit conveniently into a man's pocket or the pocket of a car.

Highway distances between various points are shown on the maps and, in addition, a chart detailing distances between prominent cities along the coast is carried at the side.

ROAD SPEED, GAS MILEAGE ON BANTAM CAR CHECKED

From Los Angeles to Ensenada, Mex., back to Los Angeles and then on to Bishop and back to Los Angeles, a total distance of 1028 miles, was the "roadability" test made by the bantam Austin during the past few days.

From the city to the border the midget averaged better than forty miles per hour, and over the gravel seventy-seven miles of road from Tia Juana to Ensenada it averaged better than thirty-three miles per hour elapsed time, according to Western Union checking in California and the checking of Vincent Moreno, chief engineer of the telephone company in Mexico.

On the Bishop run, according to Western Union checking, the 380 miles were made in the car at an average a little better than forty-one miles per hour, elapsed time.

According to sworn statements by the drivers the car averaged 37.52 miles per gallon on the Los Angeles-Ensenada trip, and 37.96 miles per gallon on the Los Angeles-Bishop trip.

Ralph Brother drove the car on the Mexican trip and Art Hagen on the Bishop trip. Both men are amateur drivers, regularly employed in the service department of the Austin-Los Angeles company.

CAMP LIST SHOULD BE PREPARED

Vacationists Told How to Select Essentials for Trip

Camping is something to break the ordinary trend of life and is a lot of pleasure, provided there is sufficient of equipment and essentials to carry on a camp, but camp life can be made very unpleasant on occasions when some of the necessaries are left out or merely left behind when the materials were assembled.

To take the worry out of the camping trip vacationists planning such jaunts in pursuit of game or fish or just to be outside are checking up lists obtaining at stores selling such equipment and other lists made by inemselves on previous trips or by their friends or neighbors who have made such trips.

The surest method of having everything, however, is to set up camp in the back yard or on a vacant lot, and there rehearse a day in camp. This method, according to those who use it, is sure to get in all the essentials, and gives the camper a chance to choose the better of the least essentials or of the luxuries.

A list of primary essentials would include bed and bedding, gasoline stove, cooking kit and dishes, tent, thermos bottle, flashlight with spare bulbs and batteries, canteen, tow rope, axe, spade, auto cover, washbasin and hand soap, maps, canvas gloves.

Other items that make for comfort and enjoyment may include camera and films, special trouble light, driving gloves, thermic jug, auto trunk, extra straps, luggage carrier, folding pail, skid chains, extra water bag and a supply of paper plates, cups, spoons, and like dishes.

Aside from these things in equipment the car or cars to be used should be checked over as to tires, batteries, mechanical adjustments, tools, etc., and a container for extra gas, oil and water is a wonderful safety measure.

England May Get Speedway

SKEGNESS (Eng.) Aug. 2. (AP)—A beach speedway twice the length of Daytona Beach probably will be built along the coast here as a result of a treasury grant of tidal lands to the Automobile Racing Association.

The grant embodies 8000 acres, and the association is negotiating with private landowners for another 2000 acres.

A straight concrete track, fifteen miles long and 200 yards wide, will be built along the north shore of the Wash, and a breakwater twenty-one feet high from Skegness to Freiston will reclaim a further stretch.

MOTOR USES ONLY ONE VALVE

Rotary Shaft Supplants Poppets

J. B. White and his Valve

Upper view of cutaway head showing valve shaft and below the system installed and in operation on a four-cylinder stock motor.

SINCE the first one-cylinder gasoline motor was invented there has been countless change and improvement, mostly to produce maximum power and efficiency with the least number of moving parts.

Working on this idea for over a period of years, J. B. White, automotive engineer, formerly associated with several automobile manufacturers in the East and now living at the Pacific Palisades, has perfected and patented a rotary valve motor.

In this motor there is only one valve, and that valve never lifts off its seat. It rotates and opens and shuts the ports controlling the incoming and exhaust gases at the proper time. There are seventy-two less working, wearing parts in this type of motor than in the ordinary poppet-valve type, according to White. It does away with the necessity for a camshaft, the valve being driven direct from the crankshaft with a silent chain.

Among the parts eliminated by using his rotary valve in a four-cylinder motor are: Valves, valve springs, valve stems, guide bushings, (rocker arms, rocker arm shaft, in the overhead type) valve push rods, with their various types of adjustments and all accessories pertaining to the operation of the valve mechanism.

The rotary valve is adaptable to any type of motor, four, six or eight cylinders, the inventor states.

Sierras to Get Bathing Beach

A new bathing beach in the high Sierras is scheduled for development, according to an announcement by the Mammoth Lakes Resort Association. Dressing-rooms and diving-boards are to be installed by the association at Horseshoe Beach on Horseshoe Lake at once.

This action, according to Douglas Robinson, association secretary, was precipitated by the large number of bathers who have frequented the wide sands of the beach this year.

Approval has been placed on the association's move by the United States Forestry Service, it is announced.

Changes Made in Staff of Air Concern

James A. Talbot, chairman of the board of the General Aviation Corporation, announces several changes in that organization.

Due to the increased responsibilities which Harris M. Hanshue has assumed in connection with the Western Air Express and other affiliates, he has resigned as president of General Aviation and the Fokker company in order to devote his time to the transport end of the aviation business. He remains a director of the General Aviation Corporation.

William T. Whalen, vice-president and general manager of the Fokker company, has resigned his position with that company and returns to the General Motors organization.

James M. Schoonmaker, Jr., has been elected president of the General Aviation Corporation and president and general manager of the Fokker company. Mr. Schoonmaker has had considerable experience in the aviation industry in the early days of its development, having been chief engineer of the Dayton-Wright Company during the war when this company was one of the large producers of airplanes for the government. Since the war he has been associated with the Standard Steel Spring Company of Pittsburgh and more recently has been attached to the General Motors staff in Detroit.

Rules Given to Free Cars from Sand

Motorists who experience the difficulty of getting stuck in the sand are given a suggestion by the emergency road service of the Automobile Club of Southern California which states one may get out of the predicament without help of a tow car if the situation is handled properly.

First, don't race the motor or spin the car. This will only cause it to bury the wheels deeper. Clear the loose sand away from the rear wheels and lay sacks, rags, wood or similar material in front of the wheels. Then let the clutch in gently and start the motor slowly. In most cases this will release the car from the sand. Partially deflating the tires helps in some very difficult cases.

Gilmore Gas Stations Grow

In December, 1929, the product of the Gilmore Oil Company was distributed through 1200 pumps located in independent service stations and garages in California. On July 1 a survey showed that 2621 pumps in the three Pacific Coast States are now painted in the cream and red colors of the company.

—at less than a penny a mile!

The bantam Austin offers a new idea about going places!

CONSIDER this new idea of transportation without tonnage, beauty without bulk, mileage with minimum expense . . . see what it offers you.

First of all . . . economy. Here is the bantam Austin waiting to take you wherever you wish for a mere ¾ of a cent a mile for gas, oil and tires. It's a car that does fifty miles an hour on the straightaway yet which stretches a gallon of gasoline over forty miles of road as well.

It is one member of the family that seldom needs new shoes. Twenty to forty thousand miles on a set of tires is its usual performance.

Yet the bantam Austin vies in smartness with cars of far more impressive list prices, offers as much of a thrill in its way as the high powered giants, and gives you a sense of perfect control and easy handling that only another Austin can match. Yet it lists for but $445 f.o.b. factory.

As the garage-mate of your larger car, the Austin will pay for itself by sparing the big car the many one and two passenger trips that are so costly in fuel and depreciation.

Certainly it's a car worth seeing. You'll find it waiting for you at the address below.

Come see it!

RUTH HITS THIRTY-NINTH BUT YANKS DROP PAIR

WILL BE READY FOR IRISH GAME

Record Crowds Assured by Speedy Action

Huge Bowl to Accommodate 105,000 People

Call Meetings to Arrange Complete Program

With the appropriation of necessary funds by the County Board of Supervisors and the City of Los Angeles now a matter of record, contracts are to be let in the coming week for the construction of unit "B" of the Coliseum, insuring the completion of the great stadium in the next few months.

JACK PARKER

With the opening of the football season rapidly approaching, an emergency construction program will be launched immediately in order to finish a large part of the work before the opening games, according to County Counsel Everett W. Mattoon.

"The public in general, and football fans in particular," said Mr. Mattoon, "will be glad to learn that this immediate construction program will put the Coliseum in usable condition for the first game and that efforts will be made to carry on the work during the early part of the season with a view to possibly having a substantial part of the new bowl seats ready before the big games in November and December, including the S.C.-Notre Dame game.

"Unit 'A' is now about complete, having the Coliseum outer wall taken off at about one-half its ultimate height and the concourse on top of the embankment in an usable condition; the immense press buildings at each end of the arched entrance to the structure one-half of their ultimate height, with the structure lacking in lighting, press stand and similar important operating facilities.

"The emergency work on unit 'B' will now bring to completion the outer stairways up the embankment, the immense concourse under the seat areas at the top of the embankment, through which the stairways enter the seat areas, and many of the facilities needed for actual operation. ## HELEN IS CHOICE OF 'BIG BILL'

Tilden Picks Mrs. Moody at Top of Standings of Women Net Stars

BY WILLIAM T. TILDEN II

PARIS, Aug. 2. (NANA)—On the eve of the women's championship of the United States, the climax of the women's tennis year, I offer my ideas of the ranking of the leading players following Wimbledon:

(1) Helen Wills Moody, United States of America.
(2) Cilly Aussem, Germany.
(3) Elizabeth Ryan, United States of America.
(4) Phoebe Holcroft Watson, England.
(5) Helen Jacobs, United States of America.
(6) Simone Matthieu, France.
(7) Lili Alvarez, Spain.

WILLIAMS, HALL WIN SEABRIGHT DOUBLES; MRS. HARPER SCORES

SEABRIGHT (N. J.) Aug. 2. (AP)—The thirty-seventh annual Seabright invitation tennis tournament came to a close today with the Bill Williams-Wilmer Hall team successfully salvaging the men's title from the hard-hitting invading forces of the Far West.

Richard N. Williams of Philadelphia, former national singles champion, and J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., gained the only outright victory by winning the men's doubles final from Sydney B. Wood, former Pasadena youth, and Frank Shields of New York, 2-6, 4-6, 6-1, 9-7, 6-2.

R.N. WILLIAMS

Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper of San Francisco won the women's singles crown, defeating Dorothy Cruickshank, Santa Ana, Cal., 6-4, 6-4, and Edith Cross, San Francisco, teamed with Hall to defeat Mrs. Harper and Phil Neer, Portland, Or., in the mixed doubles, 6-4, 6-3. The West captured both titles decided yesterday, Wood winning the men's singles and Miss Cross and Mrs. Harper the women's doubles.

In the women's singles final, Mrs. Harper's superior play left the ultimate result certain in the minds of the gallery. In each set she gained a fine lead by keeping the ball deep and

Yachts Await Gun at Newport

The gathering of the sailing clans takes place today at Newport Harbor where the combined Pacific Coast and Southern California regatta opens tomorrow for a five-day run. More than 100 sailing and power boats will participate in the racing program. Top photo shows a group of Newport's classy star-boat fleet tuning up for the regatta. Below on the left is the Greyhound, one of the favorites, in the power-boat race. On the right is the star champion, the Westwind, which won the Southern California championships at Santa Barbara last summer.

SAILING CHAMPIONSHIPS ON TAP

Combined Pacific Coast and Southern California Regattas Opens Tomorrow Morning at Newport Harbor

BY FRANK ROCHE

"Anchors Aweigh." That's the song on the lips of west coast yachtsmen today as they head for Newport Harbor where the combined Pacific Coast and Southern California sailing championship regatta opens tomorrow for a five-day run. From as far north as Puget Sound to the Mexican border of Lower California yachtsmen are bringing their racing craft to Newport for the classic which is expected to top anything yet ever attempted by Pacific Coast corinthians.

Competition for every class of sailing craft from the tiny skimmers to the powerful and majestic appearing yawls, ketches and schooners has been listed by the regatta committee on the racing program. More than 100 sailing boats will participate for four days in championship races. The fifth day of the regatta will be given over to presentation of trophies and social activities which will wind up the program.

Besides the racing craft Newport Harbor will be jammed with boats of every size and description moored there so that their occupants can take in the races and participate in the general celebration that goes hand in glove with a big regatta. More than 300 pleasure boats are expected to be anchored in and around the picturesque Newport Harbor Yacht Club when the warning gun sounds bringing the racing boats to attention tomorrow morning.

INSCO SCORES IN CHICAGO

Sir Gallahad Colt Dashes Home in Front of Fast Field of Youngsters to Take Purse

ARLINGTON PARK, CHICAGO, Aug. 2. (AP)—Running like a streak of lightning, Insco, 2-year-old son of Sir Gallahad III-Star Flight, won the $26,000 Post and Paddock Stakes, richest event for 2-year-olds of the 1930 season to date, in the closing feature of the thirty-day meeting at Arlington Park today.

Insco won by four lengths, beating Hyman of the Rancocas stable, with B'ar Hunter, the entry of E. R. Bradley of Lexington, Ky., third. Siskin of the Nevada Stock Farm was fourth in the field of twelve. Insco, which will be a candidate for the 1931 Kentucky Derby, ran the six furlongs in 1:11 4-5.

The stake was worth $20,450 to Griffin Watkins of Alton, Ill., president of the International Shoe Company, owner of the winner. The sum of $3000 went to the Rancocas stable for Hyman's effort, while $1500 was added to E. R. Bradley's total, when B'ar Hunter finished third. Siskin won $750 for his owners by finishing fourth.

Twelve youngsters lined up at the barrier, among them a number of winners of important juvenile stake events.

After a slight delay at the post due to the unruly tactics of Insco,

CARNERA PERMITTED TO STAY TILL DECEMBER 31

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—The Labor Department today granted Primo Carnera, Italian prize fighter, leave to stay in the United States until December 31, 1930.

The huge Italian appeared here yesterday, and, through representatives, asked that an order that he get out of the country be revoked and leave extended. He entered the country under a six months' permit which had expired.

Immigration officials said extensions of time were ordinarily granted in cases similar to that of Carnera. No protests against allowing the fighter to remain were made. A letter notifying him his request has been granted was sent to him.

WASHINGTON IN TWO TRIUMPHS

Manush Poles Three Homers to Outshine Babe

Senators Win by Scores of 9 to 3 and 9 to 5

Solons Exercise Jinx Over New York Sluggers

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (AP)—With a double defeat, the Senators made it eleven victories in thirteen games against New York this year by winning both games of the doubleheader, 9 to 3 and 9 to 5.

Heinie Manush led the Senators, hitting one home run in the first game and two in the second. Babe Ruth connected for homer No. 39 in the second game. Reese also hit for the circuit. Marberry got credit for his ninth victory, although he had to quit on account of the heat and Hadley finished the game.

JAMESTOWN IS BEST IN RACE

WEETAMOE IS WINNER IN UNOFFICIAL YACHT RACE

NEWPORT (R. I.) Aug. 2. (AP)—Weetamoe today defeated the three other aspirants for the honor of defending the America's Cup over a thirty-seven and one-half-mile course from New London, Ct., to Newport. The course represented the opening run of the eight-day New York Yacht Club cruise and it was sailed in light southwesterly air as a broad reach and, except off Point Judith, in a smooth sea.

The Morgan-Nichols boat crossed the finish line more than three minutes ahead of Enterprise, sailed by Harold S. Vanderbilt, the only boat to seriously contest the issue with Weetamoe.

Whirlwind, sailed by Landon K. Thorne, was unable to finish better than a bad third, although her rig had been radically changed since she last met the cup candidates off here. She was nearly thirteen minutes behind Weetamoe. Yankee, the Boston and only non-New Yorker, came home last, following Whirlwind by approximately five minutes.

Vanitie, the unsuccessful candidate for defense of the famous trophy a decade ago, furnished the greatest surprise of the day's sailing. With Resolute, the successful 1920 defender, Vanitie started five minutes later than the new cup

Eddy Expects 10,000 Grid Fans to Take Advantage of Trojan Season Ticket Offe

APPLICATION BLANKS READY

Former Holders Are Given Best Location

Probably No Public Sale for Bear Contest

Complete Plans Outlined for Next Season

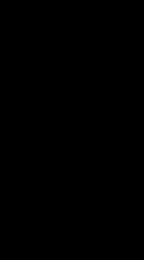
BY RALPH HUSTON

Arnold Eddy, new graduate manager at the University of Southern California, yesterday announced the complete arrangements for the ticket sale situation for Trojan grid games this fall. Application blanks for season tickets to the eight home contests will be available tomorrow and are priced at $19. Each purchaser is limited to four tickets.



ARNOLD EDDY

The Coliseum games for the Trojans this year include U.C.L.A., Oregon State, Utah Aggies, Denver, California, Hawaii, Washington and Notre Dame, giving the local fans three big games and five other tilts of lesser importance.

The public season tickets call for reserved seats near tunnels No. 5, 6 and 7, or approximately between the eastern 15-yard line and midfield, on the south side of the bowl. For the opening contest of the season, the U.C.L.A. game, holders of tickets using tunnel No. 7, or midfield, will enter at tunnel No. 9, to accommodate the U.C.L.A. rooting section. For the California game, seat holders will use tunnels No. 4 and 10, and any overflow will be moved to the vicinity of tunnel No. 16.

EXPECT SELLOUT

For the Notre Dame classic, at which time the bowl will hold 105,000 spectators, if the Unit B construction is completed, as planned, the season tickets will be good at tunnels Nos. 4, 5 and 6, to take care of the Notre Dame alumni section.

Applications for season tickets will be divided into four groups. In the first group will come those persons who purchased season tickets in 1927, 1928 and 1929, the three years that the system has been used. In the second group will be those who subscribed in 1928 and 1929; in the third group those who applied last year, and in the fourth group new subscribers. Group one will be given the best available seats, group two the next best, and so on.

Eddy has established the following rules for the purchase of season tickets:

(1.) All applications must be received by the ticket department before September 1 to take advantage of the above classifications.

(2.) Adjoining seats will be allotted to persons who pin their applications together when mailing to the ticket department. If the applications are in different classifications, the seats will be assigned to the lowest classification.

(3.) Public season ticket holders will be given a right to apply for choice seats for the Stanford game at Palo Alto.

(4.) Public season tickets will be mailed approximately two weeks before the first game, or about September 16. At that time, application blanks for Stanford, and for additional California and Notre Dame tickets will be inclosed.

Individual games are priced as follows: Utah Aggies and Denver, $1; Hawaii, $1.50; U.C.L.A., Oregon State, $2; Washington, $3; California, $3.50; Notre Dame, $5. The Stanford game is also priced at $3.50.

All seats for the Notre Dame, California and Stanford games are reserved, and there probably will be no public sale for any of these contests. Applications for tickets to individual games will not be accepted until after the season ticket applications have been handled.

BLANKS MAILED

Trojan alumni will receive applications for season tickets at the same time that the public season ticket holders receive their applications. All former subscribers will receive application blanks, mailed to the address on file at the university. New subscribers can obtain the application blanks at the university, or at the B. H. Dyas Company "Log Cabin," or they may write to the ticket department at the university.

Last year 6000 season tickets were sold, and Eddy confidently expects to reach the 10,000 mark this year. With the enlargement of the Coliseum, it is probable that the Trojans will establish a new attendance record for local games. Last year a seasonal high mark was reached when the Thundering Herd played California here, Stanford at Palo Alto, Notre Dame in Chicago, with 120,000 people witnessing the contest in Soldier Field, Carnegie Tech here, and Pittsburgh in the Rose Bowl.

varying her game with neat chops. Miss Cruickshank was not outclassed, but she failed to make much headway against her opponent's varied game.

The men's doubles saw the Wood-Shields pair set a fast pace in the first two sets when they concentrated their attack on Williams. The eastern pair rallied to take the third set with the loss of only one game. In the crucial fourth set, play followed service to 6-7, with Hall and Williams leading.

In the sixteenth game, with Shields serving, Hall scored three brilliant placements to win game and set. The youngsters never had a chance in the fifth set, Williams and Hall dominating play throughout.

This Entry for Olympics Smallest Yet

Probably the smallest gymnastic team ever to represent the United States in any Olympics will compete in the Tenth Olympic Games at Los Angeles in 1932. The team will consist of four men and one alternate, according to information received by Ben Price, coach of the national championship L.A.A.C. team, from Roy Moore, national chairman.

The team has been limited to comply with the wishes of foreign nations who can afford to send but five gymnasts here. All of the finalists must compete in the all-around championships. Outstanding men now in line for selection are Al Jochim, Frank Haubold and Herman Witzig of the metropolitan (New York) district and Glenn Berry and Paul Krempel of the L.A.A.C. Frank Deig and Dallas Bixler, two L.A.A.C. youngsters, may surprise the five veterans by 1932, according to Price.

CULLODEN WINS RACING CLASSIC

Equals Record in Taking Ohio State Derby

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2. (AP)—Coming up from last place at the start, Culloden, the Johnson-Camden entry, won the fifth renewal of the $12,000 Ohio State Derby at Bainbridge track here today. Pete Groos was astride, sending Culloden over the mile and one-eighth in 1m. 51 3-5s., equalling the track record.

Tonto Rock, from the Stuart Polk stable, carrying Jockey E. Level, was second, with Dark Entry, the Halprice Headley gelding, under E. Gianellani, third, and Busy, the J. B. Respass colt, fourth.

Play Time, from the Southland stable, was the favorite and, though he was well up with the leaders on the back stretch, failed to show the form expected.

Tonto Rock and By-Product took turns leading the field to the far turn, where Dark Entry moved into the lead.

Groos, however, had Culloden moving up and when the field hit the head of the stretch, the son of Light Brigade responded gamely to Groos's urging and finished a length and a quarter to the good. Play Time finally wound up sixth.

BIDS ASKED ON COLISEUM WORK

Public Works, the County Board of Supervisors and the Coliseum Management will in the coming week endeavor to effect a construction program to operate during the football season in hopes of providing a portion of the additional 25,000 seats, including press stand, radio and newsreel stand and public comfort stations prior to the big games later in the season."

Assurances of the fullest co-operation of the County Board of Supervisors in facilitating completion of the Coliseum is given by Sydney T. Graves, chairman of the county body and by members of the City Council and the Board of Public Works and all other groups interested in the work.

The Coliseum, when thus completed, will have a reserve seating capacity of approximately 105,000 seats and will be the largest and most complete stadium, with particular reference to conveniences for the public, according to the architect.

With final actions of the governmental bodies during the past week the hundreds of thousands of football fans are now assured the extensive schedule of games in the forthcoming season.

With the completion of the structure in the next few months the Olympic Games management is also assured a year in advance of the games in which to effect all of the special Olympic installations, so that nothing will be left to hasard the great world classic at the last minute.

INSCO SCORES AT ARLINGTON

the barrier was sprung and Don Alvaro, the Pacific Coast candidate, shot out in front, closely pursued by Black Log and Insco.

When the half-mile post was reached Don Alvaro was still in front, but showed signs of folding up, while Insco had moved into second place and was coming strong. Jockey E. Steffen gave Insco the rein as the field turned into the stretch and quickly moved into the lead and pulled away steadily as the field thundered homeward.

Valenciinnss, owned by Mrs. John D. Hertz, wife of the taxicab magnate, was the surprise winner of the Arlington Matron Handicap, second feature on today's card, at one mile. Jockey E. Steffen also was aboard this winner. Beaming Over, another long shot, owned by E. R. Bradley, the Kentucky turfman, finished second. Alcibiades, another Kentucky filly, owned by Hal Price Headley of Lexington, was third in the field of fourteen starters.

In a statement made jointly by Otto W. Lehman, president, and Charles McCulloch, chairman of the board of directors, they said the Arlington meeting was a success from an attendance standpoint, but that increased expenses probably would make the profits smaller than last year, when about $80,000 was realized. Purses increased to $131,000, improvements and the new steeplechase course, which the directors regard as the best in the country, cut deeply into the profits.

RABBIT PUNCHES

By Paul Lowry

THE "JACKRABBIT" SITUATION

IT'S not the lively ball. It's the pitching—and shortened stands.

That's the answer of Mr. Julian W. Curtis, president of A. G. Spalding & Bros., to the accusation that the baseball now in use is a jackrabbit ball and travels to much more distant points than did its predecessors of a few years back.

Spalding has been making baseballs for both big leagues ever since the leagues came into existence, and Mr. Curtis is, therefore, peculiarly fitted to speak as an expert on the situation.

He does so in the current issue of Fortune. The article is titled "General Motors of Games: Spalding," and it deals with Spalding's half century of leadership in the field of athletic outfitting.

Quoting Mr. Curtis, who first came to the Spalding firm as a salesman in 1885:

"The lively ball talk is nonsense. The ball is exactly the same as it was and don't let anybody tell you differently. There are more home runs because there are too many stands built in the outfields and because the hitters are all trying to put the ball out of the park.

"Also the spitball and other trick deliveries have been prohibited, and the umpires have been instructed to keep new balls always in play.

"It's the pitching that's most different. I could go in there and hit some of those pitchers they have today."

"And," adds the author of the Fortune article, "Mr. Curtis shakes his head in sorrow at the thought of the unskilled moundsmen who get behind the batter and put a fast one down the groove and blame Spalding when some one golfs it out of the field."

ONE HUNDRED BUCKS

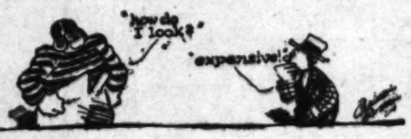
THOSE interested in the approach of the next football season may glean a few cuffs from the estimated cost of outfitting a Class A football man.

The Curtis article in Fortune calls this "institutional" business—the outfitting of schools and colleges with sporting goods and apparatus of every description—and says it is a profitable branch of the Spalding trade.



Here are the figures:

|---|---|
| "One headguard | $ 2.00 |
| One practice jersey | 7.00 |
| One game jersey | 8.75 |

"Considering that nearly every high school and college maintains teams in at least football, baseball, basketball and track, and that Spalding relations with coaches and athletic managers the country over are extremely close, the Spalding institutional business is perhaps the bulwark of its prosperity. So professional, indeed, has been the Spalding relationship to sport that by comparison its cultivation of the general public has been, if not neglected, at least not nearly as strongly stressed."

ABOUT NIGHT BASEBALL

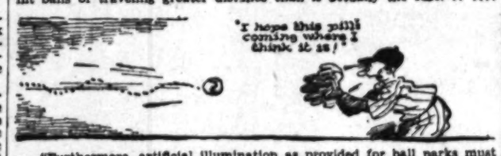
A FAIR player must be good. A good player must be better.

These are the observations of Dr. Herbert Marshutz, local optometrist, regarding the visual problems in night baseball.

The doc qualifies as an expert on the subject because he once uplifted the sports writing profession before entering the more lucrative field of eye examination.

Read his dissertation:

"It is an interesting phenomenon of optics that moving or revolving objects appear to increase their speed as the light is decreased in volume. This is the scientific explanation of the known fact that in night baseball the players misjudge the speed of fast balls. The sphere seems to travel faster (hence apparently further)—giving the illusion to hard-hit balls of traveling greater distance than is actually the case. .. ....



"Furthermore, artificial illumination as provided for ball parks must of necessity depend upon horizontal and oblique rays. Globes suspended above would interfere with the play. The vertical lighting that characterizes daylight, is lacking. Hence a different 'sense of sight' might well exist. The shadows are 'strange.'

"Again, in reduced lighting, the pupil of the eye is larger. This, it is true, admits more light to the inner eye but on the other hand, a large pupil accentuates any refractive (focusing) defects that may be present in the eyes of a player. The negative effect of the latter more than offsets the advantage of more light obtained by an enlarged pupillary aperture. Sight cannot be as keen.

"Experience and practice will make a ball player as accurate and steady at night as in solar-lighted fields, provided he plays as much on one as on the other. Because of the problems of vision night ball is a real sporting proposition. It makes every fast play a hazard. A fair player has to be good. A good player must be better."

MEXICAN ATHLETICS BOOM

THERE is an intensive plan afoot in Lower California to turn out more Mexican athletes like Joe Andrade, the 12-year-old youth who recently won the championship of the junior division in the Junior Olympic finals at Atlantic City.

This work is under the supervision of Lamberto Alvares-Gayou, director-general of athletics for Lower California, who recently was in this city to place a large order for gymnasium and playground equipment.

Among Alvares-Gayou's plans are one to stage a Latin-American Olympic Games at Tia Juana after the games in this city in 1932. He proposes that teams from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Cuba, San Salvador and Venezuela, which are coming to Los Angeles, meet the Mexican Olympic team on Mexican soil.

Alvares-Gayou writes that in line with this expansion in sports below the border the National University of Mexico football team, which plays Occidental here September 26, will make a trip to Tia Juana for a game this fall.

"Gen. Tapia and Wirt G. Bowman, president of the Agua Caliente Company," he writes, "have invited the team to play at the dog track infield at Agua Caliente the week previous or the week following the Los Angeles game.

"We are contemplating playing San Diego State College or some other Southern California conference team, if the State College schedule does not allow an open date."

NOT FOR RED GRANGE

AN OPERATIVE reports that Mr. Red Grange, once the Galloping Ghost of the gridiron, is no longer at a local road-house as a co-host.

Mr. Grange announces he wasn't cut out for that kind of a life.

YACHTING CLASH ON TOMORROW

Five-Day Series Opens Off Newport Harbor; Record Entry List

in the classic. San Francisco and San Diego will play a big part in the sailing championships. Bay City yachtsmen will be ably represented in the eight-meter, R class, six-meter and larger classes.

That very able sailorman, from the Bay City, Arthur Rousseau, will be on hand with his slick racing sloop Maybe, winner of the Southern California championship in her class last summer. Rousseau is out after the scalp of Al Rogers's Synnove of the Newport Harbor Yacht Club, the boat that won the honors in the Coast title race at San Francisco last August. Rousseau will also have his R sloop Ace in that division defendin; the championship in that class for San Francisco.

In larger classes, Mark Fontana's Shawnee and Cyril Tobin's Galatea are expected to uphold the sailing dignity of the Bay City.

A great battle is expected in the eight-meter class with the defending champion, Owen Churchill's Babe, meeting the Marin, winner of the King of Spain trophy. The Marin defeated the Babe, the Angelita and the Moolah in the mid-winters staged off Los Angeles Harbor last March. She is expected in the classic tomorrow at Newport and will be one of the favorites to annex the honors in her class.

The Duce, Roger Marchetti's eight, formerly the Mondidah, is another boat that is likely to figure in the running in the championships. Since Marchetti bought her she has been rerigged and they claim she is a much faster boat than ever before. San Francisco's entry is the Norwegian-built eight Hvide. She is an outsider in the betting as little is known here of her competitive ability.

San Diego plays a leading part in the regatta with the introduction of a new class of boat called the Pacific Coast design. These boats, built at the border city, will attract a good deal of the spotlight as they have never raced in a big regatta before. They are in the sloop class and thirty feet over all. Besides entries in that division San Diego will have others starting in the star, six and other classes.

PUGET SOUND HEARD

From Puget Sound L. E. (Ted) Geary is bringing his R-sloop Sir Tom to the championships. Geary, one of the best-known yachtsmen on this coast, is very eager to carry back the championship trophy in his class. He is expected to arrive at Newport Harbor tonight.

While the biggest part of the sailing action takes place outside of the harbor there will be a number of events staged off Balboa Beach by the smaller craft. The skimmers, snowbirds and one-man boats will do the racing inside the harbor.

A good deal of competition looms in the larger sailing classes, among the sloops, yawls, ketches and schooners. A. M. Kemp's Amorilla will be on the scene to defend her title in the cruising class for the larger schooners, which she won at San Francisco last summer. W. W. Fedder's Diablo is expected to be the big rival for the Amorilla in their division.

Will Watson's Willettie, H. W. Rehl's Pandora, Henry Warren's Ahmeek, Smith and Anglesman's Ocean Waif, Mat Walsh's Thoroughbred, Syl Spaulding's Westward, John C. Piver's Eloise and other famous racing craft will be on the job competing in their various classes, the committee in charge announced yesterday.

One of the high spots of the regatta is expected to crop up in the six-meter event. Ted Conant, skillful skipper, who has handled the eight-meter sloop Babe in many of her triumphs during the past, will skipper Al Christie's new boat, the Lanai, in the six class. Conant will face a smart field and the racing in this class is expected to be the best staged here in many years. The Lanai was recently brought here from the east coast by Commodore Christie. She has won many racing trophies on the Atlantic coast during the past.

Conant will have to beat such able skippers as Arthur Rousseau, Al Rogers, Tommy Lee and others in order to collect the honors.

Besides the sailing activities the power boats will also have an inning on the program. A race around around Catalina Island has been arranged for power cruiser craft for Thursday night. They will finish near the Newport Harbor Yacht Club Friday. The racing program will wind up with a grand finale Friday in an arbitrary handicap for all sailing classes.

EVERYTHING SET

Commodore Leon Hesiman of the Newport Harbor Yacht Club and his mates, headed by Jim Webster, have left no stone unturned in preparation of the plans to make the regatta a success. Everything will run according to schedule without any hitches, those in charge claim.

WAGNER, YANGCO IN OCEAN PARK MAIN GO

Billy Wagner, heralded as a knockout artist, is on the boards to clash with Pat Yangco in the main event at the Ocean Park boxing arena next Wednesday night. Two other pair of heavyweights will meet on the same card.

Hugh Shropshire goes against Tony Randolph in a six-round semi-wind-up. Three four-round battles complete the card. Benny Stein meets Clyde Bialock at 153 pounds in the four-round special; Johnny Martiez is to mix with George Savage at 133 pounds and Amadeo Terrazas clashes with Joe Arciniega at 165 pounds.

JUNIOR GAMES SPREADING

Definite Steps to Internationalize Olympics Being Made This Week

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) Aug. 2.—First definite steps toward internationalizing the Junior Olympic Games, sponsored in Los Angeles by the Los Angeles Times, are being taken this week in Central America. There the two youthful champions, found at the Atlantic City finals July 12, are staging a series of exhibitions through co-operation of officials of the Panama Mail Steamship Lines, athletic authorities in seven Central American republics, school, playground and municipal officials.

The two "ambassadors" of the games are "Cupie" Yamamoto, senior, of Honolulu and Joe Andrade, junior of Los Angeles, who are making the pilgrimage in lieu of the world series visit annually offered as top prizes to the two champions.

JOE ANDRADE

All of Latin America has become intensely interested in the games and the tour, with exhibitions in all principal cities of the southern republics, is expected to bring support of the program there.

The value of the games in the life of the growing youth has been quickly sensed by recreational authorities in all of these countries, and the decision to give them a concrete illustration of how the games operate was made after receipt of inquiries from Honduras, Guatemala and other countries. Last year the Territory of Hawaii was visited by the 1929 champions, with the result that that territory this year accepted the games.

The two champions are accompanied by John F. Neu of the Los Angeles Times and Ezra Crane of the Honolulu Advertiser.

The Latin America visits, it is announced by the management of the games, are but the beginning of a series of such foreign contests to be established. A series of German newspapers already have interested themselves in the games for 1931 and for 1932, while at least two oriental countries are preparing to enter. Canada, too, will be visited late this summer by representatives of the games, as well as Mexico.

"The Junior Olympic Games program can, I believe, fairly be expected to make this influence felt wherever boys' activities are made a part of the civic program," said Joseph A. Humphreys, Jr., national director of the games. "The games provide the only fair handicap system under which boys of all ages may compete, and they likewise offer growing boys the only concrete program of light athletics under organized sponsorship."

BRUIN GRID STAFF GROWS

Brader, Simpson Added to Array of Coaching Talent at Westwood for Coming Football Season

When Pacific Coast Conference football circles start revolving in earnest on the fifteenth of next month, football candidates at U.C.L.A. will find themselves under the tutelage of an augmented coaching staff. Several additions to the Bruin athletic department have been made in line with the university's policy of athletic expansion.

The chief addition to the staff of head grid mentors was made last spring when Jim Brader, former line coach at the University of Minnesota and at Harvard University, was given the job of line coach of the Bruin footballers. Brader was a line star for four years at the University of Minnesota, where he played every position on the forward wall, with the exception of center. Brader made his Westwood debut during spring practice, and will resume on September 15.

BILL SPAULDING

The most recent addition was made when Cliff Simpson, star quarterback on last fall's eleven at the local university, was given a contract to help Freddy Cusick coach the freahman team. "Simp" will work with the backfield man and the ends. While an active player in the grid game, he was known for his good headwork, line-plunging and passing. In the Montana game last fall, Simpson tossed the pass to Dick Mulhaupt that resulted in the first Uclan touchdown of the day.

Coach Bill Spaulding, head varsity mentor, will start on the first year of his new five-year contract this fall, and, after winning his first conference game last Thanksgiving against Montana, 14 to 0, is expecting to furnish some further surprises in Coast football this fall. Nearly eighty men turned out for spring football, the largest number by far ever to turn out for the sport, so "Bunker Bill" will have plenty of material to work with.

On the varsity squad, A. J. Sturzenegger will again direct the training of the backs and ends, and Hugh McDonald and Jim Brader will work together on the linemen. Cece Hollingsworth will have charge of the freshman linemen, and Cliff Simpson, the yearling backs, both working under Freddy Oster. Billy Burke enters this fall upon the second year of his regime as varsity trainer.

State College Lines Up Card

SAN JOSE, Aug. 2.—Eight football games are on the 1930 schedule of the San Jose State College, according to the announcement made by Webster Benton, athletic manager.

The Spartans will play every member of the Far Western Conference this season except the University of Nevada. It was impossible to schedule the Wolfpack this year, but San Jose is certain of the contest for 1931.

San Jose played in the Far Western Conference for the first time last year and managed to finish in the respectable place of second.

San Jose State's 1930 schedule is as follows:
September 27—Monterey Presidio at San Jose.
October 4—California Aggies at Sacramento.
October 11—Open.
October 18—Sacramento Junior College at San Jose.
October 24—College of Pacific at Stockton.
November 1—Chico State at San Jose.
November 8—St. Mary's Junior College at San Mateo.
November 15—Fresno State at San Jose.
November 27—Modesto Junior College at San Jose.

boats, but she finished ahead of both Whirlwind and Yankee. Neither had the best actual sailing time of any of the boats but Weetamoe Resolute also finished ahead of Yankee.

Today's contest was not regarded as an official trial for selection of the boat which will meet Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, Shamrock V, off here in September, but it is possible not all of the boats were in their best racing trim.

Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, who has sailed the Yankee in official competition, was not at the wheel today and the boat was "sailed by Chandler Hovey and John S. Lawrence, two members of the syndicate which owns her.

ANCIENT HISTORY

Twenty years ago today in an eighteen-inning contest ended in tie by a score of 1 to 1. Three days later Portland and Oakland played an eighteen-inning game that ended in a tie score of 6 to 6. Two of the longest tie games to be played in the circuit in twenty years occurred within the space of one week.

MILLER OVERCOMES ODDS TO COP NATIONAL TITLE

BOSTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—Young Bill Miller of the Philadelphia Bachelors' Barge Club had to overcome tremendous obstacles here today to become the national singles sculling champion.

Miller had to reverse an official ruling to get into the championship race, the featured individual competition of the fifty-eighth national rowing regatta and, once in, had to outscull three strong-armed competitors.

To qualify for the championship race, an oarsman must first win the association singles sculls event, and this is what Miller accomplished yesterday without half-trying. He finished, however, many feet off the course and was disqualified along with Jeremiah Shea of Boston, who was declared guilty of the same offense. With both ruled out, the association victory was awarded to Leo B. Menne of the Nassau Boat Club, New York, who actually finished third.

Miller protested vigorously to the regatta's executive committee and that body gave him permission to start in the championship heats along with Menne, W. E. Gilmore, Miller's clubmate, and Russell S. Codman, Jr., of the Boston Boat Club, Boston, the last two being winners of previous association sculls.

Philadelphia's famous Cook twins, Eugene and Thomas, of the Bachelors' Barge, defended their senior 145-pound doubles sculls championship by defeating Al Geoghegan and Robert Whitney of the new Rochelle (N. Y.) Boat Club by five lengths and the Bachelors' Barge senior quadruple sculls became champions for another year by leading the Union Boat Club four to the line with a length and a half to spare.

ERVAST TO RUN IN BORDER RACE

Fleet Four-Year-Old will Gallop Today

Long Colt Betters Record in Workout

Umbrian Princess Places First in Temecula

AGUA CALIENTE (Mex.) Aug. 2. Ervast, fleet 4-year-old from the stable of Baron Long, will try conclusions with the fastest sprinters here this summer tomorrow afternoon in the Fleetfoot Handicap, a six furlong dash. Ervast stopped a sensational workout Friday. He stepped the first half-mile of a six-furlong trial in 45 2-5s, four-fifths of a second better than the world's record, going the full distance eased up in 1m. 11s. The Long colt will carry top weight in the Fleetfoot of 119 pounds against 112 for C. S. Irwin's Nusakan and ninety-eight pounds for Mrs. Jim Crofton's Beth Hogan and Wirt G. Bowman's Bumfills. Shasta Graft is the real lightweight of the entries, getting in with ninety pounds.

WIRT G. BOWMAN

The secondary feature of the afternoon will be the Al Jolson Special for which the popular comedian will be honorary judge. The special brings out C. B. Irwin's Ironsides, James N. Crofton's Scimitar and J. A. Parson's Seth's Hope. Ironsides will carry top weight of 118 pounds, Scimitar, 113 and Seth's Hope, 111. Nine races in all are included on the Sabbath program.

Dave Marion, the man who created "Snuffy, the Cabman" in the stage world, scored his first victory as a horse owner for the summer meeting this afternoon. Umbrian Princess scored for his "Snuffy, the Cabman" stable. The 5-year-old took the track with the rise of the barrier in the Temecula, a six-furlong sprint, and led from beginning to end. She finished a length and one-half in front of Hi the Deck, with Frank D. getting the show. The filly ran the distance in 1m. 12 4-5s. Results:

First race, five and one-half furlongs, claiming—Grey's Gaild, first; Dalsell, second; Ben Ali, third. Time, 1:08 4-5.

Second race, colt and one-eighth mile, claiming—Ben Ali, first; Sweetie Pie, second; Johnny Play Hour, third. Time, 1:54 2-5.

Third race, five furlongs, the Salvator Mineral Springs Handicap—Wooly Suffer, first; Sweetie Pie, second; Infra, third. Time, :59 2-5.

Fourth race, one mile, claiming—Grey Mills, first; Ben Ali, second; Sweetie Pie, third. Time, 1:40 4-5.

Fifth race, six furlongs, claiming—Indian Princess, first; West Hill Dot, second; Frank D., third. Time, 1:12 4-5.

Sixth race, one and one-sixteenth mile, claiming—Lord of Mail, first; Dalsell, second; Bernier, third. Lord of Mail, Bonnie Lad, Time, 1:51 4-5.

Seventh race, seven furlongs, claiming—Bonnie Lad, first; Lennie Williams, second; Fair Dawn, third. Fischer. Time, 1:26 1-5.

Billy Townsends Trades Smacks With Harry Kid Brown Tuesday Night in Olympic Ring

KNOCKOUT KING MEETS VETERAN

Philadelphian will Provide Test for Canadian

Bout with McLarnin May be Signed if He Wins

Eastern Boxer Has Fought Some Great Stars

BY KAY OWE

Billy Townsend steps into smart company Tuesday night at the Olympic for his sixth start here. He faces the veteran, Harry Kid) Brown of Philadelphia in the ten-round main event.

BILLY TOWNSEND.

The club is admitting ladies with escorts free for this show. This will apply to the reserved section only—not the balcony.

Townsend has proved to be dynamite in four out of five of his fights in Los Angeles. Promoter Jack Doyle would like to see Townsend matched with either Jimmy McLarnin or Young Jack Thompson for an outdoor show if the Vancouver slugger bows his skate clean.

The Canadian has scored a total of twenty knockdowns in twenty-three rounds of fighting to date. He stopped Wildcat Carter in two, Armando Santiago twice in five, lost to Joey Wolff in ten and flattened Medill in one.

Carter was on the floor thirteen times, Santiago three and Wolff four. This is something of a record for punching.

Brown is no stranger here. He defeated Baby Joe Gans at old Vernon, lost to Jackie Fields at the Olympic and whipped Dick Hogan and in other appearances at Hollywood and San Diego.

The Philadelphia boy was once a member of the famous Phil Glassman stable of stars. The other three were Lew Tendler, Joe Tiplitz and Danny Kramer. Three of them were lightweights, Kramer being a featherweight. All were about the same caliber with Tendler the money maker.

While Tiplitz didn't show anything when he came to the Coast to fight Mushy Callahan, at the one he was the terror of eastern ring-venders.

Brown has fought them all. He beat Johnny Kilbane when the latter was the featherweight champion of the world. The match was the semi-wind-up to the Tendler-Mickie Pitzsimmons all-star show held at Shibe Park, Philadelphia.

Later Brown whipped Johnny Dundee when he held the title in an overweight bout. Jack Bernstein, once the junior lightweight champion, was also beaten by the Kid.

Sammy Mandell twice defeated Brown, but the bouts were close. Brown lost to Fields here when Fields was the welterweight champion. He also lost to Jack Thompson twice in San Francisco.

Brown alleges he was victimized in the first Thompson bout. He had taken five straight rounds from the Negro when the referee suddenly halted the bout asserting Brown was on the verge of being knocked out. They were rematched and Thompson came in five pounds overweight, getting a decision.

Thompson says Brown is one of the most punishing fighters he ever fought. Brown is not a knockout puncher, but a busy hitter and one who is known as the most scientific lightweight in the business.

Brown reports Gans is one of the best welterweights in the country and thinks he would whip Thompson. Gans has a New York connection and is having trouble getting fights now, Brown says.

Gans and Brown fought last Christmas Day in Philadelphia. The Negro evened the Los Angeles score by getting a knockdown—the only one ever registered over Brown in his fights—to get the decision. Brown had Gans on the floor at Vernon.

Brown is getting Townsend when the Canadian is riding high on a new record. He was in a similar spot once before. Glassman matched him with Jack Zivic just after Zivic had stopped Tendler, Tiplitz and Nate Goldman. Brown won a ten-round decision.

Townsend and Brown are boxing at 146 pounds.

Two hard-hitting featherweights, Baby Pacho and Johnny DeLano, will mix the six-round semi-windup. DeLano is the Italian boy Jerry the Greek brought from Boston. He made a big hit his first start at the Olympic when he fought Chet De Leon. Pacho is the Mexican star from El Centro.

Two heavyweights, both named Steve, meet in the special event. They are Steve Hayden and Steve Evans. They will weigh around 200 pounds. Hayden scored a kayo in one start here. He is a Penn State College graduate and shows promise.

The two fours are Kenneth Johnson vs. Homer Gaines and George Sands and George Hanford.

PERRY JONES TO TAKE CHARGE OF TOURNEY

Perry Jones, secretary of the Southern California Tennis Association, will have charge of the championship tennis tournament scheduled for the North Shore Tavern courts of Lake Arrowhead the 23rd and 24th. It was announced last night. The event, which will be played under the auspices of the southern association, is attracting much attention among Southern California players, Jones said, and entries already have been received. Several hundreds of dollars have been spent on the courts this season and Jones says they are now among the finest in the country. Reservations are being received both by Jones and by Ed Williams, who will be in charge of the courts at the mountain resort.

HOLD EVERYTHING

These two top the all-star wrestling show at the Olympic Wednesday night. They are Don George, winner of the national amateur heavyweight mat title in 1928 and 1929, and Martin Plestina, one of the feared heavyweights since the time of Frank Gotch. This will be George's sixth start here against first-rate competition. He came here unknown four months ago. Since then he has turned in victories over Dan Koloff, Stan Stasiak, Nick Lutze, Lee Wycoff and Joe Malcewicz.

EXPERIENCED MERCURY TEAM NAMED

Track Squad for National Championships at Pittsburgh will be Small but Well Fitted for Competition

The track-and-field team which will represent the Los Angeles Athletic Club in the national A.A.U. championships at Pittsburgh on the 23rd inst., may be one of the smallest teams ever sent east by the Mercury Club, but it is one of the most experienced.

Of the thirteen men who have been tentatively selected eleven are eligible to compete in only the senior championships. This means that all of these men have won a first place in a senior or junior national meet or the I.C.A.A.A.A. or N.C.A.A. championships.

The two eligible for the junior meet are by no means inexperienced. Jimmy De Mers, javelin tosser, has an official mark of 220ft. 4½in. which is the best ever recorded by an American spear tosser.

HENRY LASALLETTE

Vic Williams was runner-up in a 48s. quarter-mile in the collegiate championships at Chicago in June, so is no beginner at the one-lap game.

A list of the major honors won by the tentative team follows:

Herman Brix: Holder of national A.A.U. championship record, sixteen-pound shot put, 50ft. 11 3-4in. National senior outdoor champion, 1928, 1929. Selected as all-American shot putter (A.A.U.,) 1929. Southern Pacific A.A.U. champion, 1928, 1929. West Coast Relays champion, 1929. National senior indoor champion, 1930. Holder indoor record. Holder American outdoor record, 52ft. 4in. Runner-up Olympic Games, 1928. Holder of Canadian record, 52ft. 7in. Dominion Day champion (Vancouver,) 1929, 1930.

Fred Sturdy: Holder of national A.A.U. championship pole vault record, 13ft. 9 1-4in. National senior outdoor champion, 1929. National senior indoor champion, 1929, 1930. Selected as all-American pole vaulter (A.A.U.,) 1929. Selected on American team to tour Europe, 1929. Selected on same team, but declined, 1930. National junior outdoor champion, 1928.

Harry Hinkle: Holder of national A.A.U. championship record, three-mile walk, 21m. 35 1-5s. National senior champion, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929. National senior indoor champion. Selected as all-American (A.A.U.) walker, 1926-1929. National A.A.U. seven-mile champion, 1926, 1927, 1928.

Henry Lassalette: Winner national A.A.U. senior outdoor high jump championship, 1929. California interscholastic champion, 1928. S.P.A.A.U. champion, 1928, 1929. Selected all-American high jumper (A.A.U.,) 1929.

Leo Lermond: Winner national A.A.U. one-mile championship, 1929. Selected all-American miler (A.A.U.,) 1929. Selected on American team to tour Europe, 1929. Defeated Harry Larva (Finland,) Olympic 1500-meter champion, at Stockholm. Fourth in 5000-meter run, Olympic Games, 1928.

Richard Pomeroy: National junior champion, 440-yard hurdles, 1925. Place winner senior national meets, 1925, 1926, 1927. Holder S.P.A.A.U. 440-yard hurdle record, 53 4-5s. Winner 120-yard high hurdles, S. P. A. A. U. relay carnival, 1930.

James Stewart: National collegiate high jump champion, 1930. Selected as all-American (collegiate) high jumper, 1930. Southern Pacific A.A.U. champion, 1930. S.P.A.A.U. record holder, 6ft. 5in. Joint holder California intercollegiate record, 6ft. 3 1-4in. Runner-up I. C.4-A. high jump, 1930.

Hector Dyer: Winner 220-yard dash, I.C4-A. meet, 1930. Defeated Frank Wykoff of U.S.C. in 100-yard dash, Stanford-U.S.C. dual meet, 1930, time 9 3-5s. Third in 100-yard dash, I.C4-A., 1930.

Vic Williams: Runner-up in 440-yard dash, national collegiate meet at Chicago, 1930. Third in 440-yard dash, I.C.4-A. meet, 1930. Best unofficial time, 48 1-5s. Selected on all-American (collegiate) one-mile relay team, 1930.

Robert Patton: National junior A.A.U. hop-step-jump champion, 1927. Second senior hop-step-jump, 1927. Third senior hop-step-jump, 1929. S.P.A.A.U. champion, 1930.

Alma Richards: Winner high jump, Olympic Games, 1912. American decathlon champion, 1915. Third in fifty-six-pound weight, national meet, 1926.

JAMESTOWN IS BEST IN RACE

other length to the bad. Jamestown, a son of the famous St. James, ran the six furlongs in the excellent time of 1:11 3-4.

Jamestown, a very rapid breaker, quickly shot to the front and opened up a three-lengths lead over nine rivals with Novelist, Camper, Black Tyrone and Polydorous furnishing the early opposition. At the half-mile Jamestown still was going easily nearly two lengths in front of Novelist, while Black Tyrone had moved into third place.

Polydorous had enough of the hot pace early and dropped back. Speeding down the stretch McAtee gave Jamestown his head and the Widener colt breezed past the judges with a good four lengths of daylight between him and Novelist. The latter showed a good effort in beating Black Tyrone a length for the place. Black Tyrone was five lengths in front of Concord with Camper, Iron Clad, Blenheim, Polydorous, Hurry Bye and Roan Antelope back in the ruck.

The Glen Riddle Farm's Battleship Gray, with H. Erickson up, won the first running of the Wilson Stakes, named in honor of the late Robert T. Wilson, president of the Saratoga Racing Association.

Battleship Gray got away fast and under a good ride just managed to last to win by a head from Polygamous with Buckeye Poet third and the favorite, Vanity, fourth. Polygamous beat Buckeye Poet three lengths for the place. The time for the mile was 1:38 3-5.

DE HATE SIGNS TO TAKE ON MACIAS

Back in fighting form after a year of inactivity, due to jaw trouble, Paul De Hate, hard-hitting Compton welterweight who used to be the greatest "club" battler in Southern California, has signed to meet "Wild Man" Macias in a ten-round main event at Santa Ana Thursday night.

Milford Berglund and Sid Gregory will collide in the semi-wind-up.

ADELAIDE LAMBERT TURNS SWIM "PRO"

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (AP)—Miss Adelaide Lambert, former national swimming champion and a member of the 1928 Olympic team, has turned professional and will compete in the metropolitan professional championships starting here Monday, the International Professional Swimmers' Association announced today.

Miss Lambert swam on the 400-meter team representing the United States in the 1928 Olympics. She also has held the national 300-yard Hedley title and in the recent amateur championship in California finished second to Eleanor Holm in the medley event.

WOLGAST TO BATTLE ROBLETO

Midget Wolgast, world's flyweight champion, fights Canto Robleto at the Hollywood American Legion Stadium Friday night. Wolgast defeated Speedy Dado last week in his only local start.

What about Canto Robleto? That's what fight fans want to know. A few weeks ago Speedy Dado fought Robleto at Pasadena. It was supposed to be one of those soft touches that the "big shots" like to grab off in the sticks for pin money. At the end of ten heats Speedy Dado was fortunate to get a draw. Robleto has been going big at Pasadena. He is a younger ster who has been satisfied to stay at smaller clubs and be sure he is ready for the crucial test.

Last Friday night at the stadium Armand Emanuel was taught a lesson about a few things in the fight game. He knows today that reputations don't count for anything in the fight racket and any good fighter is dangerous. Canto Robleto is as good at his weight as is Al Morro, the boy who beat Emanuel.

Another good card has been arranged for the stadium patrons. Tommy Gardner, bantamweight, fights Sergio Radam in the semi-wind-up. Radam, a Filipino, held Gardner to a draw at Pismo Beach a few months ago.

Jimmy Owens in the special event is the boy who bears watching. He has fought Mushy Callahan, Jackie Fields, Jack Thompson and other good boys. He fights Guy McKinney just to break in at Hollywood. The boy really rates main events.

The four-rounders will be Bob Patrick and Henry Merescal in the second spot, and Billy Papke, Jr., son of the former middleweight champion, fighting Max Hernandez in the curtain raiser.

Tales of a Wayside Tee

HORTON SMITH dropped in to say hello a day or so ago and during the visit brought up an important point.

"Few average golfers," Horton remarked, "have any definite idea or feeling of the relation between the hands and the club head. The hands are the only part of the body in direct contact with the club. Yet the average golfer will let all sort of obstacles get in between the two things that should work together—that must work together. If the hands and wrists are not working properly, then the club head can't possibly do its job."

"I'll admit that," he said, "but I think the golfer must know more about the work and the usefulness of the hands before his body action can work in the right way. His body action may be almost perfect, but that won't help him a lot until he knows how to use his hands and wrists.

"There are few people who can think of a lot of things around the same time. Most of us can only think of a few things, and the fewer the better in a golf game. That's why I think more attention should be paid first to the work the hands and wrists have to do and how they must do it. Then the help of good body action can be added later. It is hard to build both together, for again that gives the average player too much to think about. He finally gets them confused and handles neither in the right way.

"I believe in the simplest form of instruction one can give and I always thought that learning the right use of hands and wrists, what they meant to the control of the club head, was about as good a way to start or as good a way to get a real foundation, as one could bring about."

A First-Class Tip

This is a first-class tip. It is surprising how few golfers understand this hand-and-club head relation even in the shorter chips and the shorter pitches. They even allow outside interference to help break up this short game. They drop the shoulder or swing in the body or do something else, whereas this type of stroke can be easily and simply played with only hands and wrist and forearms during the effort, applied directly to the club head itself.

I know of several first-class teachers who operate on this method. When certain of their pupils get hooked into stubborn faults that apparently can't be cured or corrected, they make the player stand with his feet fairly close together, keep the body entirely out of the swing and then start him to playing short pitches with only the hands and wrists used in making the stroke. They keep this up for a while and then carry the pupil into still longer shots along the same line.

In this way they finally get the player to pick up the feel of the hands. He can never quite come to this correct feel as long as he is also trying to think of body action and various other details that come into the swing.

Using Tips

The best way for the average golfer to use a tip is to first locate his main fault. It may be that he is lifting the club head back from the ball without any body turn. In that case he can work out one or two suggestions concerning this fault, such as starting the club head back with the left hand moving closer to the body or upper right thigh. This at least will be some measure of help in reaching for the needed correction. He may be playing his chip shots badly. By playing the ball more off his right foot, further back, he may affect part of the cure—since this is the easier and simpler way to play a chip shot.

But after all he must, as Horton Smith says, find how to use his hands and wrists in directing the speed and path of the club head. He must put them to work in direct control of the club head. He must get the feel that hands and wrists are big factors in swinging the head of the club. And he can usually get this by first attempting the shorter pitches and the shorter shots.

GEORGE PLAYS GIANT KILLER

Former Amateur Takes on Marin Plestina

Heavies Clash in Feature of Mat Program

Lutze Meets Bill Shaw in Finish Battle

BY RALPH HUSTON

Jack, the well-known giant-killer, had little, if any, on Don George. The former Michigan amateur tackles Marin Plestina in the main part of a double-feature bill at the Olympic Wednesday night and tackling the 240-pound mountain is something not usually done by up-and-coming young heavyweight wrestlers.

NICK LUTZE.

Plestina is the real trial horse of the heavyweight division. He has beaten every good mat man of any note, with two exceptions—Gus Sonnenberg, the present title-holder, and Ed (Strangler) Lewis, the ex-champion.

Plestina has pushed over every promising youngster who ever was argued into a match with him. Most of them dodge him. Neither Nick Lutze nor Everett Marshall ever has engaged the huge grappler. But George asks no favors from anybody. He reasoned that he might as well find out now, as well as any other time, whether he has a chance to be a champion. When Lou told George that he could have the Plestina bout George snapped it up as quickly as though he had been offered a chance at Sonnenberg.

TAKES CHANCE

"If I beat Plestina I'll know I'm ready to take on anybody," George declared. "If Plestina beats me I'll know I had better go out and learn a few more tricks of the trade before I have any hopes of winning a championship."

Lee Wycoff, who appears in Wednesday night's opener, tried his ability against Plestina in San Francisco last week and came out on the short end of the match. Wycoff is rated one of the fastest young heavies in the business, but Plestina, despite his bulk, kept pace with the youngster and came back after losing the first fall to take the next two.

George looked very impressive in winning from Joe Malcewicz in the last show. He has been training industriously, working on wrist and head combinations and split holds. He expects to weigh about 210 for the match. It is a two-out-of-three-fall battle to a finish.

The other half of the double may steal the show, although the opponents do not measure up to the main-eventers as far as class is concerned. Nick Lutze, who never loses his popularity, no matter how often he may be beaten, hooks up with "Wild Bill" Shaw in a finish event.

Shaw recently returned from a trip to the East, where he cleaned up on everybody and eventually got a match with Dick Shikat, but injured his shoulder in training and was forced to cancel the engagement. Jim Londos substituted and handily defeated the other title claimant.

SHAW ROUGH

Shaw is determined to add to his reputation. He figures that a victory over Lutze will rank him right up with the local top-notch heavies and he is out to flatten Nick in a hurry. Shaw really wants a return match with Plestina. He had one here some time ago and was disqualified for roughing. Shaw afterward declared that Plestina had tried to strangle him and was merely paying back in kind. If he trims Lutze he may get the match.

Wycoff will hook up with Pietro Bacini, winner of the Italian championship tournament in 1927 and 1929. He is supposed to have won forty-one straight matches since coming to this country.

REISTER AND BLAIR TO CLASH THURSDAY

Bobby Reister, the Alhambra schoolboy lightweight, takes on Johnny Blair, a flashy boy from New York, at the Pasadena Arena Thursday. Reister astonished the Southern California pugilistic world last week at the Arena when he kayoed Ritchie King in the third round.

There will be a great supporting card, made up of five bouts of four rounds each, as follows: Baby Jack Dempsey vs. Clem Avila, 124 pounds; Bill Cooley vs. Jack Dunseth, 170 pounds; Leo Reed vs. Jack Tremaine, 148 pounds; Judy Zuniga vs. Kid Bentura, 118 pounds; Punchin' Paul Gomez vs. Mickey McLaughlin, 150 pounds.

ROUND ROBIN CUE TOURNEY PLANNED

As a finale to the series of games that have been running for the past six weeks involving the leading billiard players of the Pacific Coast, Clifford Jones announces that beginning Tuesday afternoon, a five-handed round robin tournament will be held at the Jones Spring-street room. The five players who will take part in this event comprise Welker Cochran, former world's champion at the balk-line game, Charles Jordan, national amateur three-cushion champion in 1929, J. N. Bozeman, national amateur three-cushion champion in 1928, Joe Chamaco and Clifford Jones.

BABY SAL RETURNS TO RING

Baby Sal Soria once more begins the tedious climb to the top of taking on Ad Cadena for a ten-round tilt at Ontario Wednesday night. Sal is tackling a tough opponent in Cadena but he is determined to regain the prestige that was once his. Sal—scarcely past 20—has his future still ahead of him. He is hitting harder and snappier than ever before and will enter the ring at 140 pounds. The extra weight has put more steam to his punches.

Traung Backs Corbett for Title Clash

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2. (AP)—Young Corbett of Fresno beat two welterweight champions and hasn't a title to show for it, but he has a champion in Charles F. Traung, State boxing commissioner. Traung said today he would oppose any efforts to have Young Jack Thompson defend his title against anybody else but Corbett in this State. His statement was made following reports of a proposed match between Thompson and Billy Townsend in Los Angeles.

"Townsend has not proved that he deserves the right to meet Thompson for the crown," said Mr. Traung. "Commissioner William Hanlon and myself agreed at the last commission meeting that Corbett was the only logical contender. No one but Corbett has proved his worth to the title chance."

Traung took cognizance of a proposed Thompson-Tommy Freeman title match in Cleveland with the statement that if the bout is signed he will send a protest to the National Boxing Association and the city boxing commission of Cleveland.

Wolgast Signs for Brown Go

Newsboy Brown, most consistent challenger of the flyweight division, was signed yesterday to box Midget Wolgast at the Olympic the 19th inst. It will be a nontitle bout.

The little challenger, who fought Frankie Genaro, Fidel La Barba and Corp. Izzy Schwartz, will post a $1000 weight forfeit. He must weigh over 112 and not over 114.

Brown weighed 114 1-2 at catchweights for his last two fights. One was with Fabio Dano at the Olympic May 20 and the other was later with Jimmy Gardner at Hollywood.

Wolgast plans to fight every week while he is in California. After the Brown bout he may be sent against Dano, the Filipino, either here or in San Francisco.

The Armand Emanuel-Leo Lomski bout scheduled for the Grand-avenue club on the 5th inst. has been indefinitely postponed due to an eye cut sustained by Emanuel in the Al Morro bout at the Legion last Friday night.

Emanuel may not be ready to fight for a month. Lomski was notified en route here from his home in Aberdeen. Matchmaker Wad Wadhams will substitute a new match to fill the vacant date.

BUCCANEERS TO BATTLE ROVERS

Rival Polo Squad Tangle at Uplifters Today

Lionel Pedley will Captain One Mallet Team

Clair Brunson is Pilot of Pirate Four

In a special polo match at the Uplifters' field this afternoon, Lionel Pedley's Buccaneers will meet Clair Brunson's Rovers as a preparatory tilt for the Uplifters-Santa Barbara series scheduled for August 10 and 17.

CLAIR BRUNSON

Pedley has a likely looking team in the Buccaneers composed of Will Rogers, Jr., Lyell Puckett, himself and Carl Beal, and they are expected to prove stronger than the Rovers comprising Dr. Rex Duncan, Snowy Baker, Clair Brunson and Dick Smith.

The four players which will represent the club in the Santa Barbara matches, which will be held on the local field, have been tentatively selected as Lyell Puckett, Snowy Baker, Lionel Pedley and Clair Brunson but their definite selection depends upon their showing in today's affair. The Santa Barbara team is a strong one with C. H. Jackson, Hale Marsh, Jim Colt and Barney Schiff and the Uplifters must select a free scoring aggregation to oppose them if they expect to win.

Today's game will be broadcast over a local station from 2:30 to 4:30 and will also be announced play by play at the field. Hugh Blue will referee.

Club officials are much gratified at the very large increase in attendance at the Sunday games and wish it known that polo is a game for everybody to enjoy although it is not within the reach of everyone from a playing standpoint. Few games have the color, speed and action of polo and the public is rapidly becoming aware of this fact.

Here are the line-ups for today:

| Buccaneers | | Rovers |
|---|---|---|
| Will Rogers, Jr. | No. 1 | Dr. Rex Duncan |
| Lyell Puckett | No. 2 | Snowy Baker |
| Lionel Pedley | No. 3 | Clair Brunson |
| Carl Beal | Back | Dick Smith |

ADAMS TO FIGHT DANIELS AT ONTARIO

Johnny Adams, the San Bernardino Lion, meets Jack Daniels, Texas boxer, in a ten-round bout at Ontario Wednesday night. Len Porter and Don Smith meet in the six-round semi. Peppy O'Shea and Wadhams clash in the special. Two fours complete the card.

Giants Nose Out Robins in Overtime; A's Annex Pair

BROOKLYN LOSES ELEVEN INNING THRILLER, 8 TO 6

Cubs Bow to Bucs and Muff Chance to Gain; Cards Down Reds, 9-8; Braves Trip Phils Twice

BROOKLYN, Aug. 2. (AP)—The New York Giants beat the Robins today, 8 to 6, in eleven innings and two and three-fourths hours of wild-eyed baseball which saw quick shifting situations crown and uncrown fresh heroes and goats.

Ray Moss was the losing pitcher in the eleventh after both teams had scored in the tenth to continue the deadlock. Hollis Thurston carried on the pitching duel against Bill Walker for nine innings, but Brooklyn called on three more pitchers to finish. Walker opened the eleventh with a triple and scored on Critz's single. Heimach relieved Moss and a wild throw by Glenn Wright let in two more Giant tallies.

HOLLIS THURSTON.

Frederick started the Brooklyn half with a double and Walker was relieved. Joe Heving held the Robins to a single tally and after meeting success in three attempts to tie the score they failed the fourth time.

BUCS ON TOP

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. (AP)—The Cubs muffed a chance to gain a full game on Brooklyn today by taking a 14-to-8 lacing from Pittsburgh while the league leaders were losing an overtime contest to New York. Chicago matched the Pirates in number of hits at sixteen each but failed to bunch them. Ineffective pitching proved the Cubs' downfall, Percy Malone, Guy Bush and Lynn Nelson being unable to spread out the Pittsburgh hits. Malone was wild, walking seven in less than three innings.

Hack Wilson accounted for his thirty-fourth home run of the season in the ninth with none aboard.

TWO FOR BRAVES

BOSTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—The battered Phillies came to town today and took the short end of both halves of a double-header with the Braves. The score of the first was 3 to 2 and the second 5 to 4 in ten innings.

Seibold yielded but seven hits in the first game and Sherdel gave nine in the second.

The winning run in the night cap came in the last half of the tenth with two out. Chatham's single to center scored Spohrer who had started the inning off with a safe blow.

Klein's jumping one-hand catch of Sherdel's drive into deep right in the fifth of the second game was the fielding feature.

BOSTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—The battered Phillies came to town today and took the short end of both halves of a double-header with the Braves. The score of the first was 3 to 2 and the second 5 to 4 in ten innings.

Seibold yielded but seven hits in the first game and Sherdel gave nine in the second.

The winning run in the night cap came in the last half of the tenth with two out. Chatham's single to center scored Spohrer who had started the inning off with a safe blow.

Klein's jumping one-hand catch of Sherdel's drive into deep right in the fifth of the second game was the fielding feature.

KLEIN LEADS NATIONAL LEAGUE WITH .411 MARK

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (AP)—The important question for National League batters seems to have been reduced to "how near can we come to Klein?" instead of the query as to who might dislodge his grip on most of the slugging honors of the circuit. For Chuck Klein, young Philadelphia wallloper, has taken a hold on first place in hitting that seems safe from all threats.

CHUCK KLEIN.

Klein not only has gained the lead in batting among the league's regulars with an average of .411, 9 points ahead of his team-mate, Frank O'Doul, who formerly topped the list, but he also is far ahead in scoring, hits and batting in runs and is a good second in hitting doubles and home runs.

In the averages released today which include Thursday's games, Klein's totals are 105 runs, 164 hits, 113 runs batted in, 42 doubles and 20 home runs.

STARS RETURN HOME TUESDAY

Hollywood in Local Night Debut Against Seals

Seraphs Out to Knock Over Missions in North

Sacs, Oaks Open Night Ball Series at Oakland

BY BOB RAY

Oscar Vitt and his Hollywood Stars, who are doing their best to justify their being made favorites to capture second-half honors, return home Tuesday to make their local debut under the Wrigley Field klieigs. Nick Williams's Seals, who seem to be having their difficulties this half, will provide the opposition.

OSCAR VITT.

The Sheiks have performed very creditably under the arc lights up at Seattle and Portland on their present road trip, but Hollywood fans are anxious to see them in action at night at Wrigley Field. A heavy list of reservations have been received for Hollywood's local night opener.

Skipper Vitt's athletes have been playing a sensational brand of ball the last seven weeks, not having lost a series during their long winning stretch. The Sheiks have the old wallop, are getting good pitching and, although not playing as fine defensive ball as the Angels, are fielding ably enough to more than hold their own. It looks as though they'll be mighty hard to head off this half, but don't count the Angels out of the race yet.

Lelivelt has his athletes hustling their heads off and the Seraphs are playing so brilliantly in the field that they are plenty tough to beat. Baecht, Horne, Ballou and Yerkes are all hurling consistent ball, with the night games making them more effective than ever. The Angels haven't the punch Hollywood has, but they loom as the best-balanced outfit in the circuit and it will take steady ball to beat them.

While the Seals and Sheiks are providing the night excitement at Wrigley Field next week the Seraphs will be up in San Francisco finding out for themselves just how good the Missions are at present. Red Killefer's squad, which appeared rather ordinary during the first half and certainly didn't improve when Ike Boone and Harry Rosenberg were sold, started the second half with a bang and are now right up in front. The Missions, however, don't figure to continue their fast pace because of their lack of capable mound talent, but nob

"Night baseball is a novelty here, as it is in most places, and the Sioux braves have made several hits (no pun intended) throughout Southern California with their arc-light ball games. The team carries its own light plant and the proposition is so well worked out that there is plenty of light to play by. Of course, the Indians have a big advantage, for they are used to this innovation of the national game, but the locals are confident that in daylight electric light or no light at all they can give a good account of themselves."

That the game was popular is evinced in the following report of the game, which appeared Tuesday, August 8, 1905, there being no Monday edition issued at that time:

"Oh, what a funniness! Indians, 7; Channel City, 6. That was the total when the Moles and Bats finished their midnight revels.

"The crowd was there, though; they came in bunches and the grand stand fairly groaned with its freight of fandom. Last night's contest is best compared to an indoor baseball, where all the lights are out and no one can see any of the plays. Even the umpire had to look at the game through a night glass and once or twice he was caught napping and called a ball or a strike before the ball had been delivered. For the Indians Old Crow was the star. He showed evidences of being aged in wood and was very high proof. It was impossible to tell which of the palefaces played best, for the night light went out after the first inning."

Tuning Up for California's Golf Championship

JACK NEVILLE and DR. PAUL HUNTER

FIFTH HOLE AT PEBBLE BEACH.

Here are three of the "Old Guard," Jack Neville, the defending champion; H. Chandler Egan, former national amateur champion, and Dr. Paul Hunter, former State title-holder, who will compete in the 1930 State event scheduled for the week of September 1 to 7. All three are diligently practicing over the elusive Pebble Beach course, where the national amateur championship was fought a year ago. The fifth hole shown here is an exacting one-shoter. A field of approximately 500 low and high handicap golfers are expected to enter the tournament, which will be played over the Pebble Beach, Cypress Point, Monterey Peninsula and Del Monte courses.

H. CHANDLER EGAN.

CADDIES CLASH TOMORROW

Four Bag Toters Qualify from Each Club for Annual Championship Tournament

Caddies of every golf and country club, municipal and pay-as-you-play course in Southern California qualify over eighteen holes at their home clubs tomorrow for the third annual Southern California $1000 caddie golf tournament sponsored by Benjamin J. Fahy. Four caddies will qualify from each course.

Qualifiers and caddiemasters will be guests of Fahy on Wednesday at the Los Angeles Breakfast Club. The tournament proper starts Monday, the 11th inst., with the first eighteen holes of the seventy - two hole event, the second eighteen on Tuesday, and the thirty-six-hole finals on Wednesday. Low sixty-four and ties will be eligible to play for the money prizes on the final day.

A. H. "OLLIE" PAINTER.

The tournament will be played over the Rancho Golf Club and Sunset Fields courses.

A special eighteen-hole medal play tournament for caddiemasters is scheduled on Monday, the 11th inst., for a purse totaling $200. One caddiemaster is eligible to compete from each club.

A. H. (Ollie) Painter will be in charge of the tournament.

FOURTEENTH INFANTRY WINS AQUATIC HONORS

FORT DAVIS (Panama Canal Zone) Aug. 2.—In a recent department swimming meet held in the Canal Zone, in which the best swimmers on the Isthmus participated, the Fourteenth United States Infantry of Fort Davis won the department championship by a large margin, taking forty out of a possible fifty-one points.

Among the point winners of the Fourteenth Infantry team was Private Walter J. Doyle, a member of Headquarters Company, Fourteenth Infantry, who is the son of Mrs. Grace E. Doyle, 6518 Seville avenue, Huntington Park, Cal. He won the 100-yard free-style handily against very keen competition. Private Doyle is an outstanding swimmer in the Canal Zone where good swimmers are numerous.

STRONG FIELD LOOMS FOR CANADA AMATEUR

LONDON (Ont.) Aug. 2. (AP)—One of the strongest fields in the history of the game will take part in the Canadian amateur golf championship starting with a thirty-six-hole qualifying round over the London Hunt Club's course Monday.

Headed by Eddie Held, New York, the defending champion, the field of 118 entrants includes six other former winners—George S. Lyon, who won in 1908 and is now 72 years of age; Don Carrick, 1925 and 1927; Frank Thompson, 1921 and 1924; C. Ross Somerville, 1926 and 1928; W. J. Thompson, 1923, and C. C. Fraser, 1922.

Twenty-nine players, constituting nearly a quarter of the field, are from the United States, giving that country the largest representation ever.

BASEBALL MAY GIVE COP COMPENSATION

BOISE (Idaho) Aug. 2. (AP)—Although the courts have ruled that fly balls landing in the bleachers may be kept by adoring fans, yet it is not safe to catch them, declared Mike Roach, Chief of Police of Coeur d'Alene, today in a petition for workmen's compensation.

Mike was on duty, he told the insurance fund office, watching a baseball game. A husky batter landed on the ball with a home-run smack. It was a good smack, Mike said, but, instead of traveling high over the fence, it made a bee line for the officer's head.

Naturally he put up his hand—properly his left one, Mike being no southpaw. The ball struck his hand with the result that it was injured. Therefore, his petition.

Mercury Golf Championship Play Planned

The annual Los Angeles Athletic Club golf championship, which will be played over the Riviera Country Club course next month, promises to draw the largest entry of any Mercury tournament, according to George Clark, the club's golf commissioner.

CHARLEY KEPPEN.

This event is again open to members of clubs affiliated with the L.A.A.C. and players are eligible to enter from the Hollywood Athletic Club, Pacific Coast Club, Surf and Sand Club, Santa Monica Athletic Club, and the Glen Arden Club of Glendale, as well as from the downtown organization.

Qualifying rounds for the tournament are scheduled for September 19, 20 and 21. Match play continues for four weeks thereafter, one round of play a week. Charley Keppen, who will direct the tournament, is planning a number of novel surprises for the contestants.

Bill Conner will defend the championship, which he won a year ago, defeating Frank C. Stevens, Jr., of Lakeside in the finals.

HALIBUT, BARRACUDA STILL TAKING BAIT

The wonderful halibut and barracuda fishing that has been had all summer at Santa Monica continued last week with big catches being made by anglers on the live-bait boats Thrush and Palisades, according to Capt. Cliff Morris.

Charter boat parties have been going out daily. Attaches from the United States Internal Revenue made a big haul from the ship W. K. C. A. Opperman returned with many fish of mixed variety. The Ranch Boys from KTM caught many big halibut and barracuda out on a trip aboard the ship Lark.

PAPKE-ORTEGA MEET IN CULVER CITY GO

Young Papke vs. Battling Ortega, six pounds at 135 pounds, is "Cy" Saens's main event at his Culver City Stadium for next Thuraday night. Young Papke has won his last six fights by a K.O.

Clayton Gouyd vs. Pedro Villa will go a scheduled six rounds in the semi. The specials event is between Johnny Previs and Jimmy Torres. Ramon Navarro vs. Peter Pena, tangle in the second spot and the curtain-raiser is between George Evans and Harry Fagnall.

SOUTHLAND STARS INVADE DEL MONTE NEXT MONTH

Cypress Point, Monterey Peninsula and Del Monte Courses Ready for Expected Entry of 500 Players

BY EDWARD LAWRENCE

Pebble Beach, where the Bobby Jonesless national amateur championship was played a year ago, again beckons Southern California's stalwart golfing sons northward—this time for the nineteenth annual California State championship, programmed for the week of September 1 to 7.

Jack F. Neville, who might appropriately be termed the "grand old man" of the State championship with five titles to his credit, winning in 1912, the first year of the tournament, and again in 1913, 1919, 1922 and 1929, defends his title against what promises to be a crack field of 500 golfers.

FAY COLEMAN

With the entry of A. Bullock Webster of Hollywood, six former champions are expected as 1930 competitors. They are Johnny J. McHugh, the San Francisco youngster who has broken through the "old guard" on three occasions to win the title; H. Chandler Egan, brilliant stylist and national amateur champion of many years ago; Dr. Paul M. Hunter, one of the Southland's foremost golfers, who is now making his home at Pebble Beach, and George "Jix" Von Elm of Rancho, former national amateur title-holder.

Southern California is again sending a splendid delegation of low-handicap men to Pebble Beach for the championship. Fay Coleman of the California Country Club, who won the Southern California amateur title at Midwick in June, is planning to enter and will go from there to play in the national amateur at the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia. Charles Seaver and his father, E. H. Seaver, and Danny Sangster of Potrero, runner-up in the 1930 State junior championship, have already sent in entries.

Among others who are expected to have their entries in by the 30th inst., last day when entries will be accepted, are W. L. "Bill" Jelliffe of Girard, Los Angeles city champion; Johnny J. Mescall of Fox Hills, Winston Fuller of Los Angeles, Russell (Bud) Thompson of Oakmont, Jack Gaines of Girard, Milo Marchetti of Rancho, Harry Eichelberger of Los Angeles, Phil Carter of Rancho and Dr. O. K. MManhart of Fox Hills.

The Pacific Northwest will again be abundantly represented at Pebble Beach. Entries have been received from two noted Washington golfers, Chuck Hunter and Bob Stein, while Oregon's brilliant embassy will include Don Moe and Dr. Oscar Willing. Walker Cup team-mates; Frank Dolp, Rudie Wilhelm and Malcom McNaughton.

Francis Brown of Honolulu was among the first to send in his entry.

With a record entry anticipated, play will be facilitated this year by using the Cypress Point links during the qualifying round. Qualifying for the championship, which is limited to golfers with handicaps from scratch to 7, will be played over both Cypress Point and Pebble Beach. The Dunes course at Monterey Peninsula Club and Del Monte links will be given over to the higher-handicap players.

The usual North vs. South team matches and other preliminary events are scheduled for the 30th and 31st inst. The Del Monte championship for women is scheduled for September 3 to 7.

MARATHON BOUT

The longest gloved fight under Queensberry rules took place when Andy Brown and Jack Burke went 110 rounds to a draw at the Olympic Club, New Orleans, on April 6, 1893. It consumed seven hours, nineteen minutes.

JONESES, SMITHS CONSISTENT

This Trait in Nationally Famous Stars Makes Them Winners Among Professionals and Amateurs, Says Metzger After Studying Records

BY SOL METZGER

Shakespeare admitted there was nothing in a name, but a rose would smell as sweet if it were called a skunk cabbage. But the Bard of Avon knew not golf. He was all wrong in so far as his opinion in this particular may be applied to the ancient Scottish pastime.

Take the situation today. Unless you are named Smith or Jones you don't amount to much with your woods and irons. In fact, the Smiths and Joneses have it decidedly their own way. There are few golf records worth recording. Holes in one mean little. Lowest medal rounds very little. The quality most admired, the virtue that has most often brought home the bacon in both match and medal play, is consistency. She's the jewel of the links.

And who, may we ask, are the most consistent golfers? Believe it or not such honors are held exclusively by the Smiths and Joneses. For the past two winters, to recall known facts, one Horton Smith piled up more winnings than any other professional making the circuit of cash events.

Ask anyone and he will inform you that a lad named Bobby Jones has won more national golf titles than ever before fell to the lot of man in this perplexing sport. That is consistency.

There is one other way of judging consistency. Even if you always pitch into the pond on the short water hole at home the fact remains that you are playing the hole consistently. No question can be raised to undermine this fact.

It is even more consistent to roll your rounds in the same figures. In the thirty-odd years during which the United States open championship has been played but one man, George Smith, professional at the Moorestown Field Club, Moorestown, N. J., has played consistent golf.

True, Smith has never won this title. But shucks, none of the winners nor any one of the thousands who have played have ever equalled his record of consistency. Take Smith at Winged Foot during the 1929 open, a hard par 72 course. Others led him at the end. But none matched his consistency. Smith went his four rounds in 77 strokes each for a total of 308.

Prior to his achievement for like scores on each of four rounds Cyril Walker won the national open at Oakland Hills in 1924 with three "4's and a 75. In this same event Mike Brady scored three 77's and a 75.

You have to go back further to match the efforts of Walker and Brady. It was in the 1916 open that Alex Campbell posted three 75's and a 79. The year before, W. Rautenbusch, a Chicago amateur, copped three 75's and a 76 at Midlothian.

No you can't beat the Smiths and Joneses for consistency in golf, what with George being the only entry to shoot consecutive four rounds with the same medal. Watch him in the future. Only been playing six years and already has won the Philadelphia open from a fast field. He's the sort that may come through at any time because he is the most consistent player ever.

"SLIPPERY" KELSEY SLIPS INTO HIGH ON PALOS VERDES LINKS

L. B. (Slippery) Kelsey appears to be slipping something over on the boys at the Palos Verdes Golf Club. Kelsey, who started out two years ago as a 24 handicap player, now boasts an 8 handicap, and is soon to be cut to a 6, continued his slippery tactics last week to the surprise of his friends when he slipped into the first flight of the Palos Verdes invitational and then won his flight. Jimmy Fiske, Palos Verdes professional, who has tutored Kelsey into the low handicap class, claims that Kelsey's victory bears out the fact that his nickname was well chosen. Every morning at 6 o'clock during the tournament, Kelsey slipped out to the tee for a "tete-a-tete" with Jimmy and then slipped out on the course to vanquish his opponents. "'Slippery' is right," says Jim, "one of these days he'll be slipping right into the championship class."

Spreckels Cup Tournament to Attract Stars

Once more low handicap amateurs in the vicinity of Los Angeles are planning to lift the famous A. B. Spreckels Cup when the seventh annual tournament is played over the Coronado Country Club course the week of September 18 to 23, next.

GIBSON DUNLAP

It is an interesting fact that the cup which is awarded each year, has been won by a Los Angeles golfer since 1924 when Willie I. Hunter scored a victory over the Coronado links. Allen Moser of Wilshire won the cup in 1925 and 1926, Fay Coleman of California in 1927, Jack Gaines of Girard in 1928, and Gibson Dunlap of Rancho in 1929.

BIGGEST MAGNET

The total gate receipts at all of Jack Dempsey's fights, including the bout with Jess Willard, amounted to approximately $10,000,000.

OPPOSE HEADGEAR

Old-time ring authorities maintain that the use of a headgear in training is harmful to boxers, causing them to become careless of blows to the head.

PASADENA PLAY ON THIS WEEK

Golfers Qualify Today and Tomorrow for Tourney

DAVE MARTIN.

Qualifying play for the second annual Pasadena city golf championship, which started yesterday, continues today and tomorrow over the city's municipal links at Brookside Park.

The qualifying round is eighteen holes, with prizes offered for low net and low gross. There will be two rounds of match play on Tuesday and one round on each successive day until the finals on Friday.

Dave Martin won the first championship a year ago, but is not expected to defend the title. A large number of low handicap stars have entered, however, and rivalry for place in the championship flight of thirty-two is expected to be keen.

Gordon Norton of the Girard Golf and Country Club led yesterday's low scorers with a 73, one over par figures. Bill Hart, junior star of the Flintridge Country Club, shot a 76 and Bill Crowell of Pasadena a 77. H. Goodwin of Chevy Chase registered an 81.

Fay Coleman, Southern California amateur champion, is planning to qualify tomorrow, but will not be able to play through. A majority of the low-handicap players have secured starting times for tomorrow.

NEW ZEALANDER STARS AT DEL MONTE

DEL MONTE, Aug. 2. (AP)—H. D. Dale of New Zealand, surprised the gallery at Del Monte today by defeating Lloyd Stroud, medalist and Bakersfield star, in the opening match play round of the annual Del Monte midsummer golf tournament.

The match went to the twenty-third hole before the favorite was defeated. Yesterday Stroud carded 76 for medal honors, against a mediocre 88 for Dale.

E. E. D. Stokes, Reno, another favorite, lost to Horace Guitiard of Pebble Beach, 5 and 4.

Young Dalton Henderson of San Francisco defeated Dr. D. R. Powell, Stockton, 1 up.

Other results: Frank J. Casey, Sacramento, defeated R. A. Lost, New York City, 7 and 6.

TILDEN PUTS HELEN AT TOP

(8) Betty Nuthall, England.
(9) Joan Ridley, England.
(10) Phyllis Mudford, England.

There is no need to say more than Helen Wills Moody is champion of France, of England or of the world to justify her position at once, so will pass on.

Between Miss Aussem, Miss Ryan, Mrs. Watson and even Miss Jacobs there is not much to choose or record, but what little there is seems to favor Miss Aussem. An unfortunate accident forced Miss Aussem's default at 4-all in the final set against Miss Ryan at a time when it was anyone's match in the semi-finals at Wimbledon.

BEAT MISS JACOBS

The previous day Miss Aussem had crushed Miss Jacobs, 6-1, 6-2. Miss Aussem beat Miss Ryan decisively at Paris in the French championship, taking precedence over Miss Ryan's two victories on the Riviera. Miss Aussem had two victories over Mme. Matthieu in the south of France. So I am giving Miss Aussem second place, closely followed by Miss Ryan, who as finalist at Wimbledon, almost deserves bracketing with her.

Mrs. Holcroft-Watson, whose unfortunate illness kept her out of Wimbledon, might have been higher had she been able to play. Mrs. Watson lost to Miss Jacobs in Paris, but beat her in the Wightman Cup and led Helen Wills Moody, 5-0, in the first set of their Wightman Cup match. On this great performance the best made against Mrs. Moody in three years, I give Mrs. Watson fourth place. Closely following her and clearly deserving it, comes Miss Jacobs, who was finalist in the French championship. Miss Jacobs beat Mlle. Payot and Senorita Alvarez in Paris and Miss Fry in the Wightman Cup, but was crushed by Miss Aussem at Wimbledon.

Mme. Simone Matthieu of France, semifinalist at Wimbledon, has a brilliant performance there in beating Eileen Bennett and Joan Ridley and playing a fine match against Helen Wills Moody. At Paris she lost to Senorita Alvarez in a close match, but her play at Wimbledon, when Miss Alvarez was unable to play owing to illness, must give the French star the call over the Spanish girl.

Certainly Miss Alvarez must follow Mme. Matthieu, for she has a record that is almost equal. Only her unfortunate illness that kept her out of Wimbledon keeps her so low in the list. Betty Nuthall, after a bad early season, reached the last eight at Wimbledon and took a set from Miss Ryan. On this performance I am giving her the eighth position.

For much the same reason, reaching the Wimbledon last eight, I include Joan Ridley and the little star, Miss Mudford. Miss Ridley beat Sarah Palfrey on her way, while Miss Mudford had a good match with Mrs. Moody. In Paris Miss Mudford carried Mrs. Moody to her closest score, so I feel she must go in the charmed circle.

MRS. MALLORY ILL

One finds many names that one expects missing from the list. Eileen Bennett has done little this year. Mrs. Mallory has been ill and is not playing. Edith Cross and Sarah Palfrey did not quite show enough to get in. Baroness Von Tesnicik of Germany has been ill and out of the game for some time. Joan Fry played little except the Wightman Cup. It has not been a great year in women's tennis. Helen Wills Moody has overshadowed the field even more than in the past.

Dolf Meuhleisen Plays Elbert Lewis for Los Angeles County Court Title Tod

MRS. BARTOSH SEEKS LAURELS

Faces Elizabeth Deike in Titular Contest

Annual Tennis Tournament Draws to Close

Mixed Doubles Match to be Played Tomorrow

Dolf Muelheisen of San Diego and Elbert Lewis of Los Angeles will battle it out today on the courts of the Palomar Tennis Club, with the Los Angeles county men's singles championship at stake. Both went into the finals yesterday by virtue of hard-fought three-set struggles. The finale is billed for best three sets out of five.

Lewis disposed of Frank Westsmith, former U.C.L.A. star, coming from behind to win, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2. Muelheisen conquered Phil Hanna, surprise victor over Cliff Robbins, 6-4, 2-6, 6-0.

Mrs. Esther Bartosh and Elisabeth Deike won their way into the final round of the women's singles, Mrs. Bartosh winning from Dorothy Robinson, 6-1, 6-4, while Miss Deike defeated Violet Doeg, 6-4, 6-1.

LOTS OF SWEEPSTAKES

There are more sweepstakes in connection with the English Derby at Epsom Downs than with any other race. The two largest of these are the Calcutta and the London Stock Exchange sweepstakes.

COLORED HELMETS

Polo players on Long Island, N. Y., have adopted colored helmets in order that each member of the team may be identified. Each No. 1 player wears a green helmet, each No. 2 a blue, each No. 3 a white one, and each back a red one.

L. A. TIMES GAME
Ayrshire Lassie
(Copied from the Roseville Citizen.)

Many young students of checkers have accepted the games played by the late Sam Gonotsky as models. Authorities are now agreed that up until the time of his regretted passing Sam Gonotsky was the ablest American exponent of finished match and tournament play. The following game was played a few years ago at the Wells Memorial Checker Club, Boston, against Saul Weslow, champion of New England, in the semifinal round of the tournament.

| Black—Gonotsky. | | White—Weslow. | |

| 6-10 | 1- 6 | 10-15 | 3-12 |
| 29-25-b | 30-26-e | 17- 1 | Drawn. |
| 10-15 | 4- 8 | 19-24 | |
| 25-22 | 22-17 | 28-19 | |

a—Gonotsky's favorite Ayrshire Lassie attack. Before he adopted it, it was not employed extensively in contests of importance.

b—24-19 is the move that nearly all the books emphasize.

c—As a general thing an exchange like this is not to be recommended. However, in this particular situation it was White's only resource to escape a troublesome formation.

e—31-27 appears like a reasonable move, but it practically loses. After 31-27, go 6-9, 23-18, 14-23, 27-18, 12-16, 19-12, 10-14, and White's road to the draw is not an easy one.

f—In a further corner of the hall Heffner, Bradford, Morrall, Hanson and Townsend were analyzing the position, yet strange to state none of them noticed this saving maneuver. All other sacrifices lose. Gonotsky, too, was much surprised at White's unusual way of releasing his pieces.

KID MEXICO SIGNS FOR BUD BAKER BOUT

A fight that has been brewing for several months around the harbor takes place Wednesday night at Wilmington when Kid Mexico, veteran middleweight, and Bud Baker, Long Beach's fighting speed cop, are brought together for a ten-rounder.

Although Baker won his last five fights, three via the kayo route, Mexico's better punching and caginess are expected to be too much for the cop.

Ferris Brown and Wally Fraser, heavies, flash in the six-round semifinal. Jimmy Peterson meets Al Smith in the six-round special. The fours show Bob Tarry vs. Ide Parker and Ventura De La Cruz and Kid Senteno.

EXCELLENT FISHING OFF HERMOSA BEACH

Fishing reports from Capt. J. M. Anderson, skipper of the big Olympic fishing barge at Hermosa Beach, tell of excellent sculpin, bass and rock cod angling on the big pleasure vessel, with bonita and mackerel also taking lots of bait.

Live-bait boat fishermen report record catches of sea trout being made with the usual heavy run of barracuda, halibut and bass continuing.

Continuous simultaneouses in the evening. The committee on arrangements consists of R. P. Dow, R. A. Frost, M. C. Rolls and Charles H. Whipple. Mr. Dow writes that married men can park friend wife on the beach in the afternoon, and in the dance hall during the evening. But it would improve the "picture" to have as many ladies as possible around the chess tables. Players might do well to bring their own sets. As usual, no admission charge.

Adjudication of one unfinished game gave Beverly Hills a victory in its recent match with Caltech, 2½-1½. Last week Beverly Hills played another match, winning from the Glendale Chess Club, 7½-1½.

Henry MacMahon, secretary and co-founder (with Richard Schayer and the writer) of the Beverly Hills club, announces the starting of a big championship tourney open to all major class players in this southern part of the State, upon payment of $5 entrance fee and $5 quarterly dues to the club. They plan to move into permanent quarters next month.

In the Los Angeles Public Library, on the reference shelves of the "stacks" in the music and art department, are twenty-six volumes of close to 300 pages each, reproduced from typewritten copy by J. W. DeArman, Pasadena, 1901 to 1908; a wonderful digest of chess games. Without exception N was used for Knight. (In 1921 the writer started a column in the Los Angeles Evening Express and adopted N for Knight, unconscious at the time of any previous use of same.) For twenty-five years DeArman studied and accumulated a large library and compiled many manuscripts, disposed of same, and then later felt the urge and recommended collecting, and started publishing the works mentioned above, one of the most painstaking compilations of games ever produced. DeArman passed away several years ago.

Poland won the big team tourney of the International Chess Federation at Hamburg with a lead of 1½ points over Hungary, winner in previous years at London and the Hague. Germany finished third. The United States team wound up in sixth place. The best individual score was made by A. Rubinstein, Polish champion, with 15½ points out of 17. Next came Flohr of Czecho-Slovakia, 14½, and Kashdan of United States, 14. Miss Vera Menchik of Czecho-Slovakia won the woman's world championship, retaining her title. Mrs. Paul Wolf-Kalmar of Austria was second.

HELEN JACOBS RETURNS TO BERKELEY CLASSES

BERKELEY, Aug. 2. (Exclusive)—Coach Ray Grismer today enjoyed renewed confidence in another big tennis season for the University of California in 1931, when it was announced that Helen Jacobs will return to school this month as a junior to continue her academic work.

Although Miss Jacobs will not actively compete for the university, since there is no well-organized competition for women on a basis similar to that for the men, the return of this internationally famous player will do much to stimulate tennis interest, it is felt.

Miss Jacobs comes back at a time when tennis fans recall the exhibitions of another international player, Helen Wills Moody. The latter star was an art student while an undergraduate at the university.

With her return to college, Miss Jacobs finds it necessary to give up her plans to team with the English star, Betty Nuthall, in pursuit of the national women's doubles championship.

Grismer looks to a big season in 1931, despite the loss of the sterling San Diego pair, Dolf Meuhleisen and Robert Muench, recent winners of the intercollegiate doubles championship.

Captain-elect Allen Blade, Capt. Russ Galloway of the freshmen, and Ben Neiden, also of this year's freshman team, in addition to the return of Miss Jacobs, all give Grismer an optimistic outlook for next season.

Big Six

(By the Associated Press)

Individually and collectively, the Big Six had a very bad day at bat yesterday, as five of them took part in two games apiece. Al Simmons got through the afternoon with the least trouble. He made three hits, one a home run, in nine times at bat and lost only one point.

Bill Terry and Babe Ruth dropped two points each, the former with one hit in five tries and Ruth with his thirty-ninth homer and one other hit in seven times up. Chuck Klein held his loss to three points, dropping to .409, as he made two hits in eight attempts. Frank O'Doul slipped down six with one wallop in eight times up, while Lou Gehrig suffered a seven-point loss with one out of nine.

O'Doul fell from the .400 class to .395, barely ahead of Terry, while Gehrig held a four-point margin over Simmons.

The standings:

| | G. | A.B. | R. | H. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Klein, Phillies | 98 | 411 | 107 | 168 | .409 |
| O'Doul, Phillies | 93 | 390 | 99 | 150 | .385 |
| Terry, Giants | 101 | 411 | 98 | 162 | .394 |
| Gehrig, Yankees | 102 | 393 | 101 | 152 | .386 |
| Simmons, Athl. | 99 | 419 | 101 | 157 | .375 |
| Ruth, Yankees | 98 | 347 | 119 | 126 | .363 |

All golf courses in Steubenville, O., are to be closed on Sundays due to the State blue laws.

Olympic Club Selects Team

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2. (AP)—The San Francisco Olympic Club, winner of the 1929 national A.A.U. track-and-field championships, will defend its title at Pittsburgh, this year with a picked team of seventeen men.

Coach Charley Hunter said Harlow Rothert, former Stanford weight star, would compete in the decathlon in addition to the shotput and discus events. The events will be held the 22nd, 23rd and 25th insts.

HELEN SPLITS TWO SETS WITH ALAN HERRINGTO

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2. # free wheeling makes THE PRESIDENT EIGHT more than ever champion of the world*

OVERNIGHT, the marvel of Free Wheeling with positive gear control has captured motoring America. Studebaker's initiative in developing and perfecting this exclusive feature, manufactured under Studebaker patents, is the subject of world-wide compliment.

Yet, the limelight of motordom's approval is no new experience for Studebaker.

Look back to July 21—August 9, 1928. You find the President Eight traveling 30,000 miles in 26,326 minutes—a feat that established 5 world and 18 international records; that made The President undisputed champion of the world.*

That accomplishment still stands unmatched and unchallenged. Yet today's brilliant new President Eight, offering you Free Wheeling with positive gear control, is a larger, more powerful, more beautiful edition of this World Champion car. It gives you world championship stamina and speed —plus Free Wheeling!

The benefits of free wheeling are manifold—

You shift from high to second, back and forth, at 40—50 miles an hour, and never touch the clutch. You need use the clutch only to start or back up.

The braking power of your engine is available as readily as in conventional cars.

For the first time in a motor car you get the full benefit of momentum automatically. When your car has gone 10,000 miles your engine has "worked" only 8,000 miles.

You save 12 per cent on gasoline, 20 per cent on oil—even more in heavy traffic.

Strains on engine, transmission and axle are lessened. Tires wear longer.

There is nothing new to learn—Free Wheeling with positive gear control is simplicity itself. You drive just as you do in a conventional car.

Free Wheeling is an epochal contribution to motoring—a brilliant milestone in Studebaker's 78 years of manufacturing progress.

Arrange today to drive the President a World Champion seasoned Eight, with Free Wheeling. We promise you the thrill of your life.

How the PRESIDENT EIGHT became *World Champion

Between July 21 and August 9, 1928, four Studebaker President Eights (strictly stock cars) each traveled 30,000 miles on the Atlantic City one and one-half mile board track. Each one maintained better than mile-a-minute average speed. Nothing else on earth had ever traveled so far so fast.

The records established were:

| | Miles Distance | Total Elapsed Minutes | Miles Per Hour |
|---|---|---|---|
| Roadster No. 1... | 30,000 | 26,326 | 68.4 |
| Roadster No. 2... | 30,000 | 26,329 | 68.3 |
| Sedan No. 1..... | 30,000 | 28,057 | 64.15 |
| Sedan No. 2..... | 30,000 | 28,128 | 63.99 |

The fastest thousand miles of each roadster was the last. Think of it. After 29,000 miles one President traveled 1,000 miles at 71.67 and the other at 69.65 miles per hour!

'CHUTES TO BE GIVEN TRIALS

Federal Government Will Test "Life Belts"

Approval Designed to Give Public Confidence

Condition Guaranteed by Packing Regulations

BY FRANK J. CARMODY

Standards of design, strength, performance, and maintenance which apply to parachutes used by the United States Army and Navy air services will prevail henceforth in the realm of commercial aeronautics. As a result of the promulgation of regulations governing parachutes by the United States Department of Commerce, the novice who in the future may enroll in the Caterpillar Club may make his jump with the certainty that little will be found amiss on the way back to earth and safety.

With the extension of its jurisdiction to parachutes, the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce now covers just about every aspect of the flying in which the public will indulge. Airmen, airports, airways, airplanes, and air lines all are garbed in its concept of what constitutes protection for the public.

NOT COMPULSORY

The mere fact that the government has stepped into the parachute picture does not mean that civilian passengers will wear parachutes henceforth. Nothing of the kind is meant. One may ride airplanes from one end of the country to the other day in and day out without ever seeing a parachute. The device is by no means compulsory equipment in the sense that life belts must be provided for all ship passengers. The chances that this ever will be the case grow more remote daily, in the opinion of most unbiased observers.

On the contrary, they merely mean in case one ever is given a parachute, he may be certain that it has been throughly tested for design, for strength, for comfort, for rate of descent, and that it has been packed in a good condition by a packer or rigger who knows his business.

Paradoxically, there is nothing compulsory and yet everything compulsory about the new regulations. The government does not say to the parachute maker that he must bring his creation in for test and approval as to design and the like. It merely points out that it is willing to test and approve parachutes if the manufacturer wants it done. It rather feels that he will take advantage of the offer since potential customers of his company will look first for the Federal o.k. on the 'chute. The policy is the same that has been followed to a certain extent with regard to 'planes, pilots, air schools and the like. As between the licensed and approved and the unlicensed and unapproved, the public prefers the former combination.

FASTEST SPEED

From the specifications and requirements set forth in the regulations, the potential Caterpillarist can get an excellent idea of what he can expect in the way of performance from a parachute, should he ever have to use one.

For instance, he might be interested in how fast he would descend. The answer is at a rate of fourteen miles an hour or 21 feet per second. That is the fastest possible rate of descent. A 'chute that exceeds this maximum will not get the Federal o.k. If fourteen miles an hour strikes the average layman as being fairly fast, he may find comfort in the fact that it is 104 miles an hour slower than if he made the same drop without a parachute. Parachute studies by the military services show that the terminal velocity of a falling body is 118 miles an hour.

Several years ago, the Army Air Corps made an interesting experiment in this connection using a fairly simple photographic set-up.

MIGHT GO SLOWER

On a still day, and weighing less than the 170 pounds which is the weight of the test dummy and the jumper who makes the live-drop tests, one probably would descend at a still slower pace, at a rate of 16 to 18 feet per second, depending upon conditions.

Probably everyone is concerned with the speed with which his parachute will open after he has jumped. Until the 'chute has opened, a first jump invariably is designed to cause consternation. The regulations assure that the interval between the jump and the opening of the device shall be no longer than three seconds. This provides that there shall be no twists in the shroud lines which would delay the opening.

INSURANCE INSPECTION FEES CUT

Saving as High as $500 Effected by New Ruling on Airplane Policies

Insurance inspection fees for aircraft which formerly amounted to anywhere from $50 to $500 a machine are now completely done away with under a recent ruling of the Aero Engineering and Advisory Service, Inc., the leading concern of its kind in the national aviation field.

Announcement to this effect has just been made by Rule & Sons, Inc., Los Angeles, Pacific Coast representatives of the Aero Service. The latter institution is an adjunct of Barber & Baldwin, Inc., New York, aviation underwriters for the Aero Insurance and the Aero Indemnity companies of New York, a group of organizations which pioneered aviation insurance in the United States.

The announcement is considered of vital interest to operators maintaining air transport lines, flying schools or passenger hopping businesses, as they may now call upon a special resident aeronautical engineer maintained by the Aero Service in California to constantly check the airworthiness of their ships and thus keep them at the highest point of efficiency and safety. Such service in the past has cost air lines many thousands of dollars annually.

The service is also free and available to owners desiring to insure aircraft of an experimental type which may not have been awarded approved-type certificates by the Department of Commerce.

Motor Busses Will Be Used in Road Tests

Tests of the impact of motor busses on modern highway surfaces will be initiated early next month by the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the Society of Automotive Engineers and the Rubber Manufacturers' Association. The War Department has made available for the tests a stretch of concrete paving at the Aberdeen proving grounds, Aberdeen, Md., and a manufacturer has lent a large bus of interurban type which will be operated at speeds up to fifty or sixty miles an hour. It is expected that the tests will continue for about two months.

Apparatus developed in connection with the bureau's previous co-operative studies of motor-truck impact will be used to determine the magnitude of the impacts produced by large, heavily loaded busses equipped with various types and sizes of tires. The tires for the tests are to be furnished by the tire manufacturers and include both high-pressure and balloon types of the latest designs.

The studies of the impacts of bus traffic are the latest of a series of impact investigations the bureau has been making for the last ten or eleven years. The earliest studies dealt with the destructive effect on pavements of heavily loaded motor trucks, especially those with poor tire equipment. These tests demonstrated in a striking manner the protection afforded to pavements by the pneumatic tire and by the six-wheel vehicle, both of which are widely used today.

MANY ACRES ADDED TO PARK REGION

Approximately 14,144 acres of land were added to the Rocky Mountain National Park, Colorado, by proclamation of President Hoover upon recommendation of the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture. Authority for the addition of the land was contained in the Act of Congress approved June 21. The new addition adds to the park the headwaters of the Colorado in the vicinity of the Never Summer Mountains, picturesquely so-called by the Indians because of the everlasting snows that spatter their summits. This is a magnificently scenic area.

DETOUR NECESSARY

A detour is necessary on the Salinas-Santa Cruz highway, via Blanco and the Elkhorn road, advises the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

SKY LINE DRIVE CLOSED

The Corona Sky Line Drive is closed due to fire hazard and will remain so until fall, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

CHRYSLER PRICES LOWERED

The Greer Robbins Company, local Chrysler distributors, announce price reductions on four models of the Seventy line. The new lowered prices are already in effect and are made possible by increased sales resulting from the new eights recently introduced, it is announced.

The drop is from $100 to $150.

These are the old and new prices on the four models affected by the reduction:

| | Old Prices | New Prices | Reductions |
|---|---|---|---|
| Royal sedan | $1445 | $1295 | $150 |
| Royal coupe | 1395 | 1245 | 150 |
| Brougham | 1345 | 1245 | 100 |
| Business coupe | 1345 | 1245 | 100 |

No change in prices were made on the convertible coupe listing at $1545, the roadster at $1345 or the phaeton at $1295, all f.o.b. factory.

All "70" models are now powered with the previous "77" six-cylinder engine developing ninety-three horsepower, with a bore of three and three-eighths inches and a stroke of five inches, having a displacement of 268.4 cubic inches.

Thomas Goes to Akron Plant

The Los Angeles factory of Goodyear, the largest of Goodyear's plants outside of Akron, is proving to be the training ground for Goodyear's production executives. E. J. Thomas, who has occupied the post of plant superintendent since May, 1928, left here Friday to become assistant to the factory manager at Akron.

Exhaust Clue to Trouble

There is a clew to what is wrong with the car in the color of the smoke that issues from the exhaust pipe. If it is black, the meaning is too much gasoline. Blue or white smoke indicates an excess of oil in the engine. If the tint of the exhaust emission is gray, it is likely produced by a combination of too much oil and too much gasoline.

CONSTRUCTION UNDER WAY

Huntington Drive is under construction between Los Robles and Granada avenues in San Marino.

Frank T. Price Made Head of Rubber Club

The members of the recently organized Rubber Club, all prominent Southern California tire distributors, have elected Frank T. Price president.

The Rubber Club is an outgrowth of the code of ethics and its main duty will be to serve as a regulator in the local tire field. Practically every prominent tire firm is represented.

Other officers include: J. W. Lauchlan of Goodrich Silvertown Inc., first vice-president; P. L. Ryan of Ryan & Mosher, Ltd., second vice-president; C. A. Turney of Wynn's Tire and Rubber Company, Inc., secretary; L. R. Clawson of Motor Tires, Inc., treasurer; N. Giulli of Guasti-Guilli, Inc., assistant secretary.

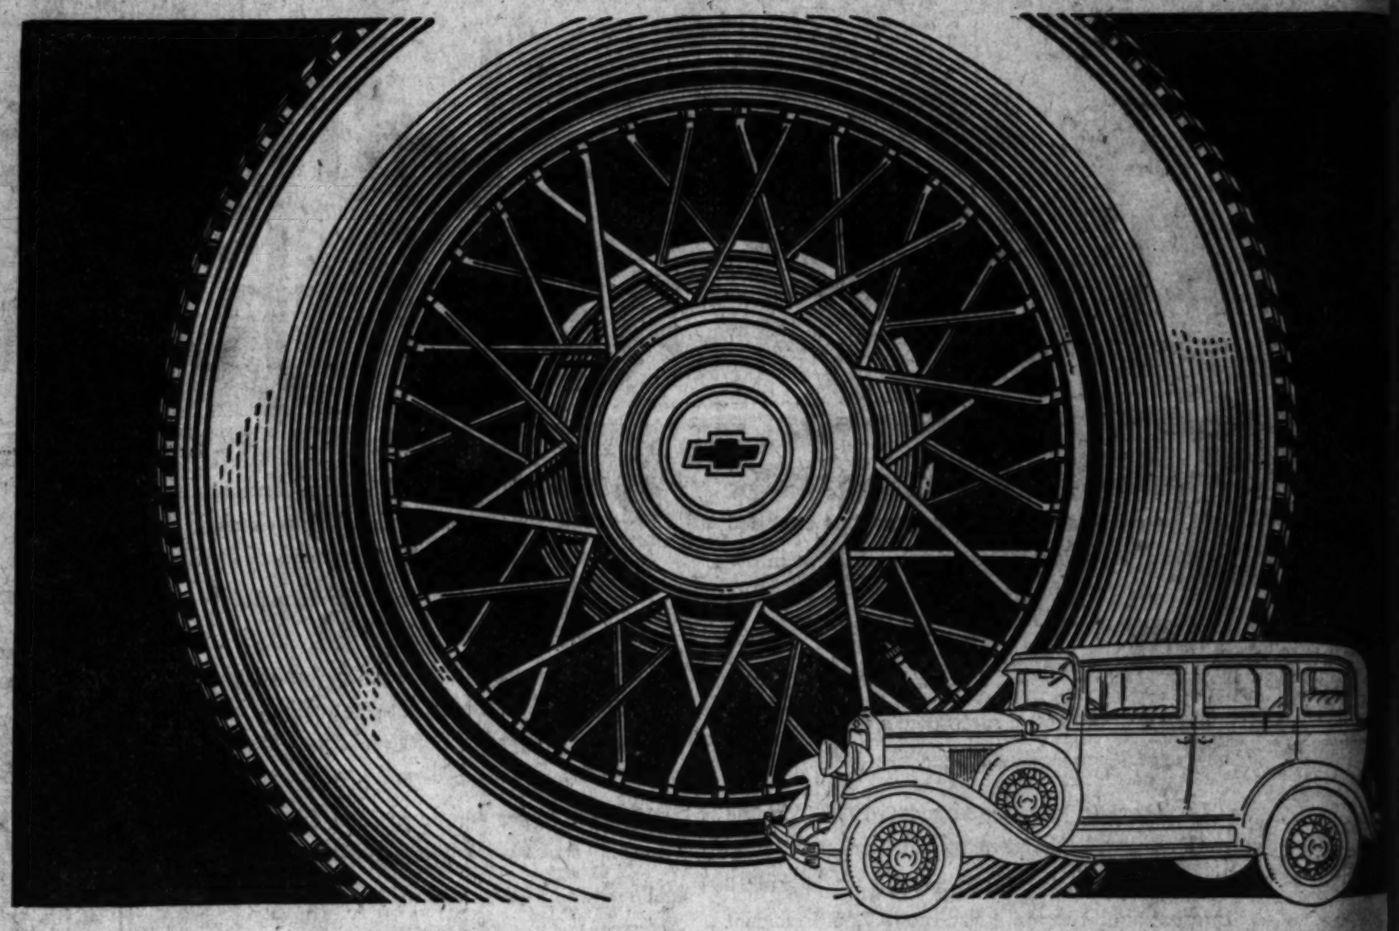
CHEVROLET ANNOUNCES
DE LUXE WIRE WHEELS
at no extra cost



Chevrolet again adds extra value to the Chevrolet Six! Those who prefer may now have any Chevrolet passenger model equipped with beautiful de luxe wire wheels—at no additional cost!

Designed especially for Chevrolet, these wheels incorporate many important features that have won favor on cars much higher in price. And they give an added touch of individuality to a car already famous for its stylish, modern beauty.

The ornamental hub caps are unusually large, and are finished in sparkling chromium plate. The bolts that hold the wheel in place are located inside the hub—thus assuring a smarter, more clean-cut appearance. The spokes are short and sturdy—the wheel construction is extremely rugged. Moreover, this Chevrolet wheel has an unusually large number of spokes—a feature that assures extra strength and durability.

A variety of attractive new colors

In addition to this de luxe wire wheel equipment, Chevrolet now makes available a wide choice of attractive new color combinations on all models—colors that are rich, distinctive and pleasing to every taste.

You are invited to come in—NOW—and attend the first showing of six-cylinder Chevrolet models with these striking new colors and wire wheels.

Buyer Has Option of Disc Type

Wire Wheels Enhance Appearance

THE Chevrolet Motor Company announced last week that hereafter wire or disc wheels are now optional equipment, without extra cost, on the passenger car line of the new six.

"Disc wheels were formerly standard equipment on all cars of the line except sport models," according to W. M. Packer, zone manager here for Chevrolet. During the latter part of July all cars were c with wire wheels, while disc wheels are still being built to accommodate those purchasers who prefer them.

The new wire wheel equipment is finished in a wide variety of colors to harmonize with the body trim of nine different body models. The option of wire or disc wheels went into effect Friday.

HARLEQUIN SALAD

½ cup Globe "A1" Salad Macaroni
1 shredded raw carrot
1 shredded raw beet
½ cup shredded raw spinach
2 tablespoons French salad dressing
1 teaspoon grated onion
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced
Mayonnaise and paprika

COOK THE MACARONI in plenty of boiling salted water for 15 minutes, drain, cover with cold water twice and drain thoroughly each time, then chill until time to prepare the salad. Season the French dressing well with salt, pepper and the grated onion, then add it with the diced eggs to the macaroni and mix well. Spread lightly on lettuce leaves and place a small heap of each of the three shredded vegetables upon each serving. Top with mayonnaise and a dash of paprika.

ABOUT OURSELVES

By Alma Whitaker

ONE of these pragmatical character-reading psychologists who does a little fortune telling on the side has made a valuable discovery about human vanities.

It seems that about the cruelest insult one can put upon a woman, any woman, is to tell her she has never suffered and that she is not nervous.

It seems that all women like to be thought to have suffered. They wish to be considered "highly strung," very sensitive, and preciously nervous. Even the husky, hard-boiled damsel who hilarously denies the accusation is apt tenderly to confide later that she valiantly disguises her feelings, but actually, oh, how she has suffered!

Men, on the other hand, have a widespread weakness for being accused of deviltry. It seems one has only to gaze earnestly at the best of good men and express a suspicion that he has been a devil of a fellow in his day, for him to know you for a person of remarkable insight.

Men, too, like to be thought to have struggled sumptuously for anything that may be theirs. Struggle, fine masculine struggle, against subtle but powerful opposition. They prefer to be recognized as wresting boons from Fate. Nothing can wound gentlemanly sensibilities more than to insinuate that luck had anything to do with what are so obviously the rewards of prowess.

When, for instance, a triumph has ensued on the golf course, a nice wish-to-be-thought-modest winner will remark deprecatingly that "Oh, well, I got the breaks." But all the while he yearns to be contradicted, and he knows just what to think about the loser who agrees with him.

ITCHY SCALP

... a forerunner of baldness

AN itching scalp means that the baldness producing germ is at work—gradually and painlessly leading you to complete hair-loss. You must rid your scalp of this germ to prevent baldness and re-grow the hair which you have already lost.

To insure the complete extermination of this baldness producing germ within the shortest possible time, consult The Thomas', World's Leading Hair and Scalp Specialists. Do not gamble with general cure-all remedies which merely dissolve surface dandruff and spread the germs over a wider surface.

The 16-year proved Thomas' treatment goes to the source of YOUR own specific trouble. It is the most perfect method known to modern science for stopping falling hair, eliminating the baldness producing germ and dandruff, and growing hair on the thin and bald spots.

YOU, too, can have a good head of hair. Call at the nearest Thomas' office today for a free scalp examination, and learn what this reliable treatment is doing for others and what it can do for YOU.

VA. 2376 TU. 2875

I have a suspicion that there is a large soupcon of truth about us women liking to be thought to have suffered. Listen attentively when any group of women become confidential . . . it is the suffering moments of life we confess with romantic detail. Or accuse any woman of being fortunate, all life being a bed of roses for her, and watch the sudden frown, hark unto the expostulatory evidence to the contrary. How dare one suppose she has not had her full dark share of human suffering? I mean if it is only their eighteen servants, or their poor relations, or an in-law or two, the recital reeks of human sorrow.

In spite of the fact that hyper-sensitive people are most annoying, few of us reach those gallant heights where we can smilingly confess that it's pretty hard to hurt us. For instance, it has been some years since anyone could hurt my feelings, unless it was some one I dearly loved, but even as I write, it seems a hateful confession. It is not quite ladylike to be insensitive. If I were a nice womanly woman I should be hurt at least a couple of times a week.

My psychologist also declares that all men like to be thought a bit psychic. This, however, isn't peculiar to masculinity. Nay, nay. "Good gracious, you have almost supernatural insight" stirs the stodgiest of us to visions of power. It gives us an almost celestial association. Even if, sometimes, it is merely expressed in "You can't fool me."

Another sure-fire way to make a hit with either sex, but especially with men, is to whisper archly "I dreamed about you last night." Right there ardent curiosity is aroused and the dreamee preens with a new importance. For dreams are of the subconscious, and it is simply marvelous to be haunting someone's subconscious mind and stalking through their sleep. Wasn't it Booth Tarkington who sensed this irresistible trap . . . I think there was a flapper heroine of his who snatched all the other girls beaux away from them by just whispering "I dreamed of you last night." To make it more devastatingly provocative, decline firmly to divulge the theme of your dream . . .

Gentlemen who have not made any peculiar commercial success like to be thought indifferent to vulgar money. They just can't stoop to the common things that successful men have deigned to. "If that sort of thing is necessary in business," they remark scornfully, "I would rather be poor." If the boss had any sense he would realize the peculiar ability of our hero without having it thrust under his nose as certain rivals in the office have the cruit to do. And one knows that here is a suffering gentleman who would scorn to push himself forward, or compete in a crude realm for unworthy honors.

On the other hand, the successful man is proud of his go-gettishness. "I always get what I go after," is a popular phrase. But with either type it is safe to say: "You are such a strong character."

In a general way, however, ladies don't particularly like being called "strong characters" . . . unless they are running for office. Any such inference makes them gaze at one suspiciously to make sure no insult was intended. It is much safer to tell any and all kinds of females that they are "such a womanly woman." I recall during our alarming suffrage campaign, we always defended our more strong-minded champion leaders by declaring "Oh, but really, if you only knew her, she is such a womanly woman." No one wanted to be thought a womanly woman more than Chrystabel Pankhurst, for instance.

For that matter, even our lady office-candidates want it to be clearly understood that they are only strong-minded in a strictly nice feminine way. Even, I mean, when they preen if someone says "My dear, you have almost a masculine outlook." One must, however, say this, with a certain arch-surprise . . . fancy a womanly woman like you being able to grasp the masculine point of view so marvelously, as it were.

For that matter, no one wishes to seem more sumptuously masculine than the type known as a "ladies' man." Just as no one is more superbly feminine than the type known as a "man's woman." Yet neither type gets on with its own sex very well . . . which isn't quite reasonable.

Your "ladies' man" oozes unctuous masculinity, and your "man's woman" oozes ostentatious femininity. Their charms are so limited. Some men are flattered to be called "ladies' men" . . . while others rage at it as a dire insult. The "man's woman," however, is invariably proud of the fact and scorns her own sex. There were many more of her in the gay 'nineties than today . . . even, I mean, if so many of the moderns have boyish figures. Still, you can flatter a "woman's woman" by accusing her of being a "man's woman." It is usually safer to flatter a man by calling him a "man's man" . . . no matter how sissy he is. He takes the "ladies' man" idea for granted, as something patently obvious.

The Sea

The breath of a monster,
The surf is its gills,
It breathes 'gainst the sands,
And snaps as it spills.

The sea is a reptile
Whose foam circled fangs
Would ravenous strike
Where the pent-up land hangs.

The sea is a tireless
Worker in clay,
Builder and wrecker
Day after day.

The hard-pressed land battles
To keep to the last
What eons have salvaged,
For eons held fast.

The sea is a robber,
Ruthless and bold,
In the end it will conquer,
And rule all as of old.

CARE OF THE BODY

The Afternoon Nap

The neurotic is among us by the millions. The high nervous tension, symbolic of our strenuousness of living, is more the rule than the exception. The term "nervous" is one readily applicable to nine patients out of ten. The raw edges of our nervous systems are being constantly stirred by a multitude of factors. Yet all this is, to a considerable extent, avoidable and unnecessary.

Wherein lies the cure? What are the remedies?

Seek not in pills and potions. Look not at other causes but in yourself. Learn to relax. Learn to disvaluate. Learn to disincorporate yourself from all those elements which frazzle the nerves and prey upon your strength and vitality.

Of all the measures suitable to combat tired, taut, frazzled nerves, sleep is the most effective. In sleep, relaxation is perfect. During sleep the strain is nil. The blissful unconsciousness of sleep carries with it the rejuvenating forces of limitless fountains of health.

It is the common belief that sleep is only for the nighttime. Sleep during daylight hours is generally understood to be for infants and children only. Nothing could be further from genuine physiological truths.

The average woman, and man also, whose nervous system is raw-edged and depleted, will find the afternoon nap one of the finest tonic medicines that nature can furnish. The average woman can surely spare an hour or two from the pressure of her household duties to secure the calm and comfort of an hour or two of perfect relaxation in the form of sleep.

In our present state of "universal nerves," the afternoon nap ought to become a national institution just as it is in the countries of warmer climates.

The Result of a Urine Test

Azusa, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

If a twenty-four-hour specimen of urine examined by a chemical laboratory proves all right, could pus in the bladder come from the kidneys?

I also have occasional pains in the side.

Could bladder trouble come from the ovaries?

What treatment will help?

I am forty years old.

I shall appreciate any advice you give me.

A READER.

There is an axiom that "where there is smoke there is fire." On the other hand, I have seen smoke where there is no fire.

It is a popular impression that where there is pus there is disease. On the other hand, I have seen pus discharge without disease which may come as a normal physiological process or as a temporary slight inflammation.

The presence of pus in the urine is not necessarily a sign of bladder or kidney disease—yet it may be indicative of both. Everything depends upon the entire content of the diagnosis rather than upon an isolated symptom.

The intelligent understanding of a urinalysis report is highly complex and one that is lagrely conjectural to the lay mind.

We have a pain in the pelvis. We become alarmed. We have a urine sample analyzed. Something may be wrong with this individual urine sample. Even though it be a twenty-four-hour test there is still no justification for the definite establishment of a diagnosis.

If pus comes out with the urine there is no absolute way of determining from where or whence it issues. It may come from the kidneys, the pelvis of the kidneys, the ureter, the bladder or the urethra.

There is a complicated and painful method of determining kidney examinations by means of dyestuffs but even this is not very accurate nor does it determine definitely the nature of the disease.

What the pain is in the side, I don't know. It may come from an enlarged ovary or, as is most likely, from irritant food.

Bladder trouble is usually due to the type of blood stream which feeds the kidneys and bladder.

Diet correction along the lines I have frequently espoused will also be found very effective for this trouble as well.

Organized Beggary

While begging in Japan is not the fine art and honorable calling that it is in some parts of China, nevertheless in Tokio and other large cities there are hundreds who make their living by soliciting alms in public. Competition incident to a highly commercialized age has made it necessary for these mendicants to organize, and a beggars' guild now enacts and enforces beggars' law. The operations of these persons are limited to three hours each day, and they have a communistic way of sharing their pickings.

FEET HURT
Our method of making and adjusting arch supports and foot appliances has been endorsed by many prominent people of this and other states. This NEW SYSTEM of foot correction is years ahead of any other method that we know of, for it relieves foot pains in many instances almost instantly, and gives permanent relief. Our feather weight supports overcome fallen arches, swollen ankles, run-over heels, weak feet, flat foot, painful heels, pains in the knee, leg and back; prevents corns, bunions, etc. The following are extracts from a few of the many testimonials that we have received from grateful people:

May I express my appreciation of the success you have made in correcting my wife's foot trouble.

Pres. Western Maryland College.

It is a pleasure for me to thank you for the effective service you have given me. When I came to you my arches were completely broken down, walking was a torture. The whole system was badly affected by the condition of my feet. After the first visit I grew better, and have continued to improve. I realize that my case was of long standing and thus I am so much more confident of your method and arch supports. I consider it a duty to let sufferers know what he can do for them.

I take this opportunity of expressing my sincere appreciation for the instant relief obtained from the pair of arch supports recently secured from you. I wish to commend most highly your system to all foot sufferers.

Coloma and the God-Son of Jason

John Steven McGroarty

FOR the purposes of my new play, "El Dorado"—which completes the California trilogy—I recently revisited Coloma.

Coloma is one of the places of earth well worth a visit, if only for its sheer beauty. But, it is also the place where James Wilson Marshall discovered the first gold nuggets which precipitated the great gold rush of 1849 to California, an adventure paralleled by no other in human history. For comparison one has to fall back on the mythical adventures of Jason and the Argonauts. And it is at Coloma, too, that you will see one of the most impressive examples of the sculptor's genius to be found in the whole world.

Beyond all these considerations, however, Coloma is now essentially and immortally the custodian of that mighty dream of the true Golden Fleece which found expression in the storm-beaten ships of the Seven Seas and the caravans of the Covered Wagons toiling painfully across trackless plains and deserts and unconquered mountain ranges. All the memories of those deathless years are enfolded now in dream-wrapped Coloma, quiet and still among its sentineled hills, the croon of its little river lulling it ever to sleep with endless lullabies.

On the journey, going and coming, I traveled the full sweep of the country made famous by the Great Adventure. I stood in the silence of a pastoral land that was once clamorous with a wild and busy life. The grass was back in the devastated meadows, cattle knee-deep in clover where "rockers" and sluice boxes had wrought havoc in the golden soil. Sheep nibbled in the chaparral of the gulches from which fortunes had been wrung. Orchards with their happy burdens of fruit ripening in the sun are now upon the hill slopes where the "Forty-niners" toiled like armies of eager ants. Time and the winds and the rains of the years have covered up the scars the gold-seekers left in the wake of their unrelenting march.

It is a story long since told, a dream long since folded away with all the innumerable dreams that went before it, yet leaving behind it greater memories than any other dream that ever was.

And it is to walk with dreams if one shall journey through that land. The crumbled ruin of a miner's cabin, the gaunt specter of a tree in the moonlight, the shadow of a rock by day—all these speak of the glamorous past when Fortune shod beggared wanderers with shoon of silver and clothed them in the robes of Kings.

Marshall the Discoverer

ON THE trail of the miners so many of whom grew rich in a day, followed the trader, the money changer, the rum huckster, the card juggler and every other species of camp follower who were not adventurers, and who took no chances, but who waxed fat on the spoils that the adventurers gathered. And, among these daring men who were the soul of the Great Adventure, and who were, themselves, adventurers at heart, James Wilson Marshall stands apart from them all. It is he alone who is now commemorated. The glorious statue on his own hill at Coloma will speak his name long after the last of his contemporaries has been forgotten.

Wherefore, it is astonishing, to say the least, that in none of the many plays of the spoken stage and those produced by the cinema, Marshall appears. It must be because playwrights, as a rule, are not students of history, notwithstanding the fact that history is, in itself, the very essence of drama.

It is true, of course, that Marshall is not entitled to stand on the same plane with the discoverers in the world of science. He was not a discoverer in the same sense that Copernicus, Galileo, Newton, Watts and Stephenson were discoverers, but he has his distinction, just the same.

And the distinction that endures with James W. Marshall in history is that he was chosen by Fate to make a discovery that set a whole world in motion, that resulted in the expansion of an empire across a continent, and that poured countless drachmas of gold into the coffers of a nation that has since become the greatest nation of all time.

Consider this man whose destiny it was to absolutely revolutionize the age in which he lived. Gold in his day, as it has been in all ages, and as it is still, is the lever that moves the world. Marshall was the man who found gold to be in California. And California has produced more gold than any other area on the face of the earth. Nor is its supply yet anywhere near exhaustion although eighty-two years have gone by since Marshall found the nest of first nuggets in the mill race at Coloma.

The fact that Marshall was an ordinary working millwright by trade and of prosaic New Jersey birth in nowise lessens his fame. He was, in truth, a born adventurer and takes his place, by right, among adventurers of all lands and all times. And it is a very great distinction, indeed, to be so rated.

He left the pine woods of his native State while still young. In the year of his discovery at Coloma he had not yet passed his thirty-eighth year. He had adventured across a practically unknown continent in the pure spirit of adventure at a time when only men of the utmost daring would attempt it. He was of that little handful of Americans who got as far as California while it was still a province of Mexico.

When the adventure of the Bear Flag fared out of Sonoma he flung himself into the thick of it. He bore a musket at the battle of San Pasqual and came back from it ragged and half-starved to go to work again for Capt. Sutter at his empire of New Helvetia on the Sacramento. Sutter commissioned him to build a sawmill and to select a site. Marshall chose a place on the south fork of the American River which you will now know as Coloma.

Coloma and James W. Marshall—now forever are these two names linked together.

Following the story of Marshall further, we find him standing for one immortal hour, the darling of the gods, in a golden world that was all his own. Had he kept secret his discovery within his own breast and among the few to whom he might have been compelled to reveal it, it was in his power to amass greater wealth than man had ever dreamed of before.

But, this he did not do. He told Sutter. And then, somehow, by some magic that will never be explained, the great news spread as though upon the wings of the winds to the farthest corners of the earth. In less than one year's time, without the aid of the nonexistent telegraph, not to speak of the yet unknown miracle of radio, the whole world not only knew but had its peoples on the ground garnering sudden and unheard of wealth from gulch and stream, from meadow and hillside slope and the sands of brown valleys that had never before known a human touch save that of some listless unknowing red man.

The Golden Sepulcher

DRAMA did not abandon the Discoverer when his one great immortal hour was done. The high gods forsook him and gave him over to the jeers of Momus. Tragedy stalked him relentlessly on life's mimic stage. And perhaps this is another reason that he is sure of remembrance. It is only the tragic drama that endures.

He died a pauper and was buried at the public expense. Yet, strange as it may seem, not even the kings of Nur can boast of a sepulcher to compare in golden grandeur to that where sleeps the dust that was once James W. Marshall.

When he was found dead at Kelcy, debauched and broken, the State carried his body to a high hill at Coloma—a hill that Marshall once owned and upon a slope of which the poor shack in which he had lived still stands a pathetic ruin.

It is a hill seamed with gold. There is a tunnel to be seen there by means of which a trespasser had planned to mine the hill, but whose unlawful operations were stopped. And so, the gold is still there in the hill.

It is a fitting sepulcher for the Discoverer. And everything about it has been made fitting. The monument erected upon the crest is one of the finest in the world.

Who the sculptor was, I did not learn. No one in Coloma was able to inform me when I was there. Those of whom I made inquiry said they had never been asked the question before. It seemed unbelievable, and yet it is the world's way, and it does not appear that there is truth in the poet's statement that "A dreamer lives forever, and a toiler dies in a day." The sculptor of the Marshall monument at Coloma was a dreamer of beauty. He wrought in a vision of stately and yet exquisite art.

The pedestal that supports the statue is of noble design. It is builded of blue granite and limestone quarried from adjacent hills. And upon its impressive height the bronze statue of Marshall stands in its heroic splendor.

There he stands as he was in life, looking down to the spot on the river where he found the first nuggets. A finger of his outstretched hand points downward from the hill to the site of the mill.

It is difficult to describe one's emotions in the presence of this very uncommon memorial. I stood for hours in the shadow of the monument—in the very shadow of the hand pointing downward to the mill race of the gods. I was in the clutch of a spell from which I could extricate myself only by an effort.

Perhaps the spell was wrought by the strange quietude that pervaded everything when I was there. The wild birds, though they are plentiful on that wondrous hill, did not stir or sing. No visitors came to intrude upon the strange silence. There was no breath of wind to awaken even the leaves of the stately Lombardy tree that flung its green branches against the very sky. The white oleanders and the red roses all slept. Only the voice of the little river was never still, as though it, alone, can never forget.

The Biggest Thrill of All

NOW that I have put the third and the last of the three great epochs of California history into drama, I would almost say that of my three plays the biggest thrill is in "El Dorado."

And it may be that the reason for this is that in the play of "El Dorado" I have put into living flesh and blood on the mimic stage the story of my American countrymen and the part they played in the upbuilding of our Empire of the Sun.

Aside from the really spiritual aspect of the great adventure of the days of '49, we are not to forget that the flag followed in the wake of the covered wagons that crossed the desert plains and in the wake of the ships that rounded the Horn. It followed as logically as the day follows the night that this great westward migration of the American pioneers had as a consequence the unfolding of the Stripes and Stars upon winds that had never before kissed its folds of flame.

And I am glad that it has been given to me who am doubtless the least of playwrights, to tell at last the true story of American men in California in 1849 and the amazing years that followed.

It is a sad commentary on our native drama that the American in California in the wild days of the great gold rush has been so grossly misrepresented in his deeds and character. All the plays that have been written upon this theme portrayed the American gold seeker in California as a low ruffian with guns on his hips, guzzling whisky at the bar of a gambling den with his arm around a painted woman. He has been pictured as a man who drifted from his traditions and who put a new infamy upon life.

The truth is, and the facts really are, that he was no such man as this. On the contrary, he was a man who brought the steadiness of order out of the chaos of wild times—a man who created law where there had been no law and who, in the face of stupendous temptation, still held to the ties that had bound him on the altars of the God of his ancestors.

velopment of pregnancy. A milk secretion at other times shows pathology.

Such disease, however, may be remote from the breasts and may be entirely in the uterus itself.

From the brief outline of symptoms in this communication, there is a possibility that pregnancy exists. Again, there may be the development of a tumor. Everything would depend entirely upon physical examination.

The fact that there is pressure upon the bladder usually indicates that the womb is distorted, out of place, or subject to considerable pressure.

Pregnancy, in its later stages, produces such pressure but usually not until after the fifth month. A five-month pregnancy is easily established beyond question, so I doubt whether such a condition exists in this case. Hence, I am inclined to the belief that there is either a tumor or a uterus misplacement.

Tumors are also associated with abnormal catarrhal discharges.

The "meaty substances" of which the writer complains are very often the offal or exudate of a fibroid tumor.

But, as I have stated, examination will reveal the truth better than a conjecture of this sort.

The swollen glands of the neck may be an enlargement of the thyroid, another structure intimately connected with the sex function, or they may be the customary neck swellings of autointoxication and toxemia.

The neck swellings, or glandular enlargements of toxic poisoning, are shown as a series of small pealike lumps which are easily palpable to the touch. An enlarged thyroid shows itself considerably lower and in front of the neck either in the form of a bulge on one side of the neck or a double bulge on both sides.

The thing I would recommend is an examination to determine what the diagnosis is. After that it depends entirely upon the course of action.

I do not indorse surgery for straightening the uterus or for the removal of benign tumors. I have found in my experience that rigid dietetic treatment augmented by periodic short fasts will do more to control the trouble than anything else.

A fruit juice diet of from twenty-four or forty-eight hours immediatly prior to the onset of menstruation is also very good.

Warm packs to the abdomen and a warm shower will help to relieve the congestion.

For the swollen glands of the neck cold water compresses applied nightly will do much to relieve the congestion.

Other treatment depends upon the specific nature of the diagnosis.

Chronic Appendicitis

Ventura, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

Since coming to Ventura I have been very much interested in your articles in the Los Angeles Times and am seeking some advice.

My son six years of age has had to be under medical care the past few months and two medical doctors have told me he has chronic appendicitis. We are all very much opposed to an operation and would like very much your detailed diet list for such a case

Thank you for a reply. A READER.

There is no age at which the surgical mania will stop.

Sometime ago I read of a baby, scarcely one day of age, who was operated on for appendicitis.

Therefore, there is nothing remarkable in a six-year-old's being diagnosed as having this trouble.

It has been repeatedly admitted that most of the cases of so-called chronic appendicitis are practically nothing more than the long drawn-out inflammations associated with constipation, gaseous fermentation, wrong diet and excessive eating.

The proof of it lies in the fact that by far the greater majority of them clear up when a strenuous program of toxic poison elimination is achieved.

In the case of the above communication, I have not diagnosed this child nor have I seen it but I shall warrant I know where the trouble lies.

Mother has been too generous with the milks and creams, eggs and pastries, cakes and pies, custards and eggnog, jells and jams, candies and ice creams, refined cereals and breadstuffs.

There is scarcely a little Johnny or Mary in the land but who is not continuously surfeited on the above mentioned products. From three or four natural bowel movements per day in early infancy, it takes but a few mouths before they go down to two, then one and sometimes none.

That is the invariable background.

I wonder what the "medical care" is for this child. If it is drugs or laxatives, the mother is wasting her time, her money and her child's health. There is no sense in it.

The first idea is to cut out the foods responsible for the condition, and the above category includes practically all of them.

The next thing is to "go easy" on the diet for several days or weeks.

If the condition is acute, there should be no food except water—and ample quantities of that.

Then water should be used to wash the bowels frequently.

Any child of six can be kept on a water regime from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

Then give him ample quantities of the watery fruits, particularly the citrus, and fresh fruit products.

I would not feed breadstuffs, milk, cream, meats, fish or eggs in any form until all symptoms have cleared up. Keep the child entirely on fruits and vegetables even though there be a loss of a few pounds in weight. A weight loss in a child is cleared up in a week or two. A health loss may take months.

This is the essence of the diet list. If mothers would follow that they would find that most cases of so-called appendicitis are not appendicitis at all but the good old-fashioned "bellyache."

Our grandmothers knew how to treat "bellyache" infinitely better than our modern medically-minded mothers who rush to the doctor on every provocation and on the least symptoms. Even though they used strong laxatives such as sulphur and Epsom salts they obtained better results, for they knew that the principle was to clean house and to "go easy" with the "eats!"

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc.?

Ready-made Arch Supports are as unsatisfactory unbuilt because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further. We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flat-foot, broken down arches and other deformities of the feet, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore the shoe to appearance of foot badly deformed and unsightly.

ABOUT OURSELVES

By Alma Whitaker

ONE of these pragmatical character-reading psychologists who does a little fortune telling on the side has made a valuable discovery about human vanities.

It seems that about the cruelest insult one can put upon a woman, any woman, is to tell her she has never suffered and that she is not nervous.

It seems that all women like to be thought to have suffered. They wish to be considered "highly strung," very sensitive, and preciously nervous. Even the husky, hard-boiled damsel who hilarously denies the accusation is apt tenderly to confide later that she valiantly disguises her feelings, but actually, oh, how she has suffered!

Men, on the other hand, have a widespread weakness for being accused of deviltry. It seems one has only to gaze earnestly at the best of good men and express a suspicion that he has been a devil of a fellow in his day, for him to know you for a person of remarkable insight.

Men, too, like to be thought to have struggled sumptuously for anything that may be theirs. Struggle, fine masculine struggle, against subtle but powerful opposition. They prefer to be recognized as wresting boons from Fate. Nothing can wound gentlemanly sensibilities more than to insinuate that luck had anything to do with what are so obviously the rewards of prowess.

When, for instance, a triumph has ensued on the golf course, a nice wish-to-be-thought-modest winner will remark deprecatingly that "Oh, well, I got the breaks." But all the while he yearns to be contradicted, and he knows just what to think about the loser who agrees with him.

Just as, when he is successful in business, he feels his superior intelligence is entitled to all the credit. Watch him snort if anyone is so graceless as to mention luck. He may even remark "What luck!" triumphantly himself, when something victorious happens, but the friend he will grapple to his soul is the one who interpolates . . . "Luck, perhaps, but mostly brains, old fellow," with a fond, knowing look.

I have a suspicion that there is a large soupcon of truth about us women liking to be thought to have suffered. Listen attentively when any group of women become confidential . . . it is the suffering moments of life we confess with romantic detail. Or accuse any woman of being fortunate, all life being a bed of roses for her, and watch the sudden frown, hark unto the expostulatory evidence to the contrary. How dare one suppose she has not had her full dark share of human suffering? I mean if it is only their eighteen servants, or their poor relations, or an in-law or two, the recital reeks of human sorrow.

In spite of the fact that hyper-sensitive people are most annoying, few of us reach those gallant heights where we can smilingly confess that it's pretty hard to hurt us. For instance, it has been some years since anyone could hurt my feelings, unless it was some one I dearly loved, but even as I write, it seems a hateful confession. It is not quite ladylike to be insensitive. If I were a nice womanly woman I should be hurt at least a couple of times a week.

My psychologist also declares that all men like to be thought a bit psychic. This, however, isn't peculiar to masculinity. Nay, nay. "Good gracious, you have almost supernatural insight" stirs the stodgiest of us to visions of power. It gives us an almost celestial association. Even if, sometimes, it is merely expressed in "You can't fool me."

Another sure-fire way to make a hit with either sex, but especially with men, is to whisper archly "I dreamed about you last night." Right there ardent curiosity is aroused and the dreamee preens with a new importance. For dreams are of the subconscious, and it is simply marvelous to be haunting someone's subconscious mind and stalking through their sleep. Wasn't it Booth Tarkington who sensed this irresistible trap . . . I think there was a flapper heroine of his who snatched all the other girls beaux away from them by just whispering "I dreamed of you last night." To make it more devastatingly provocative, decline firmly to divulge the theme of your dream . . .

Gentlemen who have not made any peculiar commercial success like to be thought indifferent to vulgar money. They just can't stoop to the common things that successful men have deigned to. "If that sort of thing is necessary in business," they remark scornfully, "I would rather be poor." If the boss had any sense he would realise the peculiar ability of our hero without having it thrust under his nose as certain rivals in the office have the crust to do. And one knows that here is a suffering gentleman who would scorn to push himself forward, or compete in a crude realm for unworthy honors.

On the other hand, the successful man is proud of his go-gettishness, "I always get what I go after," is a popular phrase. But with either type it is safe to say: "You are such a strong character."

In a general way, however, ladies don't particularly like being called "strong characters" . . . unless they are running for office. Any such inference makes them gaze at one suspiciously to make sure no insult was intended. It is much safer to tell any and all kinds of females that they are "such a womanly woman." I recall during our alarming suffrage campaign, we always defended our more strong-minded champion leaders by declaring "Oh, but really, if you only knew her, she is such a womanly woman." No one wanted to be thought a womanly woman more than Chrystabel Pankhurst, for instance.

For that matter, even our lady office-candidates want it to be clearly understood that they are only strong-minded in a strictly nice feminine way. Even, I mean, when they preen if someone says "My dear, you have almost a masculine outlook." One must, however, say this, with a certain arch-surprise . . . fancy a womanly woman like you being able to grasp the masculine point of view so marvelously, as it were.

For that matter, no one wishes to seem more sumptuously masculine than the type known as a "ladies' man." Just as no one is more superbly feminine than the type known as a "man's woman." Yet neither type gets on with its own sex very well . . . which isn't quite reasonable.

Your "ladies' man" oozes unctuous masculinity, and your "man's woman" oozes ostentatious femininity. Their charms are so limited. Some men are flattered to be called "ladies' men" . . . while others rage at it as a dire insult. The "man's woman," however, is invariably proud of the fact and scorns her own sex. There were many more of her in the gay 'nineties than today . . . even, I mean, if so many of the moderns have boyish figures. Still, you can flatter a "woman's woman" by accusing her of being a "man's woman." It is usually safer to flatter a man by calling him a "man's man" . . . no matter how sissy he is. He takes the "ladies' man" idea for granted, as something patently obvious.

The Sea

The breath of a monster,
The surf is its gills,
It breathes 'gainst the sands
And snaps as it spills.

The sea is a reptile
Whose foam circled fangs
Would ravenous strike
Where the pent-up land hangs.

The sea is a tireless
Worker in clay,
Builder and wrecker
Day after day.

The hard-pressed land battles
To keep to the last
What eons have salvaged,
For eons held fast.

The sea is a robber,
Ruthless and bold,
In the end it will conquer,
And rule all as of old.

CARE OF THE BODY

The Afternoon Nap

The neurotic is among us by the millions. The high nervous tension, symbolic of our strenuousness of living, is more the rule than the exception. The term "nervous" is one readily applicable to nine patients out of ten. The raw edges of our nervous systems are being constantly stirred by a multitude of factors. Yet all this is, to a considerable extent, avoidable and unnecessary.

Wherein lies the cure? What are the remedies?

Seek not in pills and potions. Look not at other causes but in yourself. Learn to relax. Learn to disvaluate. Learn to disincorporate yourself from all those elements which frazzle the nerves and prey upon your strength and vitality.

Of all the measures suitable to combat tired, taut, frazzled nerves, sleep is the most effective. In sleep, relaxation is perfect. During sleep the strain is nil. The blissful unconsciousness of sleep carries with it the rejuvenating forces of limitless fountains of health.

It is the common belief that sleep is only for the nighttime. Sleep during daylight hours is generally understood to be for infants and children only. Nothing could be further from genuine physiological truths.

The average woman, and man also, whose nervous system is raw-edged and depleted, will find the afternoon nap one of the finest tonic medicines that nature can furnish. The average woman can surely spare an hour or two from the pressure of her household duties to secure the calm and comfort of an hour or two of perfect relaxation in the form of sleep.

In our present state of "universal nerves," the afternoon nap ought to become a national institution just as it is in the countries of warmer climates.

The Result of a Urine Test

Azusa, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

If a twenty-four-hour specimen of urine examined by a chemical laboratory proves all right, could pus in the bladder come from the kidneys?

I also have occasional pains in the side.

Could bladder trouble come from the ovaries?

What treatment will help?

I am forty years old.

I shall appreciate any advice you give me.

A READER.

There is an axiom that "where there is smoke there is fire." On the other hand, I have seen smoke where there is no fire.

It is a popular impression that where there is pus there is disease. On the other hand, I have seen pus discharge without disease which may come as a normal physiological process or as a temporary slight inflammation.

The presence of pus in the urine is not necessarily a sign of bladder or kidney disease—yet it may be indicative of both. Everything depends upon the entire content of the diagnosis rather than upon an isolated symptom.

The intelligent understanding of a urinalysis report is highly complex and one that is lagrely conjectural to the lay mind.

We have a pain in the pelvis. We become alarmed. We have a urine sample analyzed. Something may be wrong with this individual urine sample. Even though it be a twenty-four-hour test there is still no justification for the definite establishment of a diagnosis.

If pus comes out with the urine there is no absolute way of determining from where or whence it issues. It may come from the kidneys, the pelvis of the kidneys, the ureter, the bladder or the urethra.

There is a complicated and painful method of determining kidney examinations by means of dyestuffs but even this is not very accurate nor does it determine definitely the nature of the disease.

What the pain is in the side, I don't know. It may come from an enlarged ovary or, as is most likely, from irritant food.

Bladder trouble is usually due to the type of blood stream which feeds the kidneys and bladder.

Diet correction along the lines I have frequently espoused will also be found very effective for this trouble as well.

Organized Beggary

While begging in Japan is not the fine art and honorable calling that it is in some parts of China, nevertheless in Tokio and other large cities there are hundreds who make their living by soliciting alms in public. Competition incident to a highly commercialized age has made it necessary for these mendicants to organize, and a beggars' guild now enacts and enforces beggars' law. The operations of these persons are limited to three hours each day, and they have a communistic way of sharing their pickings.

FEET HURT

Our method of making and adjusting arch supports and foot appliances has been endorsed by many prominent people of this and other states. This NEW SYSTEM of foot correction is years ahead of any other method that we know of, for it relieves foot pains in many instances almost instantly, and gives permanent relief. Our feather weight supports overcome fallen arches, swollen ankles, run-over heels, weak feet, flat foot, painful heels, pains in the knee, leg and back; prevents corns, bunions, etc. The following are extracts from a few of the many testimonials that we have received from grateful people:

May I express my appreciation of the success you have made in correcting my wife's foot trouble.
FRIEND W. RICHARDSON, Berkeley, Calif.
(Ex-Governor Richardson of Calif.)

You have done wonders for me. I cannot thank you sufficiently.
DR. A. N. WARD, A.M., D.D., LL.D.
Pres. Western Maryland College.

It is a pleasure for me to thank you for the effective service you have given me. When I came to you my arches were completely broken down, walking was a torture. The whole system was badly affected by the condition of my feet. After the first visit I grew better, and have continued to improve. I realize that my case was of long standing and thus I am so much more confident of your method and arch supports. I consider it a duty to let sufferers know what he can do for them.
FATHER T. J. McDONALD,

Coloma and the God-Son of Jason

John Steven McGroarty

FOR the purposes of my new play, "El Dorado"—which completes the California trilogy—I recently revisited Coloma.

Coloma is one of the places of earth well worth a visit, if only for its sheer beauty. But, it is also the place where James Wilson Marshall discovered the first gold nuggets which precipitated the great gold rush of 1849 to California, an adventure paralleled by no other in human history. For comparison one has to fall back on the mythical adventures of Jason and the Argonauts. And it is at Coloma, too, that you will see one of the most impressive examples of the sculptor's genius to be found in the whole world.

Beyond all these considerations, however, Coloma is now essentially and immortally the custodian of that mighty dream of the true Golden Fleece which found expression in the storm-beaten ships of the Seven Seas and the caravans of the Covered Wagons toiling painfully across trackless plains and deserts and unconquered mountain ranges. All the memories of those deathless years are enfolded now in dream-wrapped Coloma, quiet and still among its sentineled hills, the croon of its little river lulling it ever to sleep with endless lullabies.

On the journey, going and coming, I traveled the full sweep of the country made famous by the Great Adventure. I stood in the silence of a pastoral land that was once clamorous with a wild and busy life. The grass was back in the devastated meadows, cattle knee-deep in clover where "rockers" and sluice boxes had wrought havoc in the golden soil. Sheep nibbled in the chaparral of the gulches from which fortunes had been wrung. Orchards with their happy burdens of fruit ripening in the sun are now upon the hill slopes where the "Forty-niners" toiled like armies of eager ants. Time and the winds and the rains of the years have covered up the scars the gold-seekers left in the wake of their unrelenting march.

It is a story long since told, a dream long since folded away with all the innumerable dreams that went before it, yet leaving behind it greater memories than any other dream that ever was.

And it is to walk with dreams if one shall journey through that land. The crumbled ruin of a miner's cabin, the gaunt specter of a tree in the moonlight, the shadow of a rock by day—all these speak of the glamorous past when Fortune shod beggared wanderers with shoon of silver and clothed them in the robes of Kings.

Marshall the Discoverer

ON THE trail of the miners so many of whom grew rich in a day, followed the trader, the money changer, the rum huckster, the card juggler and every other species of camp follower who were not adventurers, and who took no chances, but who waxed fat on the spoils that the adventurers gathered. And, among these daring men who were the soul of the Great Adventure, and who were, themselves, adventurers at heart, James Wilson Marshall stands apart from them all. It is he alone who is now commemorated. The glorious statue on his own hill at Coloma will speak his name long after the last of his contemporaries has been forgotten.

Wherefore, it is astonishing, to say the least, that in none of the many plays of the spoken stage and those produced by the cinema, Marshall appears. It must be because playwrights, as a rule, are not students of history, notwithstanding the fact that history is, in itself, the very essence of drama.

It is true, of course, that Marshall is not entitled to stand on the same plane with the discoverers in the world of science. He was not a discoverer in the same sense that Copernicus, Galileo, Newton, Watts and Stephenson were discoverers, but he has his distinction, just the same.

And the distinction that endures with James W. Marshall in history is that he was chosen by Fate to make a discovery that set a whole world in motion, that resulted in the expansion of an empire across a continent, and that poured countless drachmas of gold into the coffers of a nation that has since become the greatest nation of all time.

Consider this man whose destiny it was to absolutely revolutionize the age in which he lived. Gold in his day, as it has been in all ages, and as it is still, is the lever that moves the world. Marshall was the man who found gold to be in California. And California has produced more gold than any other area on the face of the earth. Nor is its supply yet anywhere near exhaustion although eighty-two years have gone by since Marshall found the nest of first nuggets in the mill race at Coloma.

The fact that Marshall was an ordinary working millwright by trade and of prosaic New Jersey birth in nowise lessens his fame. He was, in truth, a born adventurer and takes his place, by right, among adventurers of all lands and all times. And it is a very great distinction, indeed, to be so rated.

He left the pine woods of his native State while still young. In the year of his discovery at Coloma he had not yet passed his thirty-eighth year. He had adventured across a practically unknown continent in the pure spirit of adventure at a time when only men of the utmost daring would attempt it. He was of that little handful of Americans who got as far as California while it was still a province of Mexico.

When the adventure of the Bear Flag fared out of Sonoma he flung himself into the thick of it. He bore a musket at the battle of San Pasqual and came back from it ragged and half-starved to go to work again for Capt. Sutter at his empire of New Helvetia on the Sacramento. Sutter commissioned him to build a sawmill and to select a site. Marshall chose a place on the south fork of the American River which you will now know as Coloma.

Coloma and James W. Marshall—now forever are these two names linked together.

Following the story of Marshall further, we find him standing for one immortal hour, the darling of the gods, in a golden world that was all his own. Had he kept secret his discovery within his own breast and among the few to whom he might have been compelled to reveal it, it was in his power to amass greater wealth than man had ever dreamed of before.

But, this he did not do. He told Sutter. And then, somehow, by some magic that will never be explained, the great news spread as though upon the wings of the winds to the farthest corners of the earth. In less than one year's time, without the aid of the nonexistent telegraph, not to speak of the yet unknown miracle of radio, the whole world not only knew but had its peoples on the ground garnering sudden and unheard of wealth from gulch and stream, from meadow and hillside slope and the sands of brown valleys that had never before known a human touch save that of some listless unknowing red man.

The Golden Sepulcher

DRAMA did not abandon the Discoverer when his one great immortal hour was done. The high gods forsook him and gave him over to the jeers of Momus. Tragedy stalked him relentlessly on life's mimic stage. And perhaps this is another reason that he is sure of remembrance. It is only the tragic drama that endures.

He died a pauper and was buried at the public expense. Yet, strange as it may seem, not even the kings of Nur can boast of a sepulcher to compare in golden grandeur to that where sleeps the dust that was once James W. Marshall.

When he was found dead at Kelcy, debauched and broken, the State carried his body to a high hill at Coloma—a hill that Marshall once owned and upon a slope of which the poor shack in which he had lived still stands a pathetic ruin.

It is a hill seamed with gold. There is a tunnel to be seen there by means of which a trespasser had planned to mine the hill, but whose unlawful operations were stopped. And so, the gold is still there in the hill.

It is a fitting sepulcher for the Discoverer. And everything about it has been made fitting. The monument erected upon the crest is one of the finest in the world.

Who the sculptor was, I did not learn. No one in Coloma was able to inform me when I was there. Those of whom I made inquiry said they had never been asked the question before. It seemed unbelievable, and yet it is the world's way, and it does not appear that there is truth in the poet's statement that "A dreamer lives forever, and a toiler dies in a day." The sculptor of the Marshall monument at Coloma was a dreamer of beauty. He wrought in a vision of stately and yet exquisite art.

The pedestal that supports the statue is of noble design. It is builded of blue granite and limestone quarried from adjacent hills. And upon its impressive height the bronze statue of Marshall stands in its heroic splendor.

There he stands as he was in life, looking down to the spot on the river where he found the first nuggets. A finger of his outstretched hand points downward from the hill to the site of the mill.

It is difficult to describe one's emotions in the presence of this very uncommon memorial. I stood for hours in the shadow of the monument—in the very shadow of the hand pointing downward to the mill race of the gods. I was in the clutch of a spell from which I could extricate myself only by an effort.

Perhaps the spell was wrought by the strange quietude that pervaded everything when I was there. The wild birds, though they are plentiful on that wondrous hill, did not stir or sing. No visitors came to intrude upon the strange silence. There was no breath of wind to awaken even the leaves of the stately Lombardy tree that flung its green branches against the very sky. The white oleanders and the red roses all slept. Only the voice of the little river was never still, as though it, alone, can never forget.

The Biggest Thrill of All

NOW that I have put the third and the last of the three great epochs of California history into drama, I would almost say that of my three plays the biggest thrill is in "El Dorado."

And it may be that the reason for this is that in the play of "El Dorado" I have put into living flesh and blood on the mimic stage the story of my American countrymen and the part they played in the upbuilding of our Empire of the Sun.

Aside from the really spiritual aspect of the great adventure of the days of '49, we are not to forget that the flag followed in the wake of the covered wagons that crossed the desert plains and in the wake of the ships that rounded the Horn. It followed as logically as the day follows the night that this great westward migration of the American pioneers had as a consequence the unfolding of the Stripes and Stars upon winds that had never before kissed its folds of flame.

And I am glad that it has been given to me who am doubtless the least of playwrights, to tell at last the true story of American men in California in 1849 and the amazing years that followed.

It is a sad commentary on our native drama that the American in California in the wild days of the great gold rush has been so grossly misrepresented in his deeds and character. All the plays that have been written upon this theme portrayed the American gold seeker in California as a low ruffian with guns on his hips, guzzling whisky at the bar of a gambling den with his arm around a painted woman. He has been pictured as a man who drifted from his traditions and who put a new infamy upon life.

The truth is, and the facts really are, that he was no such man as this. On the contrary, he was a man who brought the steadiness of order out of the chaos of wild times—a man who created law where there had been no law and who, in the face of stupendous temptation, still held to the ties that had bound him on the altars of the God of his ancestors.

CARE OF THE BODY

velopment of pregnancy. A milk secretion at other times shows pathology.

Such disease, however, may be remote from the breasts and may be entirely in the uterus itself.

From the brief outline of symptoms in this communication, there is a possibility that pregnancy exists. Again, there may be the development of a tumor. Everything would depend entirely upon physical examination.

The fact that there is pressure upon the bladder usually indicates that the womb is distorted, out of place, or subject to considerable pressure.

Pregnancy, in its later stages, produces such pressure but usually not until after the fifth month. A five-month pregnancy is easily established beyond question, so I doubt whether such a condition exists in this case. Hence, I am inclined to the belief that there is either a tumor or a uterus misplacement.

Tumors are also associated with abnormal catarrhal discharges.

The "meaty substances" of which the writer complains are very often the offal or exudate of a fibroid tumor.

But, as I have stated, examination will reveal the truth better than a conjecture of this sort.

The swollen glands of the neck may be an enlargement of the thyroid, another structure intimately connected with the sex function, or they may be the customary neck swellings of autointoxication and toxemia.

The neck swellings, or glandular enlargements of toxic poisoning, are shown as a series of small pealike lumps which are easily palpable to the touch. An enlarged thyroid shows itself considerably lower and in front of the neck either in the form of a bulge on one side of the neck or a double bulge on both sides.

The thing I would recommend is an examination to determine what the diagnosis is. After that it depends entirely upon the course of action.

I do not indorse surgery for straightening the uterus or for the removal of benign tumors. I have found in my experience that rigid dietetic treatment augmented by periodic short fasts will do more to control the trouble than anything else.

A fruit juice diet of from twenty-four or forty-eight hours immediatly prior to the onset of menstruation is also very good.

Warm packs to the abdomen and a warm shower will help to relieve the congestion.

For the swollen glands of the neck cold water compresses applied nightly will do much to relieve the congestion.

Other treatment depends upon the specific nature of the diagnosis.

Chronic Appendicitis

Ventura, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

Since coming to Ventura I have been very much interested in your articles in the Los Angeles Times and am seeking some advice.

My son six years of age has had to be under medical care the past few months and two medical doctors have told me he has chronic appendicitis. We are all very much opposed to an operation and would like very much your detailed diet list for such a case

Thank you for a reply. A READER.

There is no age at which the surgical mania will stop.

Sometime ago I read of a baby, scarcely one day of age, who was operated on for appendicitis.

Therefore, there is nothing remarkable in a six-year-old's being diagnosed as having this trouble.

It has been repeatedly admitted that most of the cases of so-called chronic appendicitis are practically nothing more than the long drawn-out inflammations associated with constipation, gaseous fermentation, wrong diet and excessive eating.

The proof of it lies in the fact that by far the greater majority of them clear up when a strenuous program of toxic poison elimination is achieved.

In the case of the above communication, I have not diagnosed this child nor have I seen it but I shall warrant I know where the trouble lies.

Mother has been too generous with the milks and creams, eggs and pastries, cakes and pies, custards and eggnog, jells and jams, candies and ice creams, refined cereals and breadstuffs.

There is scarcely a little Johnny or Mary in the land but who is not continuously surfeited on the above mentioned products. From three or four natural bowel movements per day in early infancy, it takes but a few mouths before they go down to two, then one and sometimes none.

That is the invariable background.

I wonder what the "medical care" is for this child. If it is drugs or laxatives, the mother is wasting her time, her money and her child's health. There is no sense in it.

The first idea is to cut out the foods responsible for the condition, and the above category includes practically all of them.

The next thing is to "go easy" on the diet for several days or weeks.

If the condition is acute, there should be no food except water—and ample quantities of that.

Then water should be used to wash the bowels frequently.

Any child of six can be kept on a water regime from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

Then give him ample quantities of the watery fruits, particularly the citrus, and fresh fruit products.

I would not feed breadstuffs, milk, cream, meats, fish or eggs in any form until all symptoms have cleared up. Keep the child entirely on fruits and vegetables even though there be a loss of a few pounds in weight. A weight loss in a child is cleared up in a week or two. A health loss may take months.

This is the essence of the diet list. If mothers would follow that they would find that most cases of so-called appendicitis are not appendicitis at all but the good old-fashioned "bellyache."

Our grandmothers knew how to treat "bellyache" infinitely better than our modern medically-minded mothers who rush to the doctor on every provocation and on the least symptoms. Even though they used strong laxatives such as sulphur and Epsom salts they obtained better results, for they knew that the principle was to clean house and to "go easy" with the "eats!"

Corrected Without Drugs

It is common knowledge among the highest medical authorities that only by keeping the blood stream pure and free from all acid conditions, can we hope to keep well.

In the treatment of all ailments the first step is to change the acid condition to an alkaline condition. KOLOTOX does this with amazing results. KOLOTOX is different; it does what is claimed for it—that's why it is sold on a money-back guarantee.

KOLOTOX

Is derived from a Volcanic Spring in the High Sierras, and comes to you as a powder carrying, in assimilable form, the essential mineral elements required by the human body. Send today $2.00 for a month's treatment. Address, KOLO SPRINGS PRODUCTS CO., Orange, Calif.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc.?

Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further. We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flat-foot, broken down arches and other deformities of the foot, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often reduce deformities of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

"There Is More Science Than Art in Flying," Declares Pasadena Girl Flyer—Living Fossil Found in Harder-Than-Rock Concrete—New Electric Pulmonary Pump Proves Successful

New Flying Facts

YOLANDA SPIRITO, a 21-year-old Pasadena girl, won the woman's race and $75, together with loud applause, at the dedication of the improved Los Angeles Airport. It was a fifteen-mile three-pylon flight, and Yolanda's Great Lakes plane, with its Cirrus motor, hummed round the triangle at the rate of 135 miles an hour.

"Women are taking to flying," she declared, "because they find in it the rhythm of motion which has made dancing so popular. It also affords thrills and a chance for self-expression. A year ago, there were only seventy licensed women pilots in the whole United States; now there are eighty-six in Los Angeles county alone. Since many air-minded people read this science page, I wish you would tell them that flying is neither difficult nor dangerous, provided one learns how and uses one's head. One 'don't' is this: don't attempt any unusual maneuver at an elevation under 1500 feet. And don't attempt to stunt over cities, or crowds, or airports, or civil airways, otherwise you'll find it hard to get a license. It took ten months to learn what I know about flying. The trouble with most learners is that, instead of trying to master flying, they simply work to get a license. It's like school work: some students work to pass examinations, others to master a subject."

In Southern California, where the winds and weather are so favorable to all-year flying, Yolanda thinks all air-minded women should take wings. "Accidents occur," she continued, her Italian eyes darkening, "and accidents scare people, especially women. But most accidents result from inexperience, or an attempt to show off, and sometimes from gin. Then reporters, who know very little about flying usually, make a good story out of the tragedy by blaming the plane. There was a tragedy in Arizona a short time ago, for example, which illustrates what I mean. The reporter stated that the machine became uncontrollable at 2000 feet. With all sympathy for that California pilot, I am going to tell you what happened. In the first place, it was an old plane with an obsolete motor—the kind that spits. With that crazy machine he attempted to loop at 900 feet! And that isn't all: instead of looping so as to come out facing the wind, he looped in the opposite direction. Moreover, when he started up, the gasoline tank was nearly empty, and no one can stunt on an empty tank. If this poor pilot had been sober, he would never have gone up, or tried to show off, in that old plane.

"There is more science than art in flying; it's a new science applied to the air. But there's no need to keep on paying lives for lessons, because we have the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, and many other schools and training fields, where one can learn what every flyer should know as safely as one can learn how to run an automobile."

Miss Spirito believes flying has opened new fields of opportunity for women, and she and her 22-year-old cousin, Nancy Drake, are preparing themselves for commercial aviation.

Herbert Hoover, Jr., supports Yolanda's statement that lack of proper equipment is responsible for most accidents. "Maury Graham, the crack air mail pilot who was lost last January in a Nevada snowstorm," he declared, "would not have been lost if radio communication had been developed then as it is now. Since then a radio network has been extended from Los Angeles to San Francisco, Seattle, Salt Lake City, Kansas City and Dallas, with connecting lines to Cheyenne and Amarillo."

Yolanda Spirito and her Great Lakes plane.

The newest, safest and most remarkable development in aviation, he said, is two-way radio telephony and telegraphy. He also stated that "there are now fifty trimotored planes in transport service in the Los Angeles district which could be equipped as bombers on short notice for national defense."

A $200,000 Riddle

GENERAL MOTORS has given Antioch College $200,000 to try to find out how plants take sap from the soil, carbon and oxygen from the air, and break down the molecules then rebuild the atoms into molecules of sugar and starch, using sunshine as cement. The whole secret lies in every speck of green plant pigment—the chlorophyl which colors vegetation and turns chemical elements into fundamental foods. Solution of that problem will also solve the population problem, which is beginning to alarm census takers.

Why Anesthetics Cause Unconsciousness

THE reason has been discovered: anesthetics harden the myelin which surrounds and insulates the nerves just as hot water hardens white of egg substance, whereupon we "pass away" until the myelin recovers from the effects of the drugs.

Life-Saving Inventions

AN ELECTRIC pulmonary pump, with rubber mouth and nose adjustments, has been used successfully to start respiration in drowned or suffocated lungs, and to support respiration, it is said, until the patient is able to breathe himself.

Likewise a new kind of electric thermometer, which records the temperature of any organ in the body, is said by the editor of the American Medical Association Journal "to represent a distinct advance in the scientific treatment of diseases."

Peanut Power

ACCORDING to the experiments made in the nutrition laboratory of the Carnegie Institution at Boston, where the workings of the brain were under test, a maid used up more calories while dusting a room than a minister while thinking out a sermon. It was found that the calories contained in one-half of a salted peanut sufficed for both purposes.

Electrifying Farms

TEN years ago the number of farms using electricity for farming purposes was negligible, says Prof. H. B. Walker of the agricultural engineering division of the University of California. "Today upwards of half a million farms are enjoying the benefits of electric service for the refrigeration of products, processing of crops, electric treatment of soils, pest control, irradiation of crops and products with electrically-created light, pasteurizing and sterilization processes, and in many other ways."

This agricultural research division has also discovered many new facts about avocado production, which have been embodied in a circular, No. 43—furnished free upon request addressed to the College of Agriculture, Berkeley.

Life Rays

PROF. GUIDO CREMONESE, of the University of Rome, claims to have identified and photographed the vital rays which emanate from living bodies. "The photographs fully confirm the hypothesis," he declares, "that life is an oscillatory electro-magnetic phenomenon."

Orientals Need Fruit

THE people of Asia need California fruit but don't know it, says Prof. B. H. Crocheron, director of agricultural extension in the University of California, who has returned from an extensive investigation of Asiatic conditions. Refrigeration possibilities preclude the shipping of fresh fruit advantageously, so he advises that "the best opportunity lies in shipping small packages of canned and dried fruits."

Liquefied Gas

A SUBSIDIARY of the Standard Oil Company of California is trying out a process for delivering gas to consumers in liquid form. Shipped in tanks, it is subjected to a carburization process and served through ordinary gas pipes.

The Wonder of Life

LAWSON P. COOPER, a young naturalist and a school-teacher, tells a story which will make some scientists arch their eyebrows. It sounds a little like the stories people used to tell about snakes taking their tails in their mouths and rolling like hoops across the country.

"While remodeling a swimming pool at the Voorhis School for Boys, at San Dimas," he wrote, "the workmen found a live frog imbedded in a mass of solid concrete more than one foot thick. The pool was built and the concrete laid two and one-half years ago, so the frog must have been immured in it that length of time. It was not only alive, but lively enough to hop off on its own power. Its long, close, solitary confinement made it quite translucent, otherwise it appeared perfectly normal. The concrete, while hardening, had permeated its body, the grains being visible in its translucent flesh. It probably went through the mixing machine with the cement."

Was it possible that Mr. Cooper had been hoaxed? I made inquiries and found ample evidence to establish the facts even in a court of law. Prof. Heber H. Clewett, who has charge of the Voorhis school department of agriculture and science, witnessed the resurrection and "had the frog in his hands." The concrete formed the floor of an old swimming pool, he testified, being extremely hard, for it had set under water. Before it could be broken up and removed, it had to be punctured with pneumatic drills. One of the Mexican laborers named Gonzales, while wielding a sledge-hammer, discovered the living fossil in the harder-than-rock concrete and called the other workmen.

Gonzales gave the freed frog to one of the schoolboys, who took it to the teachers, and they hurried down to the exhumation place, finding the facts as related. Before anyone thought of photographing the frog, the boy had turned it loose. Meanwhile its "narrow house" in the solid concrete had been scooped up and carted away.

Now, how did this air-breathing, insect-eating amphibian keep alive for sixty months inside a foot-thick concrete matrix?

"Suspended animation," says Prof. Clewett. "It lived in a state similar to that in which animals live during hibernation."

When hibernating, animals live on a very low level, and cold-blooded amphibians hibernate much more profoundly than mammals. The climate in the concrete under the water in the pool hardly changed at all, so the buried frog lost very little of its stored-up energy through radiation, or breathing, or sweating. It barely breathed, laid low and said nothing. Its heart probably did not beat more than a half-dozen times a minute. At the same low level all frogs back east live throughout the winters—in abandoned drain pipes, or sheltered retreats. Lung-fishes, as Mr. Cooper remarked, likewise live through dry seasons buried deeply in dried mud at the bottom of swamps from which the water has evaporated.

This frog needed no food, because there was no output of energy. And enough molecules of oxygen seeped through the pores of the concrete to keep it from suffocating.

Most warm-blooded mammals have forgotten how to hibernate, for their blood remains at a constant temperature usually regardless of surrounding conditions. If it sinks below normal, they have chills; if it rises ever so slightly above normal, they have fever. A few mammals, however, such as bears, hedgehogs and bats, lack some perfection in warm-bloodedness and are obliged in times of stress to resort to the old hang-over hibernating habit in order to tide over troubled times.

Finding itself immured in concrete, the frog must have relapsed into almost lifeless sleep, and awoke two and one-half years older in time, but probably only one night older in its feelings.

CARE OF THE BODY

ercise can and often do lead to disease of the kidneys and urinary bladder.

"Bright's disease is often present in the young child. Purging, later followed by constipation, common in children, is an indication of it, sometimes blood in the urine.

"Pain endured by infants in such cases is great even though they are unable to talk and tell of it. Peevishness, general malaise and crying tell of suffering, not perversity.

"With children, involvement of respiration is the most fatal tendency in Bright's disease. Not only are they liable to pleurisy, pneumonia, and bronchitis, but also to membraneous croup.

"It is clear that nephritis is a manifestation of disease principally attributable to errors of diet and lack of exercise, followed by congestion, inflammation, and decomposition, in the kidneys.

"It is equally plain that the course to take in the treatment of kidney disease is to minimize the harmful influence of bad food, indigestion, and lack of exercise. The best way to do it is by way of natural and simple food, such as is able to construct without leaving behind an insoluble matter to clog the circulation.

"Food imperfectly digested, while it will pass into the blood by absorption from the intestine, is not in a state of solubility suitable for assimilation by the tissue cells. The main burden of elimination falls on the kidneys, in time they are weakened, congestion follows, the nerves are poisoned, and when not relieved, the result is fatal.

"Bright's disease is not so much a kidney disease, as it is a stomach disease.

"In stomach disease there is a process of degeneration in the entire bodily structure, even to the last tissue.

"Bad food is at the root of internal disease. The naming and classifying of disease often mystify and mislead. Malnutrition is responsible for disease in the beginning.

"A low protein diet is the first requisite toward prevention of the cause, and naturally, the first remedy in the cure of disease of the kidneys. Meals should be suited to the patient in number and amount. Vegetables, cooked, also vegetable broth or soup and suitable green vegetables are indicated, also plain water in moderation.

With the sick, two light meals a day will usually be as much as they will care to eat. This diet will sustain the patients' strength and does not harm them, but more food if the patients call for more food.

"The main point is to have clean, wholesome, mild vegetable food in moderation, and that it be digested and assimilated.

"The drink which is best and always best in these cases is water. Charged waters are not necessary. The quantity of water for daily use in cases of this nature should be enough to satisfy the patient—no more. Fruit drinks are proper, also.

"Clothing worn next to the skin may be of any material. Cotton is the choice, provided it is light in weight and loose. Medium to lightweight cotton underwear for all seasons is suitable and economic.

"Heavy underwear overheats the skin and induces sweating. Light underwear and heavier outer clothing are better. The importance of ventilation for the skin is a factor of comfort.

"The outer clothing can be of wool, sufficient in weight to protect from the cold of winter, but in summer the lighter, the better. Warmth and dryness of the skin are important.

"Exercise should be in accord with the strength and the amount of food taken. When the exercise is the least, the food must likewise correspond.

"Exposure to the air and sunlight are useful to the patient. Climate is not material. Bright's disease is stomach disease. If bad food caused it, good food will cure it, if it be curable.

"Where other measures fail, and in cases where hope is well-nigh abandoned, the vegetable treatment should be given a trial."

Abnormal Glandular Action

Maywood, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

I have heard your talks over KHJ and have greatly enjoyed them. I also read your articles in The Times. Now I should very much appreciate it if you could help me.

For the past several months I have had milk in my breasts when flowing. My breasts are sore and feverish. Since I have had this condition, the glands in my neck are greatly swollen—at times worse than others.

My menstruation is regular but the last two months I have passed a sort of meaty substance not like clots.

During the month there is often a tremble in the womb.

The pressure on the bladder is so great it has to be emptied dozens of times a day, especially if I do too much walking.

Upon awakening, I have a nauseated feeling but I do not vomit. It passes away.

I always feel tired and worn out.

My youngest child is twelve years old. I am thirty-four years old.

Could my trouble be pregnancy that was not carried longer than the first month?

Thank you kindly. A READER.

The above communication illustrates some excellent points in physiology. I cannot diagnose the trouble as this department does not attempt to make diagnoses but merely to explain physiological actions.

The sexological apparatus of the body is intimately connected, one part with the other—nervously, and probably through the internal secretions. Menstruation and the sensitivity as well as the activity of the breasts are directly correlated.

The inception of prgenancy starts breast glandular development. The onset of menstruation produces changes in the breasts of a sufficient nature to start breast function.

Under ordinary conditions of good health, the breasts are merely a trifle more sensitive with menstruation and undergo enlargement only with the advent of pregnancy. They should not secrete at any time except with the de-

ARE YOU EATING BLINDFOLDED?

Do you fully realize the importance of eating the correct food? Everything you do in life is largely dependent on the kind of food you eat. It will make you or break you. Good food will build glowing health. Poorly chosen food will ruin your health. What kind do you eat? Do you know, or are you one of those millions who eat anything and everything, and regret it later? We'll tell you how we remove the blindfold from our patrons' eyes at the Health Cafeterias.

Our Food Index

We have inaugurated a new service which is proving a sensation. It is unparalleled . . . nothing has ever before been done like it. The Food Index system. It makes intelligent and economical food selection easy. The items on the serving tables are plainly marked for price and type, such as: normalizing, building, and laxative. Take advantage of this wonderful innovation for at least one week, and see how quickly you feel better.

The primary result we strive for in preparing our foods is healthfulness. The markets are combed daily by our capable dieticians for only grade A fresh fruits and vegetables. The life-giving natural mineral juices and salts and vitamins are retained through our method of cooking. More flavor is retained by our process,too.

Special 50c Dinner
Served every evening between 4:30 and 8:00.

HEARTBREAK HOUSE

By Fannie Hurst

LADY tourists with Baedekers and misanthropic men with sufficient income to retire and live cheaply in pensions along the resplendent coast of the Riviera, are given to sentimentally referring to the gambling Casino at Monte Carlo, as "Heartbreak House."

Well, there can be no doubt that out of this storied mansion of chance armies of men and women have stumbled to tragedy of one sort or another.

The case of Gentleman Dawes was one that stood out, even on the crowded ledgers of the debit stories that checker up the past of the brilliant little principality, which is set like a painted drop-curtain against the incredible foreground of the Mediterranean.

Gentleman Dawes came to Monte Carlo at the age of forty-five, from a town in Colorado where he had amassed a fortune of $500,000 in a staple mercantile business. His visit to Monte Carlo was more or less accidental, nothing more than part of a tour along the French Riviera, during his first trip abroad, after his retirement from the business to which he had devoted thirty-five years of his life. It was literally his first vacation, the rather typical case of a self-made American trying to learn how to play.

In Dawes's case this was difficult. Thirty-five years that included his early boyhood of toeing the mark to routine, business responsibility, heavy decisions and the growing burdens of success, had produced a prematurely white, socially timid, and wholly unplayful individual. Shy to a degree that made him appear suave, delicate as a woman in manner, exhibiting none of those aggressive qualities which had made him a success in business, the middle-aged, well-dressed, easy-spending American, who drifted into Monte Carlo, was just one more unremarkable member of his pleasant tribe.

One week later however, Gentleman Dawes as he was dubbed overnight, was not only the talk of the gossipy Riviera, but the American press, with especial emphasis in his home city, carried the ever-tragic and dramatic story of a man who has gambled away a large fortune to the banks of Monte Carlo.

In exactly eight days, Dawes had lost to the green baize tables the sum of $485,000 dollars. It was one of those spectacular debacles which happen every so often in the little unreal principality along the sea.

When he walked into the brilliant gambling salons his first night at Monte Carlo, something inside Hermann Dawes which had never before been stirred, caught fire. For the first time in a bachelor life of hard work, lonely leisure, insular pastimes, he tasted the winey pleasures of chemin-de-fer, baccarat, roulette; sniffed the exciting dust of chance, experienced the untellable thrill that catches a man at the pit of the stomach, as he places gold in the lap of fate. Within two hours after his arrival, Dawes, who had never gambled in his life, discovered that he was a gambler; Dawes, whose business success was due to his conservatism, and who had never even turned a playing card, found himself on the way to becoming a tragedy of Monte Carlo.

After that, his case went the way of many before him. Broken, broke, dazed by devastation, lacking the impulse and the courage to return home, the next fourteen years of his life were to be spent within the white shadow of the house of his doom.

Monte Carlo has a way of making a bow to these derelicts of hers. She does not cast them off as ruthlessly as the storied legends go. For those fourteen years of his life, every month, out of the coffers of the gambling house, there came to the bowed little gentleman living in a back-street pension of the town of his undoing, an allotment of 500 francs. Scarcely enough to keep his body and soul together, but an assurance, at least, of his board and keep. Twenty dollars a month, for a man whose fingers had once closed over the reassuring fortune of $500,000. To abet that, he obtained a position as night elevator-operator in one of the large hotels. Automatically then, since no employee in the city of Monte Carlo may play stakes at the gaming tables, this disqualified him for the gaming tables, but, strangely enough, it was as if, after his life lay thus in ruin about him, desire had fled.

For fourteen years, Gentleman Dawes lived his life there, occasionally pointed out as a relic of tragedy. His days passed as simply and uneventfully as if he had not thumbed his nose to fortune, and seen the results of his lifetime come crashing about him like hailstone. Every morning, hatted, spatted, nicely creased in gray, quiet as a moth, gentle, still horribly shy, he walked from his narrow little pension in an obscure, even mean street, to a small adjoining square, where for two francs he took his coffee and petitpain, lunch, constituted joint breakfast and lunch. During the afternoon Dawes, the once important citizen of the thriving Colorado town, loitered about the beaches, dawdled an hour in the park during the band concert, returned to his pension room for refurbishment, dined in a narrow little cafe along the wharf and reported at eight for night duty as elevator man in one of the large hotels.

Grim, tragic, a little horrible, was this life of a man who, in eight brief days, had undone his lifttime of carefully achieved success.

Then, in a life that seemed marked for swift rises and falls of destiny, a woman named Angie Falls, a second cousin of his mother's whom he had met but once, died in Keokuk, Iowa, and left him, as her nearest relative, a fortune of $200,000.

Poor Dawes. It could not be said of him that he took the news unblinkingly. He stuttered, he paled, he broke into thin, womanish tears and manifested a very close equivalent to hysterics. Amazing with what rapidity a galaxy of friends sprang up about the obscure old man! His departure from Monte Carlo for America was the occasion of quite a local celebration. The press of Europe and America took occasion to revive the case. Gentleman Dawes had once more come into his own.

It was just about sixteen months later that a resuscitated Gentleman Dawes, rejuvenated, filled with a new poise and as appealing as ever in the shy, hesitant manner that had always characterized him, returned to the scene of what had been his degradation. Not, however, to Monte Carlo. He was too well known there and to be conspicuous was anathema to Dawes. It was almost as if his flesh literally crept up his bones and his being shuddered. In a pointed goatee, his hair dyed to a sluggish black, he returned to Deauville and the Riviera as James E. Squire, there to recoup and in a way to revenge.

The following week, there was a thin patter of talk along the blue coast. A man named Squire, from the States, had lost within eight days playing the tables between Deauville, Nice and Cannes a neat fortune amounting to no less than $200,000.

Kidney Disease

Dr. Elmer Lee, editor of that excellent little magazine, Health Culture, has written a very fine article on kidney disease which we are printing below. It will no doubt be of interest to the vast numbers suffering from this ailment.

"Premature death is the rule for man, yet he desires long life. When vitality runs low and care grows heavy, gradually the hope for long life is relinquished.

"I am convinced that premature death from disease is preventable, unnecessary, if reason and prudence prevail as man's guide from day to day.

"The body is injured by daily mistakes and these mistakes form the incipient cause, which later develops into sufficient prominence to be apparent to the patient and discoverable by the physician, as symptoms of disease.

"Vitality is affected both by mistakes avoidable and unavoidable. The greatest danger to life arises from the abuse and misuse of food.

"Eating, drinking, air, light, sleep and exercise are common to all. If each one had but the knowledge and the inclination of how to use them for good, would it be possible for everyone to enjoy perfect health and a long life?

"Sickness prevails to such a large extent that the well are looked upon as exceptions to the rule, yet by an exercise of selection and choice for what is better, human destiny can be modified.

"It is in the power of any one, if he but knew it, to appropriate to his use those ways of living which prevent disease and enable him to escape from premature death.

"If this useful information were comprehended and employed, it is possible that pain and sickness which prevail among all classes and of every age, rich and poor, high and low, could be reduced to a minimum.

"Is it reasonable to think that this wide dissemination of invalidism is natural, and if not, where can the blame be placed for what causes it?

"It is universally recognized that nature, perfect and inviolable, performs the processes of the body without mistake or failure, so long as the material for them is provided according to the law which governs man's physical life.

"Disease is directly chargeable to either errors of omission or commission by the individual. Natural method in food supply for the daily requirement is too much supplanted by what is artificial.

"The wider the separation from a state of close dependence upon natural living, the greater the danger of disease.

"By reason of the many diverse views on human health and life, and the consequent variation of recommendations, both for preventing as well as for curing disease, it is a seriously hard matter for the layman or physician to avoid blundering.

"One set of writers insists on the necessity in the diet of flesh food, eggs, milk and cheese, and advocate that these foods should comprise at least one-half of the daily diet.

"Others claim that the proper food is vegetable. To those who so think, meat eating appears contrary to moral and physical health and a cause for degeneration of both body and mind.

"The food question is far from settled. Its discussion has antagonized peoples, religions, and governments for ages. Food that is unfavorable will cause disease. Such as live upon plant food, live moderately, and adopt water for their drink, fare best; so far as I am able to determine.

"Wrong eating and drinking prepare a soil suitable for disease. Too much eating and too little exercise will clog the system. Indulgence in alcoholics and tobacco will also lead to disease.

"Health can only accompany a sound body. Any impairment of health will affect every tissue of the body to some degree. The beginning of disease is in the stomach, and no other place, as a general rule.

"Disease of infants and children is nothing else than stomach disease due to mistakes in feeding. The error in feeding initiates the beginning of disease.

"Bright's disease is a form of stomach disease and may begin at any period of life. Albumin in the urine is one factor in the diagnosis, but not sufficient in itself. The more important signs are frequent urination, weakness, loss of weight, and presence of tube casts of the kidney in the urine.

"By casts are meant bodies formed of albumin or fatty matter from the blood, in the tubes of the kidneys, taking the shape and sizes of these molds or tubes, and which, after a suitable interval, separate and are found in the urine.

"Fatty epithelia from the kidneys, as fat in the form of globules deposited in the urine, is also a symptom of Bright's disease.

"When albumin, tube casts, fatty epithelia, and progressive debility, are found in a given case, the diagnosis is reasonably certain that it is Bright's disease.

"Whether these signs are directly or indirectly the result of arterial fatty degeneration, the original cause is in the stomach that requires recognition and treatment.

"It is practically a disease of fatty, degeneration produced by improper food.

"Stop the excess of fat and fat-making articles of diet and so regulate the food as to prevent fats, and fatty epithelia. Eat more green leaf foods. Eat according to the need, more or less of such foods, dependent upon occupation and season, for good results from food treatment.

"Nature will of itself stop the destructive accumulation of fatty degeneration, provided the food is of a suitable nature and vitality has not run so low as to prevent restoration.

"With a knowledge that deranged kidneys were caused by indigestion, the practical question to the patient is, What change is necessary in the mode of living to prevent further degeneration and what will restore the system to a healthy condition?

"The plan of treatment by medication still advocated by some physicians is responsible for a failure to cure Bright's disease. It is a tractable disease in the earlier stages. With a simple dietary treatment, recovery in Bright's disease can be expected in a large proportion of the patients. It is certain that even without special treatment many cases will recover.

"It is desirable to avoid the use of drugs as they are likely to increase debility by disturbing digestion. It is necessary to enforce such rules of diet as will reduce to a minimum nitrogenous waste, fatty waste, which finds its escape chiefly by the kidneys.

"Relief is to be sought by omission of flesh, fish, fowl, and other animal food, coffee, tea, and other stimulating drinks; such articles of diet cause excess of albumin, fat, urea, uric acid, and tissue excrement. A diet of cereal and vegetable broth, vegetables, and fruit, will often be sufficient treatment. Stewed fruit is to be preferred.

"Of diuretics plain water is best. The blood in disease of the kidneys is charged with an excess of food waste, due to incomplete digestion. It devolves upon the kidneys to remove the waste.

"The kidneys, as a consequence acquire a turbulent and abnormal activity. They become congested, the tubes get choked with mucus, pathogen (Powell) and inflammatory disease is established.

"Stomach disease is present in supposedly healthy persons; it excites little concern, and often escapes recognition by the medical attendant as the first cause of kidney disease.

"Failure to comprehend its significance, or cure, at its inception, lead to disease complications. Unnatural diet and insufficient ex-

BUNIONS

We have invented a day and night appliance for bunions and overlapped toes, and we have ever reason to believe it will correct nine cases out of ten.

The night splints are worn while sleeping and the muscles are relaxed, to stretch the contracted tendons that distort the toes and cause this hideous deformity.

The day reducing appliance shields the bunion, hides the deformity and holds the toes in proper alignment and the normal traction for the bones will be re-established and in a short time the bunion disappears completely and forever.

MAUDIE

By Ada Jack Carver

IT CHANCED to be at Phyllis's house, after ten or twelve years, that once again I encountered poor Maudie Turner.

There had always been something persistent, unquenchable about Maudie Turner. I mean, she was, under stress of any situation, so terribly as God (or was it her frail, erring mother?) had made her, without thought of change or betterment. She had been a classmate of mine in high school, a girl whom people used to remember vaguely as the daughter of that silly Alice Winters, who, in turn, was related to the Old River Winters, a fine and proud old family back in steamboat days . . . People were wont to speak of Maudie distrustfully. "Maudie Turner? . . . Let me see. Didn't her mother run away with another woman's husband and join a show?"

Throughout high school, the shadow, the frail fragrance of this pretty, erring mother clung to Maudie, poor solid old Maudie, who was a plump and ineffectual creature, her every movement comic and futile, her cheeks habitually puffed with caramel candy. And yet among us in school she enjoyed distinction of a sort, for Maudie "took orders" for a certain popular though questionable line of cosmetics, from the sale of which it was understood she was putting herself through school. From Maudie's book-satchel order blanks and beauty ads were constantly dropping; and there was always about her the acrid scent of pink soap.

Maudie, ignored on the campus, was driven to solicit trade in the classroom, possessing a number of grimy placards issued her by her firm. Most often it would be in English literature, under Miss Vance's nose—Miss Vance, who, engrossed in Shelley or Keats, was unseeing, entirely oblivious: "We look before and after . . . and pine for what is not—" I can see old Maudie now, her round pale eyes very solemn and furtive over the rim of her desk, as she lifted before a "prospect" this arresting slogan: "How Would You Like to Be Beautiful?" . . . Always, I am sure, I shall think of Shelley and Maudie Turner in the very same breath, and with laughter . . . Miss Vance's voice droned on, and Maudie's victim would stare, entranced, and nod in glad affirmation. (Who would not like to be beautiful, if it be the spring o' the year?) Whereupon Maudie, adroit in her methods, would advance what in the trade was called a "follow-up" card, arranged in her own round scrawl. "Then Meet Me Behind the Hedge at Recess, and I'll Show You How."

Those trysts behind the hedge at recess! "The Magnolia Bloom is for pimply skins," Maudie would state, importantly, inwardly scornful. "You put it on like this" (dab, dab) "on top of the Pink Petal Cream."

In spite of her bleaching creams and her lotions, I seem to remember Maudie forever ablush—a dark, unbecoming stain that seeped through her skin, as if from some inner despair. "Pudd'n," the boys used to call her, down in the grades; and often, with cruel implication, "Georgie, Porgie, Pudd'n' Pie, kissed the boys and made them cry!"

It came as a sort of shock, I recall, when in writing the junior class prophecy I stumbled upon the astounding fact that Maudie was "boystruck." There was something—indecent about it. (What a silly, insensate practical joker old Mother Nature is!) Blandly enough in the class prophecy, I had meted out fame and fortune for the rest of the class; but lacking inventiveness, imagination, where Maudie was concerned, I had disposed of her something like this: "As for our deserving classmate, Maudie Turner, in but a few brief years she will be a happy housewife, with a nice devoted husband and two children."

The morning this prophecy was read Maudie waylaid me. She had a broad, worried face, a nubby nose, and yellowish, limp-looking hair. Her hands clutched and tore at each other. "Say . . . wait a minute—" Maudie, gurgling, thrust into my hands a sticky mass, done up in tinfoil. "Say, have some caramels, won't you?" And into her cheeks, as if she had pressed a button somewhere, flooded the dark, troubled color. There was, however, one very lovely thing about Maudie Turner, even then; her voice when she was on the verge of tears. I have never known another voice like it. I stared at Maudie in astonishment. There was something desperate in her face; and yet she seemed to me, in some way, neater, more compact—as if for the moment, at least, she had reached out and caught at the ends of herself and assembled them all into one complete whole. Her eyes glowed, and she stood upon her ankles square, alert. "Say, did you mean what you said?" She lurched at me and grabbed at my arm; and I saw that all over her tablet were scrawled innumerable hearts and darts and entwined initials. "I mean do you really think some one will fall in love with me . . . some day . . . and marry me?"

At that time, as now, we had a name for girls like Maudie. We called them "pills" and "sticks." Now they are "flat-tires," "dumb-bells." I backed away, choking over her atrocious candy, offended by I knew not what. She was too earnest, too eager. Her big breasts shook, and the tears came . . . Pudd'n Pie! ("Suppose one of the boys should pass, and hear her! I thought, in a panic.)

"That was nice, what you said about me," Maudie hurried on, "about having a home, and children . . . and a nice, devoted husband." Her eyes were lost to me in tears; she was sobbing.

"Why, Maudie—" I pleaded, embarrassed, "everyone gets married." I thought of Phyllis Cadwalleder, for whom in the junior prophecy I had predicted a blithe career on the stage; Phyllis, slender, vivid, with her lazy laugh and her fringed blue eyes. Phyllis, who had implored me in mock horror not to let her go and get married until she had "lived" . . . Somehow, for some reason, all of us took marriage for granted like that. It was all well and good, as a last resort. But first we must live. I am sure I don't know what we meant by "living." With me, I think, it meant going abroad, tasting the earth in fresh places.

Standing there in the corridor with Maudie, I stared out at the campus. The sun, climbing, fell into splendor, taking a bank of warm clouds, gliding the furry tasseled tops of the oak trees. Hyacinths were still in bloom, and there were early roses on all the teacher's desks . . . It was so easy to love, and be loved! Maudie stared out of the window, too, and great yellow tears splashed on her middy-blouse. "She ought to wear the tail of her middy inside," I was thinking. They were happy tears. What cared Maudie for faraway places?

"Say—woman's place is in the home, don't you think?" Maudie continued breathlessly, a little resentfully.

"Why, of course, Maudie," I answered without conviction, even with malice. She grabbed my arm, hung on it . . . Suddenly, quite unexpectedly, as I stared at her, I decided that I liked Maudie Turner. There was something about her, something carried over, no doubt, from her once proud and fine old family.

If ever a creature yearned for safety, affection, that creature was Maudie. Would life vouchsafe her these? . . . We shall see.

The following autumn, our senior year, Maudie did not return to school, and her name was automatically dropped from the class roll. Her mother had died, we learned vaguely, and Maudie, somewhere on the frayed edges of town, was to care for a six-year-old sister. For a few weeks that autumn, I recall, a forlorn Latin text-book with Maudie's name on the title page, and the verb "amo" significantly conjugated, lay around as if begging a home. Then it too disappeared, and Maudie, with her cold creams and powders, was forgotten.

In the next eight or ten years many things happened. A few of us went on to college, a few married and moved away. Phyllis, of course, danced rapturously, straight into comic opera. I went abroad. At intervals, once in Nice at Christmas time, and once in the moon-tortured hills near Genoa, wistful picture postcards caught up with me: "Just to remind you of old times—Maudie Turner;" "From your old devoted classmate, Maudie Turner"; "From You Know Who—Maudie Turner."

Maudie Turner, Maudie Turner—always Maudie Turner. So Maudie, after all, had never married. Not that I gave it a moment's concern. I was, I think, faintly amused, annoyed, by Maudie's insistent friendship. "The collars of her middy-blouses were always soiled," I kept thinking. "Poor old Maudie."

And then, one June morning three years ago when I was at home again, I ran into Maudie Turner at Phyllis's house. Phyllis, who was also at home for a few lazy weeks, had been, back in the days when Maudie trafficked in lipsticks, one of Maudie's best customers. Not that Phyllis wanted to be beautiful (she was already that, heaven knows) but even then the art of make-up bewitched her . . . I was to lunch with Phyllis that day, and we had lounged away the morning on Phyllis's wide south gallery. It was very warm, with fragrance like a steam from all the garden.

The town from Phyllis's south gallery spread east to the river, under high-vaulted trees. From the river the blown, drowsy wind moved over the garden, over bright tubs of petunia and beds of lantana and hot spicy pinks. Suddenly Phyllis laughed, the laugh she had learned on the stage. "My dear, who is that odd-looking creature coming up the drive?"

I looked out and saw through the shrubbery a thick-set, toiling woman in a white blouse and an orange felt hat. We watched her in silence . . . "Her shoes hurt," Phyllis said, yawning, having already dismissed her. The woman was, indeed, limping, her face screwed tight with pain; she was wearing high-heeled "champagne" pumps with involved and extraordinary straps and buckles. These shoes dragged terribly up the long flight of steps to Phyllis's terrace. The woman held against the sun a rose-silk parasol and carried a black leather satchel. Before she rang the bell she set this satchel down upon the terrace and deliberately becalmed her wet and agonized face, dabbing at it with a soiled cotton handkerchief. The blue day waved about her, beat in at her; the glittering sunshine stabbed like a million needles.

"Phyllis," I said, "that's some one we used to go to school with."

Phyllis protested drowsily. "Don't tell me we ever went to school with a woman as old as that!"

"I'm sorry, but we did, my dear . . . That's Maudie Turner, as sure as you're sitting there. With something to sell."

Phyllis laughed. "Of course, Maudie Turner! She used to peddle those greasy cosmetics. Good Lord!"

The bell on Phyllis's front door rang. "The maid is probably asleep," Phyllis murmured. (The incompetence of our servants always amuses Phyllis when she returns to us from the East, gives her a quiet satisfaction. "It's so . . . Southern," she says with her laugh.) Phyllis settled back against the cushions. "Go and buy something from her for the cook, darling—please. She used to be a sort of friend of yours, was she not?"

I went through the French windows into Phyllis's drawing-room, across the hall to the front door. When I opened the door I thought for an instant Maudie had gone; and then I saw that she had slumped down in one of the chairs on the terrace. Also, I saw, with compassion, that she had taken off her abominable pumps . . . "I . . . I thought no one was at home. These shoes—" Maudie, without looking up, indicated the pumps with her old out-thrown gesture. Then, from the white folds of her cheeks, her little solemn eyes looked up at me. For an instant I thought Maudie was going to kiss me.

"Oh!" she said, in her old lovely voice. "I . . . I didn't know you were back. Don't you remember me? I'm Maudie Turner."

"Why, of course I remember you, Maudie."

She sat there in her stocking-feet and blushed, the old black, embarrassed stain. She sat there and wriggled her toes. Her feet were curiously misshapen; they were fat, and little bulbous things stuck out on them. There was a gaping hole in the heel of one stocking; and Maudie, seeing my eyes upon it, stuck her feet under her chair. "I walked right through it this morning," she explained. "Seems like you can't get decent stockings these days, for love or money. And you see—" She began to giggle, and the color deepened, disappeared under her collar. "I—I'm sort of saving up right now. I—my, my!" Maudie flung out her arms. "It's hot today. You could fry eggs in that sun out there."

I sat down in the other wicker chair. "I was just thinking how pretty your blouse is, Maudie," I said. "It's the most elaborate one I've ever seen."

Maudie looked pleased. She plucked and pulled at the blouse with her slow, heavy fingers. "It's a Filipino waist," she explained. "The Philippines embroidered it. You see, I got it with coupons, selling my stuff. It's sort of getting old now, of course, and I don't trust it to suds any more. It's just back from the cleaner's. They charge two dollars, but it's worth it."

"Well, what are you selling now, Maudie?" I asked.

Maudie laughed and threw out her arms. "The same old seventy-six," she replied, stooping over the straps of her satchel. "I thought, when I heard she was back—" Maudie nodded toward Phyllis's impeccable, solid old doorway—"I thought she might like to see me."

Out came the old brazen placard, out came the salves and the creams, the pomades and rouges and lip-sticks. ("Ye gods!" I was thinking. "Is it possible we used to smear that on our faces?")

I selected some powder and sachet for Phyllis's cook. Maudie's voice was singsongy, the warm air languid with June . . . Had I been asleep? For suddenly I realized that some quality in Maudie had changed. She was vibrant, excited. "I just have to tell you . . . You see, you . . . do you remember the prophecy you wrote about me in school?" A little gold tube with a crimson tip rolled out of her lap, fell to the bricks. A talcum-powder box sprayed over her knees. "Say"—the old voice again—"Oh, say, now—of course you re-

The Nervous Child

Among the large number of letters I get from mothers concerning children's problems, the various manifestations of "nerves" occupy a considerable proportion.

Mothers tell me many of the troubles experienced in child-rearing. Some complain of nervous tantrums which their young ones undergo—bad temper, sleeplessness, fits of frenzy, weepiness, sullenness, and so forth. In short, we sum them up in the general classification of "a nervous child."

That abstract thing which we call nerves is an excellent word which covers a multitude of sins.

An arbitrary classification is impossible, for we could write volumes on the causes and reasons for nerves, but that they exist, we know.

I would more or less arbitrarily classify the development of every child as 50 per cent physiological and 50 per cent educational.

Children go down quickly and respond quickly. Their good health is easily disturbed when they are given a bad deal such as in the field of diet, tonsillectomies, laxatives and the other stupidities which mothers force on their children.

They respond wonderfully well when given half a chance. Right environment plays a good part. Mothers are beginning to understand this but they are not beginning to understand as rapidly the more profound educational factors dealing with nerves.

Most of us are so intent and deeply immersed in our own problems—the extraction of a livelihood and our worries—that we have little attention to pay to the growing boys and girls under our care.

They develop nerves by emulation of their parents as well as their own inherent tendencies.

A child gets up in the morning full of energy and pep. He usually awakens two to three hours before the adult members. Is he given something to do? Has he tasks? Has he things with which to play—objectives to accomplish?

Usually not.

His training consists of inhibitions—"Don't do this"—"Keep quiet"—"Get out"—and so on.

He proceeds through the day. He is left largely to his own devices.

Children are not sufficiently ingenious to fill in. They get into mischief. They are scolded and "bawled out"—the customary reaction of asinine mothers.

There is no better way to make a child nervous, to fill him with inhibitions, to make him sneaky and sly, to tell lies, to avoid confidences and to become secretive than such a procedure.

The tendency of most people is to blurt first and think afterward. As a result, the child works under suppression.

The very best educator is one who has to do the least scolding. One can do far more injury to the spirit with ten words and create the nervous child than by almost any other method.

Next comes the typical jazzomania to which most parents subject their children. Why an eight-year-old should be filled up with the dumb plots of the typical movie scenario is more than I can understand.

I think the records show that perhaps 75 per cent of our children under the age of ten go to the movies once or twice a week.

There is time enough to introduce them into the stupidities of our adult life without so early a start. For one good thing they learn, they learn ten bad ones. Yet, it is so doggone easy to ship the children off to the movies! "We are rid of them for a few hours," sighs the mother with exactly the same spirit with which she ships them off to school.

We are all ready and willing to "bawl the dickens" out of our eductors and teachers when the actual reason why our children are nervous and often distorted and misfit in our social environment is because we lack the intelligence or because we are too lazy to handle them ourselves.

This is a blunt statement of the problem.

You ask, What is to be done about it?

We must start with the parents. That is the purpose of this article.

Forget yourselves for a while. Put yourselves in the place of your children. Analyze your relationship to them. Is there sweetness, tolerance, justness, fairness, and above all, a sense of educational responsibility? Or do they, like Topsy, "just grow up?"

Is it enough that you provide food, shelter and clothing and protect them from natural enemies?

This what most children get.

Often, the more magnificent the home, the more complicated the social responsibility and the less interest there is in the children. Maids and governesses, tutors and outsiders train and develop a child.

Great wealth is as much of a curse in child-rearing as great poverty. It is the middle-class child who gets the best deal—the personal attention of its mother and father and the intelligent understanding of educational problems.

Do you know how to keep a child healthily active? If you don't, there are scores and scores of books on the subject. That is one purpose of a library.

There is not a trained librarian of any children's department of any of our city libraries but who could advise you the books to read, the training to get, the courses to take so that you may learn how to keep your child healthily active.

If you want to get at the roots of crime, at the sources of our personal inefficiencies, we must start with the child—your child and mine. If you learn how to do it intelligently, the product you

MAUDIE

By Ada Jack Carver

IT CHANCED to be at Phyllis's house, after ten or twelve years, that once again I encountered poor Maudie Turner.

There had always been something persistent, unquenchable about Maudie Turner. I mean, she was, under stress of any affliction, so terribly as God (or was it her frail, erring mother?) had made her, without thought of change or

"Oh!" she said, in her old lovely voice. "I . . . I didn't know you were back. Don't you remember me? I'm Maudie Turner."

"Why, of course I remember you, Maudie."

She sat there in her stocking-feet and blushed, the old black, embarrassed stain. She sat there and writhed her toes. Her feet were curiously misshapen; member. Think hard! It—it made a lot of difference to me, all through the years."

Scornfully Maudie pitched the can of talcum into her satchel. She mopped at her face. "Gee! It's hot . . . I, well, you see, I've been putting my little sister through school. She finished this May, so now of course . . . Say, don't you remember, what you said?—that I'd go and get married, and have a devoted husband?"

"Of course I remember, Maudie."

"Well—" she drew a long breath, and her eyes popped out. "What do you think? It—it looks as if it were coming true! Funny, isn't it, the way things turn out? He—we've been engaged a long time, you know. But of course, as I told him, I had to put Vera through school first. Adam's got a boat on the river. He hauls things and fishes. I guess we'll be married this fall."

"What is that, please?" she asked him wearily and with scorn.

Maudie wriggled her toes, and her eyes filled with tears. I stared at her throat, her pulsing throat where she kept her strange haunting voice. The wind dropped out of the trees, moved across the grass . . . "He loves me," Maudie whispered. "He—he's in love with me. He says when we're married, I'll have to stop peddling things around like this . . . Say, I think woman's place is in the home, don't you?"

Maudie reached for the lipstick at her feet, and her blouse split under the arms. "That's what I've tried to teach Vera. I tell her sometimes: Vera, you like running round now, but you'll get tired of all that some day. Vera'll be married herself, before very long. She's going out with a swell boy. Sid isn't steady, devoted like Adam. But he's handsome, and makes good money, too. And Vera's crazy about him." Maudie, with practiced hand, began to sweep her boxes and bottles into her satchel. "I wish you could know Adam . . ." Her hands clutched at each other, and the deep, sudden red stained her cheek. "It—it seems so queer, somehow—your writing about us, like that. And it's all coming true."

She reached under her chair for her shoes, her eyes shining with tears.

"I wonder if you'd come out, and have supper with us—say, Friday night, and meet Adam. You see I feel sort of close to you, on account of all that has happened. I mean, that prophecy you wrote about me getting married. It's funny the way you hit it . . . Could you, would you come out Friday night and meet Adam?"

I don't believe there was ever a creature with such troubled eyes. They seemed to say, "You saw it, foretold it—long ago. Do you think it will really come true?" I looked at Maudie's throat, exquisite in hue . . . "Why, of course, I'll come."

Maudie's little four-room house was bedecked for the supper. The geranium, rather droopy looking, had been removed from the window, and placed on the parlor table; and disposed about the room, on the table and chairs, were innumerable pieces of "fancy-work," in intricate patterns. Maudie greeted me with effusiveness, but with an air of detached absorption. "Just sit down," she said, "and make yourself at home till Adam comes. Vera, she's out with friends. You see—" Maudie laughed, threw out her arms—"my mind's on the supper. I just can't let go and enjoy myself till supper's out of the way." She lingered a moment, wiping her hands on her bungalow apron (she had not as yet "dressed for the evening.") "Say," Maudie exploded, "you mustn't expect the Prince of Wales when Adam comes. Adam's just human. Vera says I carry on something awful when I talk about Adam. He—he's not good-looking, like Vera's beau. But Adam's steady. He's true as bread." She laughed and pushed back her heavy wet hair. "We've been going together nine years. I call that pretty faithful."

I sat down on Maudie's sofa, in Maudie's parlor, and stared at the picture of Maudie's mother. The little house was full of hot rich odors. "I dare say Maudie looks like her father," I thought. "I can see him, in her; a large soft man, who used to bring caramels home in a brown-paper bag."

When Adam arrived Maudie introduced us through a crack in the door. "Meet my fiance," Maudie said; and then, in the very same breath. "You two will have to excuse me till the biscuits are done."

Adam was a tall, shy, swarthy young man who smelled of rancid fish. His eyes looked about and he coughed and sat down.

"When he isn't looking," I thought, "I shall study him. I shall see what Adam is made of." Somehow, in view of the junior class prophecy, I felt that I had created Adam, conjured him up out of nothing, for poor lonely old Maudie . . . What sort of a man was Adam?

We talked of fish and fishing, and the way Westgate was spreading. "We'll have sewerage soon "Adam said. Adam had feverish, seeking eyes and groping hands. Groping for what, I wondered? There was something, aside from the fishiness—something repulsive, shrunken about him. He began to sniff, to look expectantly toward the door of the wee dining-room. "He likes to eat," I thought. "And he too believes that woman's place is in the home."

It seemed to me that hours passed before Maudie finally stuck her head in and, by means of significant gestures and mysterious winks and whispers, made it known to me that I was to come and button her up in the back. In the bedroom she threw off her house dress, daubed talcum powder under her arms. The Filipino waist, I saw, lay on the bed, stretched out as if for a nap, its arms up over its head. There were other things on the bed a sort of shower of pink and blue silk, frilled out in lace and cheap ribbon. "Vera's," Maudie explained. "She will leave 'em around."

Maudie, with vague interest, stared at herself in a little cracked mirror and screwed up her hair. In the back it swept up in a long silver streak, with a few straggly hairs on her neck. "Vera wants me to cut it," she stated. "Now for my waist." Reverently Maudie reached for the poor, exhausted thing and slid her plump arms into it. As I buttoned it up (there were three buttons off) she sniffed and observed that it would soon have to go to the cleaner's again . . . It was amazing the effect that waist had on Maudie's morale (or was it the thought of Adam, now that supper was done, which caused her to glow so and shine?) She emerged into the hot little parlor a creature of airs and graces and simply silly with love, like a cheap valentine. She seemed to be actually blooming, putting forth frail petals and little green leaves.

Maudie's supper dragged through a heavy half-hour, with Adam eating enormously. There were moments of haphazard formality, followed on Maudie's part by bursts of hysterical gayety. And then the street door opened, and some one came in. "Vera," Maudie explained.

The instant Vera appeared on the threshold I knew what Adam had been groping for. His eyes flew to her, with a dumb delight. She was a pretty thing to look at, slim, exquisitely made, with thick curls and pansy-blue eyes. She slouched into the room and sort of shrugged around in it, while Maudie reached out and pulled and pecked at her as one does at a baby. "This is my little sister," Maudie said. And Vera said, "Pleased to meet you."

The rest of the meal was gayer, although Vera for her part contributed nothing. She was there to be looked at, that was all; and we looked, as cats may look at a queen. Maudie, I remember, served coffee in some odd and vicious little cups that were hard to manage, so that Adam dropped one and broke it. At the sound of it, shattering delicately, Vera shrank back in her chair, and her eyelids quivered. She ate almost nothing. She had a little cameo face, rather white and sick-looking, with the rouge daubed on in splotches. Her hands, blue veined, lay twisted and wistful in her lap, hands that had come down to Vera unlost from the blood of the North River Winters. I was frankly interested in Vera. "She doesn't know the rest of us are here," I was thinking. "Her life is outside of this house."

The meal over, Maudie arose from her chair with a sigh. "Now, go into the parlor," she said, "all three of you, while I wash and clean up a little."

I drove away from Maudie's house, from Westgate, taking the long, river road, where the willows were cool and gray with summer . . . What was Maudie Turner to me, and Adam and Vera? Maudie, and her frail, silly mother; Maudie and Vera, her frail little sister.

It must have been three months later, one warm day in late September, when Maudie telephoned me. Could I, would I, come out that afternoon, about four? It was very important, urgent. Something had happened . . . If I could come out, about four? Maudie's voice suddenly choked, grew lovely, and there was some quality in it—what was it?—a sort of triumph or pride. "Vera's going to be married," Maudie told me. "This afternoon. A very quiet wedding. Would I come?"

I left the telephone with Maudie's voice to haunt me. During the last three months I had had frequent glimpses of Maudie traversing the streets in those champagne pumps, amazingly run-down at heel, her shadow forever tagging along, sometimes in front, sometimes in the rear, sometimes under her feet like a tired little dog. At any time of day you might look out and behold Maudie's flaming, astute little hat, up one street and down another, like a bright brown leaf, until she became a reproach to us who take life easy in summer.

"I'll feel greatly relieved when she's married," I thought, "and my part in this comedy ends. I shall wash my hands of Maudie then."

But, now, here was Vera. With Vera's daintiness in mind, I went into the garden and gathered some roses for her, some tight little buds, exquisitely tinted, and some great blowsy ones for Maudie. Poor old Maudie . . . perhaps now, with Vera out of the way, Maudie could hasten her wedding. . "I shall give her a wedding gift," I thought. "The prettiest blouse I can find."

Westgate was dusty, mud-colored, with a hot wind off of the river . . . It was disconcerting the way old Maudie had clung to me through the years. It was funny, really annoying. Sometimes I found myself thinking of Maudie at parties, perhaps in the midst of a dinner . . . As I drove, looking for Maudie's house, the little colorless bungalows leered at me with an expectant, gossipy look; and from every window red geraniums beckoned, all their little heads together like ladies at a party.

Maudie, when I knocked at the door, opened it for me and took the roses I had brought and stuck them in some waterless vases up on the mantel. From the adjoining bedroom I could hear some one sobbing, tonelessly, as a child sobs, when worn out with grief. "I—I'm so glad you've come," Maudie said. "I don't believe . . . I could go through with it, without you. I—I don't suppose you've heard, of course, but . . . people here in Westgate know." Maudie's voice thickened, and the old black stain crept out on her cheeks.

I stared at her. And Maudie stared at me, a little wonderingly, as if I belonged far back in her far-away childhood. I sat down on the sofa, and Maudie slumped into one of the chairs.

"It seems so kind of funny, doesn't it? —Adam and Vera getting married. Why, Adam helped me to raise her. Many's the time he used to play with Vera, down there on the floor. Sometimes I used to pretend that Adam and me were married and she was our child. Vera was just six, you know, when I took charge of her."

I wanted to laugh. Maudie looked so wretched, and so amazed. And yet there was that something in her voice.

She continued, "I wanted to tell you, so you'd understand. Everybody knows about Vera, out here in Westgate. They . . . they've been horrid about it. And I, when I learned about Vera I said I'd make him marry her, whoever he was. What else could I do? And that very night, they told me, Adam and Vera. I didn't dream it was Adam. I . . . maybe I made a mistake, putting Adam off like that—it ain't right to keep a man waiting."

Suddenly, as we sat there, with Maudie twisting her handkerchief and smiling, I understood, understood the pride, the hint of triumph in her voice. She had, for nine long years, been both loved and desired; and now through her pain she was clinging to this; at least she had this to remember. She was holding Adam's love for her aloft like a banner. In her heart she made herself think of Adam as tragic, tortured with love. And now pushed to the wall. "Of course there was nothing else . . . for poor Adam to do."

I remained for the wedding, and the people who lived next door came in. Vera and Adam were married by the minister of the First Baptist Church of Westgate. Just before the minister came (Adam, it seemed, was going to take Vera away for a week or so) Adam sneaked into the bedroom where we were waiting with Vera. He carried a yellow-straw suit case; and Vera out of cold tear-dimmed eyes looked at the thing. The girl had a few dramatic gestures, and she used them now. "What is that, please?" she asked him wearily, and

GOOD SHORT STORIES

Compiled for The Times Sunday Magazine

Ideal

Gen. Booth of the Salvation Army, when approached on the eternal subject of the unemployed, replied:

"Surprising as it may seem, we are getting more cries for help from men actually employed, but who are in financial difficulty, than we are from men and women who have no jobs at all. They crash because they live beyond their means. This is largely due to the vogue of honeyed advertising and high-pressure salesmanship.

"I have lately come to the conclusion that this world would be better off if Santa Claus came every month and the installment man but once a year."

Limited

Frank Lawrence, who is managing the Hollywood end of Chief Kelley's campaign for Sheriff, was greatly interested in the model kitchen at the electric show in San Francisco.

"Too bad we can't run campaigns by electricity," he told Chief Kelley afterward. "Why, you could do absolutely everything in that kitchen by electricity except fire the cook."

Flop

A story is told on the late Enrico Caruso. Quite a friendship had sprung up between the singer and his New York tailor but the latter had never heard Caruso sing, so one day the great tenor gave his needle-stitching friend a ticket. Next day he called at the tailor shop and asked how he liked it.

"Oh, it was awful! It was terrible!" wailed the tailor.

"Awful," repeated Caruso in astonishment, "why, the audience demanded encore after encore."

"Yes, yes," stormed the tailor, "but your coat! It was too tight under the arms!"

Tenacious

While Bobby Jones was "warming up" on one of the famous golf courses in Scotland, in preparation for his championship matches, he observed an elderly Scotchman stalking over the course each day.

"What's that old chap doing?" asked Bobby when he could no longer contain his curiosity. "He never plays and yet he goes over the course as carefully as if he were a track walker for an American railroad."

"Oh, aye," said the starter, "that'll be Auld Willie. He lost a new ball on the fourth, in 1918."

Bashful

Prof. Lowell of Harvard, in response to the often-made query as to whether or not a college education was good for everyone, always insisted:

"Whether the student learns anything or not, he acquires more poise at college than anywhere else, and poise is one of the most valuable assets in the daily contacts of life. I am confident that no college student would have found himself in the predicament of the young man who didn't know what to talk about when his partner decided to 'sit out' the dance.

"The poor chap fussed and squirmed and finally said in desperation: 'Do you have indigestion?'

"The girl looked at him queerly. 'No,' she replied shortly.

"'What a pity,' murmured the young man, 'I know such an excellent remedy.'"

Ebb

The San Diego divorce court suddenly came to life. It was the wife who was suing, and for a moment they thought she was a poet.

"My husband," she declared, "reminds me of the way the ocean is at times."

"You mean he's so grand," encouraged the Court without cracking a smile.

"No," snapped the woman, "I'm referring to ebb tide—when it's all going out and nothing coming in."

Opportunist

Charles Cole, of the Union Pacific, was talking about efficiency.

"Of course efficiency is a wonderful thing. It is an essential of successful business, but the so-called 'Efficiency Expert' is seldom the man who injects this necessary asset into a business. Some of them are silly.

"A young man who claimed to be one of these experts was sent to me by a friend. I was not impressed and the chap tried to sell himself. 'It's this way,' he explained. 'You put a man on the job he's fitted for; you make a virtue of his failings. What I mean is this:

"'Suppose a man has insomnia. I would make him a night watchman. Then again, if I found a fellow whose hand had begun to shake from smoking too many cigarettes, I'd make him a mandolin player.'"

Increasing

Rupert Hughes declares that reading is on the increase.

"We have more and more 'best sellers' and magazines number their circulations by millions instead of thousands. I may modestly add that I am receiving more royalties than ever before.

"And yet, even I did not realize how popular reading had become until the other night when I myself wanted to read and found it necessary to call on a neighbor and borrow back one of my own books."

Expensive

Offered as evidence of the finest chivalry New York has produced, some friends of Patrick McGovern, who is digging the new water tunnel, which, when completed, will be the biggest water-carrying bore in the world, called on him one day and asked to be taken down "into the hole."

As soon as they got to the bottom, the workmen began to boil out of the tube from every possible exit and McGovern explained that these human moles have a superstition that death will follow the visit of a woman. It chanced that there were three of them in the McGovern party. It seems that the curse is only to be counteracted by an immediate visit to the upper air.

For almost an hour, not a stroke of work was done in the tunnel so that McGovern's courtesy cost him a lot of money.

Customary

"Cupid" Sparks was commenting on the working out of the so-called "Anti-gin Marriage Law" which provides for a delay between the stated intent to marry and the actual ceremony itself.

"It has proven a good law," he said, "and halted a great many of those 'marry - in - haste - repent - at - leisure' unions. I always have in mind the wise little girl, who, when an ardent lover asked her to marry him, replied:

"'I probably will, but just the same, I want a week in which to think it over.'

"'You'll have lots of time to think it over, after we're married,' he protested.

"'Yes,' she agreed, 'that's what most of the married women tell me.'"

Changed

A boyhood friend recently called on John D. Rockefeller. They had not met in over twenty years and John D. was genuinely delighted to let his memory revert to the old swimming hole days. The friend was practically a poor man, just the average American working man, and was highly pleased at the cordial reception the aged billionaire had given him. As he was about to leave he remarked:

"It's been simply great, this talking over old times together, but the thing that pleases me most is that great wealth hasn't changed you a bit."

"No," assented Mr. Rockefeller, "I think that personally I haven't changed a bit, but wealth has changed most of my friends in relation to me." Then he added with a chuckle:

"It's like this. After I got rich I became eccentric where I used to be impolite and delightfully sarcastic when I used to be rude."

Memories

King George is an out and out Royalist and yet he finds the etiquette of being King quite irksome at times. Close friends tell these two stories to illustrate these apparent conflicts in his disposition.

A proposal by Winston Churchill to call a new battleship H.M.S. Oliver Cromwell, after the man who was a party to the beheading of Charles I, was promptly turned down by King George.

Quite in contrast is the story of his phonograph, which he likes to play on winter evenings at Buckingham Palace. On one such evening, in the royal family circle, he put on a record of a military band selection. At the end of the number, the band began the national anthem "God Save the King."

The Queen and others present immediately sprang to their feet at attention. His Majesty gave a snort of irritation and stopped the phonograph.

Hopeless

What with politics bubbling and the primaries getting closer and closer, Sheriff Traeger is a busy man. Hence he was more or less burnt up when he tried to make several hurry-up calls in Los Angeles late the other afternoon.

"I didn't make many," he grinned ruefully, "but I did discover one thing: A pedestrian is a man in Los Angeles trying to find a place to park his car after four-thirty."

Catty Business

By Eleanor Minturn James

A lynx cat.

Three trained young cats.

"FORTY WILD CATS!" Unless you have been thinking in catty terms as you motor along, that sign board might be a surprise. But this is a land of quick contrasts. One minute orange trees, peppers, palms and magnolias, acres of lawn and terraces, then presently the edge of the desert, double-jointed joshuas like an army of tipsy greenish scarecrows, chaparral, greasewood, yuccas, bridal-white. Then you stumble on the wild cats—caged, of course.

Lynx and bobcats—the largest collection anywhere.

This is the way the story goes. There was once an Illinois man who craved the uncertainties of a life spiced with danger. He tried being fire chief, steeplejack, rodeo rider, cow puncher and finally fur trapper. Fur trapping suited him perfectly. But civilization will have its way with most men for a time. He quieted down to being traffic cop and later to the uneventfulness of operating a gas station. However, once a fur trapper always one. He longed for the old life. So one dark dawn before anyone was apt to clamor for gas, oil or water—for San Fernando Boulevard had not yet taken on its day's traffic—he set a trap for wild cats back in the mountains. The first cat he caught he made a pet of, anyway he kept it for a curiosity, for wild cats are seldom tamed. And then, as his padded traps were sure-fire, it was not long before C. R. Ullom, known as "Jiggs" by his friends," had a wild cat farm in full climb and sold his gas station.

Now, to step inside that wild cat cage, alone, without the trainer to intercede for you, is something of an experience, if you care for that sort of thing. There is not a toothless or clawless cat in the fold! Forty pairs of yellow eyes white-rimmed, black-centered, all fastened compellingly on you. You have the wild cats' undivided attention. The stillness of these motionless Sphinxes seems ominous. But they have no idea of going after you. They simply mind their own business and expect you to do the same. Forty pair of muscular forelegs, stiff and straight with horizontal black stripes; forty black triangular noses in white furry upper lips black-speckled and bristling with whiskers like white aigrettes. Each feline head is felt conspicuously as single. All the cat faces are separate, like kids' faces thrust forward when they are posing for the camera.

Then Nosey comes stalking down the long cage to have a "look-see,"—the proverbial cat and her curiosity. Nosey is like an old lady, wandering in her mind, who potters about the house all day with business-like aimlessness, trotting up to every visitor again and again to peer in his face, unresponsibe, unremembering. When you learn the cage door is locked behind you, which is not quite what was counted on when you stepped in for a moment, you look about even more guardedly.

"Look, that cat over there! He's going to spring, sure enough!" You know it's a little joke of the trappers, or at least you hope it is. Nevertheless you turn warily around and—look into the sleepy, tolerant eyes of a big lynx cat at your elbow., That's Jumbo, the largest cat in the cage. Down at the far end of the cage, where are withdrawn the more belligerent felines, comes a low, steady growl from a few grouches who are habitually annoyed by every cat, every human. Then eventually you indicate your desire to leave the cage, endeavoring not to appear in any hurry.

From the outside looking in, instead of the other way around, it is evident that the cage has much good drama material-plot, character and all kinds of atmosphere, everything that goes to make "good theater" as they say. Meet the lead, Jumbo, the king, and Judy, another beautiful lynx cat who plays the feminine role opposite him. Judy is slim, svelte, languorous, like Cleopatra; always at Jumbo's side on her apple box throne—each cat has a private apple box to curl up on or in for kitty naps. Over there—Maggie biding her time, gazing lovingly at Jumbo as a cat is allowed to look at a king, hoping some day to displace the proud and haughty Judy. Snarling and growling, his ears laid menacingly is the one-eyed villain, a real melodrama villain, whose name should have been Lord Nelson but is Jiggs. Jiggs only had one eye when he was taken on. His disposition had been permanently ruined before he joined the troupe. Aware of the eternal triangle, Jumbo, Judy and Maggie, Jiggs waits maliciously to breed trouble. Judy, like many feminine human cats, gets discontented occasionally. At heart she is a vamp, devoted as one side of her is to her Jumbo. In her unfaithful thoughts she gazes through the bars of the cage possessively now and again at the proud, indifferent Buster outside in the big, big world entirely footloose much of the time. Buster disproves the claim that a grown wild cat cannot be tamed, for Buster is tame. Judy does not despise him in the least for being something of a renegade amenable to human touch. She envies him. She feels life with him, on the outside, might be broader, that he could give her a freedom Jumbo is unable to. She has watched Buster's diet of milk and steak, which she suspects of being filet mignon. A menu certainly choicer than her own of burro meat and golden carp, the latter not as epicurean as it sounds. Of course, Tom over there, the sage widower, might prove intriguing. Tom's wife, Specks, has left him to be supported in an apartment on the outside by a fairy godmother—Specks and her children! Judy is jealous of Specks. Specks is running away with all the curtain calls. It's Specks the reporters interview now, not Judy. For Specks has babies!

Another fallacy. Never has a wild cat been known to breed in captivity. But Specks did. The Ullums have had her three years. She is one of their first cats. A few days ago she had three baby wild cats, as tiny and as sweet as the baby young of a house cat. Mrs. Ullom tried unsuccessfully to secure a domestic wet nurse for these offspring of a wild mother. Specks does not want her babies even looked at. While moving the little cat family from one box to another the trapper inadvertently touched one of the babies, by way of helping. Instantly Specks, a good mother, but erratic, killed that kitten. It had been polluted by human touch. The babies—now that this lesson has been learned—will never be touched again until they are permanently taken away from Specks. When this close-watching mother leaves her infants for a moment to eat at the other end of her cage she covers them up gently, skilfully with pine needles. A few times, particularly when hungry and so in a hurry, Specks forgot to do this, letting the baby cats be seen. Mrs. Ullom can hardly wait until they are weaned as she hopes for great success training them. She chats softly with Specks, who meows back responsively like any fireside tabby trying to tell all about her new experience of motherhood.

Mrs. Ullom is even more of a cat-fan than her husband. She dotes on cats, understanding them well, being tolerant of their quick-tempered shortcomings. A lover of all cats, she has many tame ones about her, too. She much prefers her adventurous husband to be trapping wild cats than following the more precarious profession of steeplejack, when she was his helper then, as now, controlling the ropes and pulleys which meant life or death to him as he swung on a seatboard far up in the air, looking, as she said, no bigger than a sparrow, gilding church spires.

So, she mothers the wild cats, all those who will let her and her husband gets his fun trailing, treeing and trapping them. He has fourteen cat dogs, eight of them trained bloodhounds, some of them Walker dogs—fox hounds—and some black-and-tans. Back in the mountains he sets his No. 2 steel traps, preferably on a narrow cat trail. Over a hollow which he digs and camouflages with leaves and a sprinkling of dirt he lays two sticks about two feet long and two inches in diameter, eight inches apart. In stepping over these sticks the wild cat stumbles into the waiting hollow, where a deftly concealed trap, heavily padded with rags and reinforced with wire, lays hold of him firmly enough not to let him get away, but lightly enough not to injure him. At other times he trees his game, following his bloodhounds on his pony, Poncho. The other night he trapped seven males. He has a few more males than females on his farm. More males are available because they are inclined to be out nights, as he says, going places and seeing things! Once treed by a cat-dog the feline is secured by means of a pipe with a light noose of chain at its end. This combination is very effective for the pipe holds at bay the cat, violently clawing with its heavy, brutal claws while the chain noose slipped over his head holds him tightly but not hurtfully around the neck. Then Ullom has his cat.

The dogs on the cat hunts are always exposed to rattlesnakes. One black-and-tan, Jack, was bitten recently by a rattler. Although permanganate of potash saved his life he was left with a bad limp. The funny and very human thing about Jack is that when he is loafing idly around camp he limps conspicuously. Once in the mountains trailing cats he never limps a particle!

A small gathering of raccoons near by try to steal the wild cats' thunder, and they are certainly a three-ring circus in themselves. There is Tootsie the pet 'coon who likes to ride in an auto and will sit up and beg like a dog. Tootsie is spoiled and fat. She adores the sweets people bring her. And she likes watermelon, too. Peppermint life-savers are the only things she does not wash before eating—for it's a habit of coons to wash everything they eat. She probably sees that life-savers come in hermetically sealed packages! Washing her food is no inconvenience for her; she has her own running water—for she is chained to a tree beside a creek. One young 'coon in a nearby cage—through one corner of which the same creek is allowed to flow for the same food-washing purpose—was introduced to his first

Raising a Lawn

By James J. Montague

HAVING started to raise a lawn every year for fifteen years, I feel in a position to instruct other people in that branch of horti—or arbo—of swardoculture.

There is nothing so beautiful as a lawn—an English lawn or even an American lawn—if it is really beautiful. Grass, as everyone knows, "comes creeping everywhere." Theoretically one has only to give it a start, and it will do the rest. Any seed catalogue will tell you how it can be done—any gardener will show you how to do it.

The trouble is that neither is disinterested. If the seed catalogue gave full and complete and accurate information, its necessity for publication would soon be over, for everybody would have nice reseeding lawns, and there would be no need for buying any more seed. If the gardener was on the level with you he would soon be out of a job. And gardeners, having eight or ten little children to support through the winter months when said children can't get jobs as caddies, don't like to be out of jobs.

A lawn, as everybody knows, ought to be a wide, verdant stretch of emerald, unspotted by any dandelion, plantain, chickweed, burdock, cinque-foil or "escapes" from neighboring gardens.

That is what it ought to be. It never is, but the idea is to hope that it will be from the first faint flush of spring till the earliest flutter of snowflakes.

One of the difficulties in bringing about this desideratum is wife trouble. Wives are too often addicted to flower gardens, and insist upon planting them as borders of the lawn—borders which steadily encroach and even now and then jut out into the yard like headlands in a peaceful ocean.

Now in a lawn anything that is not a blade of grass or a trefoil of clover is technically a weed. It may be any one of the several thousand flowering plants that a wife will, in the absence of a husband, set out here and there. After it flowers it begins to produce seed pods which presently open and give to the winds of heaven all manner of seeds which embed themselves in the lawn and there burst into far more luxuriant growth than they can possibly attain in the garden. If you permit these things to flourish, your lawn is ruined. If you do not permit them to flourish, it is likely there will be words, and one word, as the proverb accurately informs us, leads to another.

Next to wife trouble, the major difficulty is beetles. A beetle is relatively harmless when she is zooming through the air, or beating her wings against the screen, but when she begins hatching a Mormon brood underground she becomes your mortal enemy. She comes from all sorts of foreign climes, usually by ship, spends her summers eating large holes in the leaves of your ornamental trees—if that is the kind that the tree man sold you—and then dives into the ground and deposits eggs. Left to themselves, these eggs hatch into tiny grubs which, having inherited an appetite from their parents, begin to gnaw your grass roots. Grass cannot exist without roots any more than cubes can, so presently you note large bare patches on the face of the sward, and know that something must be done.

The thing to be done is to buy some particularly virulent poison and scatter it over the grass, to be washed in by the rains, if they come, or by the hose if they do not. One kind of poison will kill the Japanese beetle, or at least make him so ill that he will suffer from pains in the stomach and loss of appetite. But it will serve only as a nourishing diet for the Asiatic beetle. You may suggest that it would be an excellent plan to mix both kinds of poison and scatter them together, but that never seems to work, probably because each neutralizes the other's virulence. What you must do is to kill as many Japanese beetles as you can afford to kill, and then go after the Asiatic beetles. This requires time and patience, but it is better than digging with a pocket knife after each particular grub and putting him to death when he lies wriggling on the surface.

Then you must take a weed digger and go after the weeds.

By expending a few hundred dollars and much of your own time you can reduce the beetle peril to a minimum. Then you must take a weed digger and go after the weeds. I estimate that weeds will spring up a thousand at a time in any fair-sized suburban lawn, and grow at the rate of an inch a day until exterminated.

When you have exterminated them, you wait for a week until all your neighbor's weeds have blossomed and gone to seed and planted themselves in your soil. Then you must go after them in the same fashion. By that time you will have shooting pains in the back, and become misanthropic and morose, but you will be making progress.

In the autumn, if you have done everything I have suggested, the lawn will be green in spots, provided there has been plenty of rain, or you have mortgaged the house to pay a water bill. You go out and look at it and say to yourself that in another three or four years you will have a beautiful, glossy lawn, and then one morning you see the first menacing bunch of crab grass.

Crab grass does not attack your lawn in the spring. It holds back its onsets with rare generalship, not firing, figuratively, till it sees the whites of your eyes. Along in August it thrusts up its tentacles, pushes them out a little farther each day till they are inextricably interwoven with the lawn grass.

Presently the yard is spotted with irregular patches of the newcomer, which has so cunningly crept here and there that you were unable to detect it. Then of a sudden it mushrooms out in all directions, and your lawn is a pattern of blotches which you cannot look upon without pain and disgust.

The worst of it is that after the crab grass has made sure that it has killed all the other vegetation in the vicinity by cutting out all easements of light and air, it dies, leaving bare patches of dirt where it once sprang so joyously. Of course, if you have unlimited time, you can pull it up and plant new lawn seed where it grew, but you only pull up the outer limbs and flourishes. The roots remain in the ground, to wait for their chance another year.

Time was when lawns were common and beautiful, and the sound of the mower was heard in the land. But that was very long ago. Today if you really want a lawn, take it into the parlor or on the sun porch and raise it under glass. Then, if you are very careful, you may have a couple of square feet of grass that will be a delight, as well as a novelty.

The Bible that Grew in an Attic

corrected before the work goes to press, but the mistakes of the scribes stand. The corrections were placed above the lines. The corrected text was consistently followed in translating the ancient manuscripts, which course was found to be justified by the fact that the corrected texts of "Codex Sinaiticus" agreed with "Codex Vaticanus" in nearly every instance. To find an editor of the fourth century, with evidence before him better than any possessed by us today, deliberately changing a reading, and then to find that reading, as corrected, in agreement with another text of paramount value, was an assurance of accuracy in translation of original texts.

With the completion of the translation and collation, the task of producing the book remained. The World War was still in progress. Type manufacturers were not interested in such inconsequentials as cutting fonts of Greek type, and no fonts were available of ancient Greek type—such letters as were used by the scribes in the ancient manuscripts. Now the experience gained through his years of service in the printing industry stood Mr. Knoch in good stead. This work must not be held up for want of the necessary type. So he bought short pieces of annealed tool steel, and with file, punch, and an infinite patience made the type by hand. Each one must be carefully calipered in order to insure exact reproductions. After these models were tempered, they were used as dies to sink impressions in copper plates which, in turn, were used as matrices in casting the type. In this slow and primitive, but exceedingly efficient manner, the alphabet was produced.

The plan was to print the New Testament in exact duplication of the ancient Greek text and to print beneath each Greek line the true and exact translation in English. Further to aid the student, there was to be placed above the Greek line another English line, called the "superlinear," showing corrections, omissions, variations in original texts, etc.

After the first part had been put in type, it was found that the type face had been made too heavy for the superlinear, since the reading above the line was sometimes as long as the line itself, and might be confused with it. Therefore, another Greek font, much lighter and smaller, made as before, was substituted.

So the book has been produced which gives to the student the exact text in original Greek, the exact equivalent, literal and etymologically accurate printed directly below, with notations and invaluable information relating to translation, above. Now when some new light flashes into the student's mind concerning some given text, and he wonders: "How much authority is there for this?" he may turn to it and get the impression as it appeared in the original Greek, with full information as to its authority.

When at last the printing problems was solved, there arose the question as to a binding worthy of such contents. This binding must not break and fall apart with much handling; and so a specially devised machine was used to oversew the book and make it possible for it to stand many times the amount of handling which ordinary binding will survive. This machine was produced by John Griesinger, another Los Angeles man. Thus, today Los Angeles can boast that its sons have produced perhaps the most unique and valuable contribution to religious literature of the century.

The writer sat upon a type case, and asked: "Mr. Knoch, what motive drove you on in this work, which surely can never pay, as the world interprets remuneration?"

"I hardly know, myself," was his reply, "unless it is that I feel humanity is entitled to a scientific translation of the Scriptures, and the privilege of making personal interpretation.

"Surely no scientific translator would give one rendering to a Hebrew word in one case, and an entirely different rendering in another case, as was done with the word, 'odi,' for example, which occurs in the oft quoted text (Isa. 64:6,) 'All our righteousnesses are filthy rags.' The word 'filthy' is the rendering of the Hebrew 'odi,' which is translated 'ornament' eleven times and 'filthy' only once."

In the same text he found "rags" rendered from the Hebrew "laged," which occurs nearly two hundred times, but is translated as "rags" only in this single text. It is often rendered "costly garments." The scientific mind of Mr. Knoch could see no consistency in this discordant rendering. Gen. 24:53 could hardly be consistently rendered in part, "jewels of gold and rags." To the scholar "rags" is a ridiculous translation of "laged;" it means "ornamental garments."

To quote Mr. Knoch further: "From the standpoint of the student, the discovery of the true meaning of a single word makes the Bible a new book. There is no word in the original for the English terms 'everlasting,' 'eternity,' 'eternal,' etc. The word so translated usually is 'eon,' or 'eonian' sometimes rendered 'age.' The 'end of the world' is scientifically translated, 'the conclusion of the eon or age.' There is a grand period of time between the 'beginning' and the 'consummation,' called the 'eonian times.' In it are five divisions called 'eons.' The last two are called the 'eons of the eons,' the last is named the 'eon of the eons.' So when we read of 'everlasting punishment' or 'everlasting life,' it is really, in the original, 'age-lasting,' or the 'life of the ages' (eons) which is meant."

Having completed his work with the New Testament Mr. Knoch, is now busy in the translation of the Old Testament in the same manner.

While German, Scandinavian, Italian, French and other scholars are engaged in translation of his book into their respective languages, Mr. Knoch is hard at work in his attic, oblivious of the fact that Wall street gave others a scare recently, or that he is the only person who can see anything but chaos in his study. He is a living demonstration that "out of chaos evolves peace."

Foot Troubles are Fit Troubles

ARE you one of the many women who think that to obtain relief from foot troubles you have to wear "orthopedic" looking shoes? It is possible to have both comfort and smartness . . . Wilbur Coon Shoes are the answer. They are measured to fit at the 5 basic points: heel, instep, waist, ball and length . . . thus assuring perfect comfort. Their beauty of design and elegance of line give one's foot the well-groomed appearance which is so essential for smartness.

THE SPONGE ROUTE

—A medical explanation of the term "inherent flying ability" once posted at Kelly field.

By Austin Parker

Though Defective Eyesight Turned Jimmy Down at Kelly Field, He Found That His Capable Hands Swinging a Sponge Led Him to the Most Thrilling Flight of All

Frederick L. Ramsey of the Planet Stove Works stuck his head forward and yelled, "Hey! . . . Do you know how to fly this thing?"

WHATEVER the foregoing means, the army doctors decided that Jimmy Longstreet didn't have it, and they refused to pass him for training. It was the darkest day of Jimmy's nineteen years.

Downstairs his mother waited for his father to return from his office for luncheon. She went out to the porch when she heard the car.

"Jimmy's just received word that he's been turned down by the army," she said. "Something in his physical examination. I'm so sorry for him." But she added, with a sigh, "And so relieved!"

"Yes—relieved!" said Mr. Longstreet, emphatically. What's wrong with him?"

"It's probably nothing but his eyes. He's so careless about wearing glasses when he studies. They say the flying service is frightfully strict."

"And thank heaven for that!" exclaimed Mr. Longstreet. "Well, that's over! I hope now that he'll go back to college and finish his course. I've never liked this idea of Jimmy becoming a pilot."

The maid came in to say that luncheon was served.

"By the way, George," said Mrs. Longstreet, "I think that Jimmy might like to have the car this afternoon if you don't need it. He and Esther have something on. It'll help him to forget his disappointment."

He frowned. "Aren't Esther and he getting a little thick? She's a pretty youngster, but she hasn't much behind the ears. You don't think—" He paused and said, "They're such romantic young idiots!"

"Sh-h-h!" cautioned his wife. Jimmy's slow tread could be heard upon the stairs.

He entered—a tall, quite good looking but slightly slab headed young man, with dark eyes. His hair was dark, and it was mussed from his fingers running through it. He smiled briefly.

"Hello, dad," he said. "Well, they gave me a bust on the nose. The air service can get along without me."

"So your mother was telling me. What could have been the trouble?"

"Slightly defective vision. Astigmatism. And the medico didn't think I was so hot after he got through spinning me around in a chair. What that's got to do with flying I'm hanged if I can see."

"They ought to know," replied his father, as they passed into the dining-room.

"But that doesn't mean that I'm not going to be a pilot," announced Jimmy.

"I can't afford to put you through the training," said his father.

"I know that. I may get me a job at the field as mechanic or something and take my pay out in flying lessons. I could get quite a bit of time in, maybe, before college starts."

"Jimmy," said his mother, "your father says that you can have the car this afternoon, if you like."

"You bet I would!" His face clouded. "Esther'll think I'm the big slob for getting turned down. She has pictures of Lindbergh plastered all over her room. I'm a swell Lindbergh!"

Esther was as pretty as any girl need be. She was 17 years old; her face was round and enchantingly immature, her eyes were cornflower blue, a curly fringe of blonde hair stuck out from under her smart little hat.

She seemed to bubble out of the big house where the Towsons lived.

"I got some bad news this morning," Jimmy announced. "I'm turned down on the physical. No Kelly field for me."

"Oh, Jimmy!" She pronounced it "Jimmay."

"Tough luck," he said. "But I guess mother and dad don't think so." He sighed, and turned the car up Samset Boulevard.

His hand dropped down, covered hers, and she gave his fingers a squeeze.

"I'm awfully sorry, Jimmy. Awfully! Remember all those airplane trips we were going to take? 'Member?"

Why, everything they had planned to do depended upon airplanes. After the army had released him—when he was one of those young gods who can look any man in the eye and say, "I've been through Kelly field"—there'd be a good job waiting for him. A job, then Esther, a honeymoon by air. It was too cruel!

They passed the newly opened Planet aviation field just as some lucky devil who hadn't astigmatism or something like that took to the air in a little plane and went frolicking away.

"Maybe I can do it yet, somehow," he said. "If you'll trust me."

She gurgled, "You know I will!"

He let the car loiter along and gazed far ahead where the little plane was becoming a speck. The plane suddenly started down, and Jimmy's eyes strained after it as it disappeared behind trees.

"Say!" he exclaimed. "There isn't a landing field there!" His foot went down on the accelerator, and the car jumped ahead. "I'll bet he's cracked up!"

"And hurt himself? Oh!"

They leaned forward, excitedly, racing, and finally came upon a very bored young man, beheimeted and begoggled, leaning against a fence. He yelled, and Jimmy stopped the car.

"Do a guy a favor," he said, coming toward them, parachute pack bouncing at every step. "Call up the field and tell 'em that Blaine's down. Tell 'em to send a couple of mechanics and a truck, because we'll have to haul the crate back home."

"What happened?" asked Jimmy.

"Oh, a connecting rod broke, ripped up things in general. Then I sat her down in a little field and ran into a ditch. She went on her nose. Nothing much."

"We were afraid you were hurt," gasped Esther.

The pilot, Blaine, looked very deeply into her blue eyes before replying. "I knew I could land her," he said, "or I'd have jumped. The only real danger was from fire." He smiled, ingratiatingly.

"Jumped!" she echoed. "I think you men are wonderful!"

Jimmy slipped the car into gear. "I'll be back just as soon as I've telephoned." As they went forward he said to Esther: "Nothing particularly wonderful about that." He dismissed the idea with a gesture. "It's all in a day's work for a pilot."

"But sometimes it just makes me shudder to think of you doing such things. You'll be oh-so-careful, won't you, Jimmy?"

"A pilot must always be careful." He could almost feel her admiring gaze upon him, and he looked stern, purposeful.

He telephoned from a roadhouse; then they returned to Blaine.

"Let's go in and pull her tail down," suggested Blaine.

They threaded their way through a fringe of woods to an open field, where the plane ungracefully stuck her tail skyward. The nose was ignominiously in the earth, propellor shattered. They pulled the tail down. Blaine expertly examined wings and wires.

"Not much damage," he announced. "But the motor's a swell piece of hash."

"Do you mind if I sit in the pilot's seat?" asked Jimmy.

"Go ahead."

Jimmy climbed aboard, put his feet on the rudder bar, took the control stick in his hand. He performed a few imaginary stunts, following the bedside lessons of an instruction book.

Blaine was talking with Esther. "My name's Bill Blaine," he said. "What's yours?"

"Esther Towson," she replied.

"Esther. That's a pretty name. But not half so pretty as you are." Bill Blaine's methods at least had the virtue of being direct. "What's your telephone number?"

Jimmy was busy doing a wingover.

"Oh, I—I don't think I'd better," she gasped. She blushed a little, and her eyes shone.

"Come on," he urged. "I'll bet it's a pretty number, even. I don't eat little girls. I'll tell you what—if you'll come to a movie with me tonight, I'll take you for a hop tomorrow."

Esther was breathless. Without ever making a promise of it, she and Jimmy had always thought of her as taking her first flight with him. But now, if he wasn't going to Kelly—

"Really?"

"I sure will!" Jimmy had risen in the pilot's seat. "What's your telephone number? Quick!"

"East nine-two-one."

Jimmy was on the field at nine o'clock, hoping to find Blaine and ask whom he should see about getting a job. But Blaine wasn't around. Finally he engaged a mechanic in conversation and was told that he should ask at the office for the field manager. But the field manager had gone to town. He reported back to the mechanic.

"The real big smoke on the field is Andy Torrey," said the mechanic. "He's the general manager of the M.P.T. company, up here to see about opening the Planet-New York line."

"Andy Torrey?" demanded Jimmy.

"That's him over there. That big, Indian faced guy."

Jimmy stared. Why, every one who knew one end of an airplane from the other knew about Torrey! He was one of the three or four great test pilots in the whole country! He was one of the men whom Lindbergh and Byrd called upon when they wanted expert opinion!

Torrey came sauntering toward them.

"Hello, chief," the mechanic said.

"Hello, Mac. How are they coming?"

"Right enough, except that I need a guy to swab down this ship." He nodded toward Jimmy. "There's a mug wants a job."

Torrey turned to Jimmy, fixed him like a bug on a pin with a pair of bluish-green eyes. "What kind of a job?"

"Almost any kind, sir. You see, I've just been turned down for Kelly, and so I thought I'd like to get in the game somehow, and so I—"

"Want to be a pilot, I suppose."

"Yes, sir. I thought I might be able to get in a few lessons for my pay."

"We haven't a school here yet," replied Torrey. "Perhaps later. But I might be able to use you if you want to work around planes. College man?"

"Yes, sir. Junior. Engineering."

"Want an office job?"

"I'd rather work in the hangars."

Torrey nodded. He knew the breed.

A half hour later Jimmy, shirtless and in overalls, was presented with a pail of soapy, lukewarm water, and a sponge, and led to the big M. P. T. cabin plane which was to open the passenger service between Planet and New York the following week. He was to give the wings and body a good washing down, with special attention to the black, sooty streaks left by the exhaust.

He scrubbed, and peered into the immaculate cabin, upholstered in tan, with bright nickel trimmings. A little door led to the pilots' compartment, with its two seats and double control. When he mounted the lower wing he stopped to examine the confusing array of gadgets. Some day—

"Come on, son! Snap to it!" said McCready, the mechanic of the plane.

He scrubbed vigorously. He was sweating and his nose was smeared.

It was while he was getting his sixth pail of warm water that he saw Esther's little blue roadster draw up beside the farthest hangar. Blaine was with her, and they were laughing together. Jealousy stabbed him and twisted the knife. A little plane was being rolled to the line, and Blaine was giving her a helmet and goggles. So that was it! He was going to take her up! Esther! He felt like running down there and giving him a good slap on the jaw.

"Hey, Mac," he said, suddenly. "What kind of a pilot's this fellow Blaine who cracked up yesterday? Is he safe?"

"One of the best, but he's a crazy kid. The department put him on the ground for a month this spring, just to drive some sense into his head."

"But is he safe?"

"He's been acting pretty reasonable since then. He won't try any funny business with Torrey on the field. The chief's got him bluffed. Why?"

"He's going to take a friend of mine up."

A DISASTROUS DETOUR

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

"PARKED here for the night!" Warren scowling at the ditched car. "Fat chance of anyone turnin' up on this cowpath."

The chagrined driver tinkering aimlessly with the motor.

A mistaken detour. And too narrow here for his attempted turn. Careened into a marshy ditch.

No rescuing traffic along this remote Bavarian road. And not a house in sight!

An isolated, twilight hush. The eerie treble of tree frogs and crickets.

"Jove, what's keepin' Granville?" impatient peering through the shadows.

"Almost eight now," consulting her wrist watch by the headlight. "Dear, we try to do too much in a day. Up at six in the morning and—"

"Now cut the grousin'. So blamed keen on this trip— Hello, here comes something!" staring down the dusty road. "Great guns, there's a snappy outfit!"

An ox and a horse yoked together, led by a stooped peasant. Mr. Granville trudging beside him, swinging a lantern.

"Only team around here," setting down the feeble light.

"Looks darn good to me!" Warren shed his coat. "How do we hitch 'em up?"

A German-and-English conference. Helen stroking the patient horse while they maneuvered the crude harness.

Now the chauffeur at the wheel, the men shoving from the back.

The willing animals straining valiantly—and the car heaved into the road!

"Good Job! Now how much does this Johnny want?" Warren pulled out his wallet. "Wie viel? Funf mark, eh? Well, here's ten."

The peasant's beaming gratitude. Waving his lantern as they snorted off.

Soon back on the main road. Their headlights piercing the deepening night.

Helen's dismayed scrutiny of the first cross-roads sign:

AUGSBURG—80 KILOMETRES

"About fifty miles! Oh, that's too far! Can't we stop at the next town?"

"Be there in an hour," Mr. Granville optimistic. "Just after eight now."

Settling back resignedly. Not admit her weariness. Not seem a poor traveler.

A cluster of firefly lights ahead. Soon a fantastic steepled skyline.

Into a slumbrous Old-World village, dimly lit by wrought-iron lamps.

Crossing the cobbled market square with its belfried Rathaus and gargoyled fountain. Steep roofs, sagging gables, pepper-box turrets—whimsical in the moonlight. A Grimm's-fairy-tale setting.

Past narrow meandering streets and out under a medieval arch.

On through the darkly dense woods. The pungent fragrance of pine.

"Oh, tell him not so fast!" quivered Helen. "It's really dangerous."

"Huh, want to get there some time tonight. Like a little nourishment."

"We can stop anywhere! All German hotels are clean. And good food—"

"Not takin' any chances," growled Warren. "Sure of a ripping feed at the Drei Mohren. That's where we started for and that's where we're going!"

"Dear, why so inflexible?" snuggling coaxingly against his arm.

"Well, we must have some schedule," Mr. Granville tossing out a cigarette stub. "I think we can make it. Done pretty well so far."

Helen silenced, but unconvinced. Why spoil an ideal trip by straining to do too much? Their so-many-miles-a-day insistence! Just rushing through. If only they could linger—time for real exploration.

"Oh!" a taut-nerves cry. "He shouldn't take these curves so fast."

"Blew his horn, didn't he?" grumped Warren. "Why so jumpy all of a sudden?"

"It's so dark—and these sharp turns—"

"Huh, this trips shows you up. Bum sport, all right! Kickin' ever since we started. Should've shipped you on to Munich with the trunk!"

"Very well, I'll go there by train tomorrow!" wincingly reckless. "You can drive on to Degensburg without me."

"Fine! Suits me O.K.," lighting a dismissing cigar.

Helen shrinking back in engulfing wretchedness. Taken at her word!

No protests. Not even from Mr. Granville! Probably relieved—

A swift glance at Warren's grim profile. His scowl fixed on the road ahead.

Wishing she was in front with the driver. Between them in the back seat—hard not to lean. Trying to sit rigidly aloof.

"There's Augsburg!" Mr. Granville's announcement broke the hostile silence.

A glimpse of the far-off twinkle Now blotted out by an intervening hill.

Again the welcome lights nearer. Shadowy spires.

Soon rolling into the lamp-lit streets of the old patrician city.

Augsburg! Her third visit. But by train before—this aprpoach unfamiliar.

Most of the shops closed. A chill, shuttered desertion.

"There's the Dom!" Warren leaned forward. "Know where we are now."

Down the Maximillianstrasse, past the Augustus fountain and the old Fugger Haus. Stately Renaissance palaces, ghost-haunted in the mysterious night.

Drawing up at the historic Drei Mohren. The pompous porter bustling out. Taking off their dusty bags.

Into the lofty columned "Vorhalle." Everything the same—even the night clerk!

Helen waiting while the men registered. Poignant memories of their last visit here—the joyous arrival. A stabbing contrast!

Now ushered past the great staircase to the lift. Out at the second floor.

An enormous room with a massive bed, brown velvet hangings, and flowered carpet.

"Mighty comfortable," Warren opening the balcony window. "Well, make it snappy. I told Granville we'd be down in ten minutes."

"Ten minutes!" unlocking her suitcase. "And I have to bathe and dress—"

"No dollin' up tonight. Scrub your face and let it go at that."

"Go down like this? Warren; I'd rather do without dinner!"

"Now cut the dramatics and get me out a clean collar."

His abbreviated wash-up. Ready with disconcerting celerity.

"Good grief, always have to wait for you!" A disgusted glare at her cold creaming dishabille. "Holding up the whole trip—"

"You won't have to wait for me tomorrow," frigidly. "You and Mr. Granville can go just as fast as you wish!"

"Fine! May get somewhere. Now throw on a dress and come along. I'm hungry enough to eat nails."

"You can go ahead and start your dinner," hunting for her cleansing tissues.

"Well, I'll go order. You be there in five minutes!" savagely banging out.

If only she needn't go down at all! Her heartache too acute for food.

But wretchedly getting into her creased dinner gown. Not provoke further outbursts.

Soon down the stately stairs and out to the great glass-roofed court.

A moment's misery-forgetting thrill at this favorite garden restaurant.

The dinner-hour over, most of the tables empty. Warren and Mr. Granville seated near the flower-fringed fountain.

"Thought you'd be down in five minutes?" a surly greeting.

"I'm sorry," stiffly, taking the drawn-out chair. "I hurried all I could."

Too late for the regular dinner. But Warren had ordered with his usual epicurean lavishness.

"Now what about our schedule?" Warren propped the road map against the table lamp. "If we start at seven, couple of hours in Ingolstadt before lunch."

"Fine!" Mr. Granville dispatching his Kirsch compote. "Fifteenth century Schloss there. Then on to Regensburg. We'll leave after dinner—ought to get to Munich about ten."

Their heartless indifference! No thought of her.

Absurd to feel so wretched! Only one day—and many friends in Munich. Yet that weight of sick forlornness.

That Warren shouldn't care! Callously willing to go on without her.

"Your driver is outside, sir," the headwaiter at Warren's elbow. "He wants to know what time in the morning you start."

"Seven sharp. Hold on, I'd better see him," throwing down his napkin.

Helen forking at her undepleted plate as he strode out.

"Don't you care for goose, Mrs. Curtis? Why, you're not eating anything!" Mr. Granville solicitous. "Would you like something else?"

"No, no, I—I suppose I'm not very hungry."

"I'm afraid you're tired. But tomorrow won't be so strenuous. You've never been to Ingolstadt? You'll enjoy that—a fine old town—"

"You forget," twisting her napkin. "I'm taking the train in to Munich."

"Why, you didn't really mean that? We couldn't go on without you!"

"Warren's quite willing to," steadying her voice.

"He's having that rear mud guard straightened," Warren stalked back. "That's all the damage. Glad we won't be held up."

"Why, Mrs. Curtis insists she's going straight on to Munich. You didn't take that seriously—"

"Hardly! Think I'd let you trot off on your own? Fat chance!" hitching up his chair. "What's that? Well, what if I did? Can't you ever take a joke? Now snap out of it!"

Waves of tremulous relief. Averting her face to conceal her joyous flush.

"We'll take it easy tomorrow. Maybe we did do too much," a rare concession. "Now where's that waiter? Any more of this goose? Well, let's have it. Better stoke up, Kitten. That's why we were all so crabby. Nothing since that early lunch—our inwards a vacuum!"

MAUDIE

with scorn . . . I remember how Adam cringed, his haggard face seeking the floor. "They're . . . they're my clothes," Adam said. There was the sleeve of a shirt or something hanging out, which Maudie hurriedly stuffed inside.

Grief, disillusion, is a dull thing, a tiresome thing, an unlovely thing.

After the very brief ceremony Maudie, with a sick look, went out to the little kitchen and took an aspirin tablet. Then she brought out from somewhere a gallant little white, encrusted cake, and made some coffee. The cake, once you bit into it, was stale, abominable; and Vera choked over it.

"Vera, Vera, honey—" Maudie said, stooping to pick up the crumbs from the floor. She had to hold on to the table to keep herself from falling, and from where I stood above her I saw that the top of her head was white.

This of course should be the end of Maudie's story for I should like to remember Maudie as she looked the day Vera married: her eyes stricken and yet with something like pride in her voice. But our paths were to cross yet again. (And they may cross again and again and again for all I know!)

I was walking down State street not long ago when I noticed a woman standing in front of a shop window looking at baby clothes. That woman was Maudie Turner. She stood, pensively, placidly, eating caramels from a brown-paper bag. She was fatter, grayer, frowzier than ever. But she still clung to her Filipino waist, incredibly mended; and she carried a black leather satchel.

"Why, Maudie!" I cried.

Maudie turned and looked at me, and her face twitched as if she were going to cry. But instead she offered me a caramel. "Maudie," I suggested, "let's go in here, and have a cup of tea for old time's sake."

We went into the little shop, and sought a table far in the rear, I leading the way. Behind me Maudie walked heavily, her thick, black, spread-out shoes creaking. "I can't be gone very long," Maudie said. "The baby'll be waking."

The baby! Vera's baby? . . . I looked the question.

"Yes, we had the baby," Maudie said. She spoke in a flat heavy voice.

"A boy or a girl?" I inquired. Perhaps, I thought, a little boy—

"It's a girl," Maudie said. "Just like Vera. A colored woman comes in and stays with the baby while I'm out taking orders . . . Vera, you see, Vera died . . . when the baby came. She lived just three days."

Maudie sat and sipped at her tea and looked at me as if I were part of a dream, lost in some other life. So, Vera was dead! I had a sudden, forlorn little hope. Perhaps, with Vera out of the way, Maudie and Adam . . . "And Adam" I asked, "how is Adam?"

Maudie gave me a look that should have been hopeless, but was merely dull. Gone was the pride, the fire, from her voice, the exquisite lilt that I had remembered and cherished. "Adam?" Maudie looked at me. "You didn't see it in the paper? I don't suppose you did, of course. It was just a line or two. Well, Adam was drowned. His boat caught on fire, and Adam was drowned. Down the river. It happened a week after Vera died. He did it on purpose, of course; he was crazy about her, Adam could swim like a fish."

I stared at Maudie. Was this really Maudie talking, talking like this about Adam? She reached for a sandwich. "I —I reckon I ought to tell you," Maudie continued. "Adam . . . he wasn't the father of Vera's child. Vera told me about it the day she died. She said she wanted to set things right, to tell me it wasn't Adam. It . . . never was Adam. She thought she was making me happy, poor child, to tell me about it."

For just an instant Maudie's voice held me, with all its forgotten magic. If only life could have kept Maudie just on the verge of tears, without slopping over! . . . I drew a long breath. "Well, Maudie," I broke in, briskly, "what are you selling now? I'm sure it's something I ought to possess."

Maudie reached for her satchel, opened it. "The same old seventy-six," she said, her eyes solemn and round, unconcerned. She reached for a placard—a new one this time—and propped it before me: Would You Like to be Successful in Love? I wanted to laugh; I felt ashamed and humble, and I hid my engagement ring. I stared at Maudie, and stammered, "Why, Maudie, old thing, is one ever successful in love? Well, let's see what you have."

Maudie fumbled about in her satchel, and out came the salves and the ointments, the lipsticks and pomades and powders. Maudie looked worried, harassed. "Now, what did I do with my order blanks? I hope I didn't lose 'em, or leave 'em somewhere. They're pink. The new ones are pink. Oh, here's a pink one!"

Suddenly somewhere a clock struck, and Maudie stared at me, stricken. "I must catch the noon bus." She thrust a folded slip of paper into my hand, and began to rake her things into her satchel. "Just make out your order," she smiled, "and mail it to me," Maudie smiled, an absent, twisted smile, and bustled away.

I went out into the street, clutching the folded pink slip. It was not, I had found, an order blank it was a statement from the local dry-cleaner's: One Filipino Waist—$2. And even as I stared at it, the wind whisked it out of my hand, and blew it down the street.

By NEIL WOOD

I FOUND him in his attic at 2823 East Sixth street, Los Angeles, this man whose fame has spread to every corner of the civilized world. Adolph Ernst Knoch, modest, smiling, gentle, is monarch of all he surveys in his garret.

Attics always are intriguing. One has a sense of expectancy of thrills ready to leap out at one; weird ghosts of yesterday with vital stories of episodes and epochs upon which is built this vaporous thing we call civilization.

Here in this loft, A. E. K., as he is known, has worked with the dead yesterdays and made them live again to stir the hearts and imagination of scholar and layman. He sits in a vast jumble. Books and more books; manuscripts and more manuscripts; type cabinets with cases drawn out to serve as shelves for stacks and bundles of papers, tomes and volumes, whose pages are dimmed and yellowed.

On a table there is a huge book filled with long lines of Greek characters with never a space, never a punctuation—words driving words across the pages with never a gap between.

Noting my interest and wonder, Mr. Knoch replied to my unvoiced inquiry:

"That is Codex Vaticanus, or rather, an authorized photographic copy, one of the original manuscripts of the New Testament. It is called 'Vaticanus' because the original is in the Vatican Library in Rome."

From beneath a pile of notes a foot high, the master of this chaos of orderliness drew another monster volume. "This," he said, is 'Codex Sinaiticus,' another original manuscript, so called because the original was found in a convent on Mt. Sinai." From underneath a stack of boxes filled with bills, stationery and odds and ends, he drew still another similar looking volume and explained, "This is 'Codex Alexandrinus,' another authorized original, the real copy of which is in the British Museum in London."

"The Sacred Scriptures are preserved for us in thousands of manuscripts—some very ancient, some more modern; but in these three, we have handed down to us, virtually intact, the Word of God in the New Testament."

Here was a thrill in full justification of all my expectations! Here was life of yesterday being relived today! Almost twenty centuries have passed since these words were written. What history they have made!

The echoes of their tread resound around the world. Wars have been fought and millions have died on bloody fields over the meaning of these echoes. Pictures flashed across my mental horizon of beauteous maidens strapped upon the backs of mad bulls in combat, and a sound picture of the cheers of pagan multitudes at the spectacle.

Never have there been echoes so potent to banish fear from the hearts of the faithful. These echoes have brought the smile of contentment to dying faces. Men and women have gone into the far unknown and into hideous dangers to carry these echoes to their fellows.

The pictures gradually faded away, the echoes dimmed as I became conscious of the kindly, tolerant, masterful voice of Mr. Knoch—and what he was saying was what I was there to learn.

Word-by-word and letter-by-letter translation of the New Testament is the remarkable achievement of A. E. Knoch.

With a tenacity of purpose typical of the sons of Los Angeles, this man who arrived here with his parents in 1885, has, through the years, met and overcome seemingly overwhelming obstacles, having at last completed what scholars and scientists acclaim as a perfect literal translation of the Bible. Into it there has been permitted to creep no taint of personal interpretation, as the objective to be attained was the presentation of the original manuscripts of God's Word, scientifically translated into English.

During his grade-school and high-school years, Adolph Ernst Knoch was a familiar figure on the streets of Los Angeles as he pedaled his bicycle along with an open book strapped to the handlebars, so that he could study while he rode errands, went to and from school, or made deliveries for the printing firm which his brother owned.

Later his Greek grammar and Testament took the place of arithmetic and spelling book, as his interest began to center more and more upon that ancient language. After his graduation, he entered full-time employment in his brother's printing business, where he served in turn as "devil," apprentice, and finally, superintendent. His interest in the Greek and Hebrew languages had gradually developed in his mind the realization of a great literary need. He discovered that very often a word in the original manuscripts of the Bible was translated into English in many different ways, which fact seemed to him unscientific, if not misleading. So he set about to translate the New Testament with "consistency" as his watchword, and absolute accuracy as his goal.

Science (which is here meant to be an orderly arrangement and classification of knowledge) had been applied to almost all natural phenomena; it was subsidized by millions of dollars and had produced untold benefits to mankind. Yet in the spiritual field very little attempt had been made at truly scientific research.

This was his problem: to make a version of the New Testament in a scientific manner. To plan it so that its deficiencies would automatically expose themselves; to have it exact yet popular; consistent in current English; to build it as a scientist builds, by first gathering and classifying all the facts; to lay down laws of procedure and adhere strictly to them. The result must be a presentation of Holy Writ with a foundation of basic fact, and a structure built upon it of thrice-inspected brick, held together by mortar of unquestioned authority. What a task!

Today letters from every part of the globe, from internationally known scientists, and people in every walk of life testify to the success of this monumental undertaking—a success attained at the cost of years, vast sums of money and untold personal sacrifice.

While I listened to this pleasant-voiced man and noted the charm of his smile as he told of the obstacles he had found in his pathway, I marveled at his modesty. These obstacles were greater than confront the man who mines for gold or the one who builds of concrete and steel; for these are inanimate obstacles imposed by nature upon those of her sons who seek to improve her handiwork. In the task of building a new rendering of Scripture, more than nature must be conquered; here were hydra-headed living obstacles, animated by the spirit of tradition and clothed in the garments of established creeds and dogmas; obstacles with an inner urge to destroy any thought or science threatening to disprove a cherished illusion or soil a precious tenet.

One scholar, Dr. Weymouth, had combined the results published by all the great scholars who had collated and compared the multitude of manuscripts pertaining to the Scriptures, and called it the "Resultant Text." But even the combined judgment of these researchers was not as safe a foundation as Mr. Knoch felt he required. His texts must be founded on facts, not on opinions.

The "Resultant Text" was carefully compared, letter by letter, with the three most ancient manuscripts heretofore mentioned. Every variation was marked and appears in the text of Mr. Knoch's "Concordant Version." After this minute comparison with each of the three scripts, it was checked and rechecked, reducing the possibility of error to zero.

Mr. Knoch found that the scribes made mistakes, just as modern typographers, do. The typesetter's mistakes seldom appear in print, because they are

"That's all right."

Jimmy scrubbed in silence, saw Blaine and Esther take off.

"What date was yesterday, Mac?" he asked, presently.

The telephone clicked in his ear.

"You're not making any plans about giving up college, are you, Jimmy?" asked his mother.

He evaded a direct reply by saying: "I've been too busy to make any plans about anything. And I'm for bed."

walked toward the plane, climbed aboard, and took his seat. The plane wheeled about, taxied to leeward, faced the wind, and took off.

Jimmy had his nose against the window watching Patterson at the controls. He noticed that Batch kept spitting into his handkerchief and that once or twice he turned an agonized gaze upon his co-pilot. Patterson squirmed uneasily in his seat, stuck his head above the windshield so that cool air blew on it. He was turning greenish and his lips were white. Suddenly his hands left the wheel and went to his belly, as though he had been shot. Batch took the controls. Patterson writhed convulsively in his seat, stood half erect, and nearly fell backward against the door.

Jimmy turned the latch, slid the door open, and the pilot reeled into the cabin. "God, I'm sick!" he moaned.

The passengers were in commotion. Several of them rose and started forward. "Get back there and sit down!" bawled Jimmy. "Go on! Sit down!" To Patterson: "Sit in my place."

"Can't," said the pilot. He was stricken with another pain. "Got to lie down." He sprawled in the narrow aisle, clutching his belly, his eyes staring as though they might pop from his head. "Tell Batch to land at nearest town. Doctor. This is awful."

Batch was glancing back through the door. Jimmy went to him, found him gagging.

"Patterson says to land at nearest town. He's terribly sick. Ptomaine, I guess."

"Me, too," gasped Batch. "That damn hashhouse! Had breakfast together. Good Lord, son! Can't see anything! Take her for a little bit. Just hold her steady. Wait."

He swung the ship about, headed for Planet.

"Pilot?" he asked.

"No."

"Just hold her on that point." He indictated the compass. "Don't touch throttle. Oh, Lord!" He put his head outboard and gagged. "Hold rudder to center. Fly herself. Got to straighten up. One of us be all right in a minute."

He straightened as though a spring had whipped loose inside of him and slid into the cabin on top of Patterson. Ma Duffy's food had done them in.

Jimmy, cold from fright, stared at the compass and tried to keep on course. From his bedside instruction he had a vague idea of what he should do, but the plane had a rebelling way of swerving blindly off. When he tried to correct he over-corerected, with the result that he was flying a long, flattened S. The altimeter was mounting higher and higher, because the weight of an extra man aft, less one forward, made the ship tail-heavy. He had been told not to touch the throttles, but it wouldn't do to go on climbing, so he leveled off with the wheel there and concentrated upon the compass, which was far off again.

Frederick L. Ramsey of the Planet Stove Works stuck his head forward and yelled. "Hey!" in Jimmy's ear. Jimmy turned for an instant.

"Do you know how to fly this thing?"

"I'm doing it!" answered Jimmy. "Are they better yet?"

"They're worse!"

His heart sank and he uttered an "Oh, my gosh!"

"We want to know," yelled Ramsey, "if you can land us?"

"No!" answered Jimmy.

"This is terrible!" announced the stove king.

Jimmy, exasperated to the point of murder, said: "If you know any more about this than I do, take it!" He lifted his hands from the control. The plane stuck her nose up as though she'd hit a bump and Ramsey disappeared. Jimmy got the nose down again, looked ahead and saw the smokestacks of Planet. To the right lay the field, so inviting, so unattainable.

In the cabin Frederick L. Ramsey was busily trying to wash up an accumulation of fifty-odd years of unsaid prayers. Several followed his lead.

At the field eleven men were sick. Three doctors from Planet were working over them, and an ambulance was removing them, two at a time, to the hospital. The health authorities had closed Ma Duffy's hash-house and seized the food for analysis.

The panic was at its height when the big cabin plane appeared over the field. Andy Torrey, feet planted far apart, stood looking up at it as it circled.

"What the devil!" he exclaimed softly. The turn had been made stiffly, not with the easy, deft control of either Patterson or Batch. The plane had skidded around, wanting to go in one direction and being forced into another. It continued to circle, without losing altitude.

"Now what the—" he began and broke off. He whipped around, gaped for a moment at the men about him. "Did Patterson and Batch have breakfast at Ma's this morning?" he demanded.

"Yes," replied one of the mechanics. "They ate together."

There was a moment of horrified silence, broken by a yelping order from Torrey to get out his plane.

In the air, Mr. Ramsey was acting as Jimmy Longstreet's secretary. "Write!" commanded Jimmy. "Both pilots sick and unable to fly. Am at controls. Paint on side of airplane what to do. And sign it James Longstreet." He took the paper from Ramsey's shaking hand, glanced at it. "Now take off your shirt. Take off your shirt, I say!"

Under both of the pilots' seats were neat tool cases. He opened one, took out a wrench. "Wrap the note around that and tie it with a strip of shirt," he ordered. "Then tear the rest of the shirt in two pieces. Tie them together so they'll make a streamer."

He gazed down at the field and cast the message overboard.

Torrey had just waved a signal to have the blocks withdrawn when one of the men shouted and pointed to a white fluttering object. He waited, saw it fall a half mile from the field.

"Get it!" he said, and gave his motor the throttle. He zoomed off and climbed.

The two planes pulled abreast. Torrey could see Jimmy's face turned toward him inquiringly. He caught his control stick between his knees and raised both hands in a gesture of applause. Jimmy pointed back into the cabin and went through a pantomime show of being sick. Torrey replied that he understood; then he said, in sign language: "I go down. I come up again. You stay here." Jimmy nodded violently.

The little plane dived for the earth and taxied, tail up, to the hangar.

"Blaine!" yelled Torrey. Blaine ran forward. "You're going to make a plane change. The kid's up there alone and he doesn't know how to land her."

"Haven't got a ladder," replied Blaine.

"Use a rope then! Knot it! And wear a 'chute. Give me a paint pot and brush! What was in that message?" Jimmy's note was thrust into his hands. "The kid's using his bean," he said. "Good kid!" He glanced aloft. "Stick it, baby!"

A mechanic came running with a pot of red paint. Torrey printed in large letters on the starboard side of the fuselage, "Will Try Put," and on the port side, "Blaine Aboard." Then he hopped off again.

He came up on Jimmy's port and exhibited the first three words, crossed over and let him see the remainder of the message. Jimmy nodded and Torrey went down in a motor dive.

Blaine was waiting, wearing his parachute, rope in hand. Torrey examined the rope, tossed it to the mechanics, put an arm around Blaine and took him to one side.

"I'll try to spot you right on top of the cabin," he explained. "Beware the propellers. If the kid gets rattled and starts jumping don't try to make it. Just cut loose and we'll try it again." He glanced at his watch. "The kid's got seventy minutes of gas left. That means we can make at least three tries at it, so don't take any fool chances. If you get busted up we're cooked."

They rejoined the others and watched the men attach the rope to the landing carriage of the plane.

"It's going to be a horrible black eye for flying if we don't get that ship down," said Torrey. "If the kid tries to land—and he can't stay up there forever—he'll probably spread 'em all over two square miles. And maybe that won't be in every paper in the world tomorrow morning! Let's go."

"This 'chute is going to make it terrible awkward," complained Blaine. "I'd just as soon take a chance without it, boss."

"You'll wear that 'chute," replied Torrey, and he muttered something about "more guts than brains."

They mounted and Blaine cast overboard the rope so that Jimmy could see it; then he crawled out on the wing and sat there. They could see strained faces peering from the cabin windows at them.

Torrey motioned "straight ahead" and held his hand flat as a warning to be steady. He pulled up slowly and came over the ship, gave Blaine his signal. The boy wriggled down toward the undercarriage, disappeared. By looking over the side Torrey could see him on the rope, swinging in the gale of wind, revolving slowly, descending knot by knot. At last, at the very end, he wound the rope about his right leg so that he could rest his arms for an instant. By putting out one arm or the other against the wind he could control his spinning, hold himself facing forward. He looked up and waved.

Jimmy had selected a point on the horizon and was aiming for it, holding the ship squarely on it. A head peered over the ridge of the cabin, ducked down now and then. It was Ramsey, reporting progress.

Torrey let his plane sink slowly, gave more throttle. A slight error in judgment, a sudden jump of the cabin ship, and the propellers might make hash of Blaine.

He dragged the boy up the backbone of the cabin, saw him cut loose and sprawl there, legs and arms out, clutching desperately at the smooth sides. He was just aft of the highest point of the cabin roof. The blast of wind against him and the downward slope of the roof made it seem unlikely that he would be able to work his way forward. In that case there was nothing for him to do but go over the side and hope that the stabilizer plane would not hit him. He continued to cling there.

If only Jimmy knew enough to throttle down and put the ship into a glide, thought Torrey. That would cut off the propeller blast and reduce the slope. Torrey drew alongside and made a frantic gesture to him to go down—down!

A hand—Ramsey's hand—shot up and grabbed Blaine's, just as Jimmy obeyed the order and put the nose down. Ramsey pulled, grabbed the parachute harness, and pulled again. Blaine went over the shoulder of the cabin, head first into the cockpit. He hit the controls and the plane entered a vicious dive.

Torrey dived after them, saw the big ship swing up on an even keel. As he drew alongside Jimmy and Blaine waved triumphantly.

The sight of his passenger plane winging its way gracefully toward the field should have made his heart glad; but for a moment he felt as though he, too, had ptomaine. He felt sickish, weak, done-in.

"Oh, it was too wonderful!" exclaimed Esther. "Daddy simply raved about you! He says you were too wonderful for anything!"

"I don't think it was particularly wonderful to sit up there like a bump on a log trying to save my own skin," said Jimmy. "I was just like a darn flying Dutchman—no place to go."

"Every one says you were marvelous!" continued Esther. "And I think you're the sweetest thing to come over and see me! I've never been so proud in my life!" She paused, but only for lack of breath.

"I've got some good news to tell you," he said. "I wanted you to hear it first." He drew her over to the couch and they sat down. "Andy Torrey had a talk with dad just before dinner, and I'm all set. The M. P. T. company is going to give me my training free at its school on Long Island!"

"Jim-may!"

"Torrey says I've got to finish college and that if my marks are high enough I'll get advanced training next summer."

"Oh!"

"And I'm to specialize in aeronautical engineering. And listen to this—Torrey says he'll give me a job in the engineering department after I graduate! Isn't that hot? He says they need trained engineer pilots. Gosh, I'm a lucky stiff! And Torrey's got dad all sold on the idea. Yesterday I was just a mug swinging a sponge and now I'm going to be a pilot!"

Her hand crept into his.

"It's a pretty dirty paw you're holding. I can't get 'em clean."

"I don't care! Will you write to me—ever so often?"

"I sure will—if you'll write to me." She nodded excitedly. "And I'd be mighty happy if you'd wear my fraternity pin while I'm flying. Will you?"

"Oh, Jim-may!"

fish the other day—a dead golden carp. The carp, all slippery and slimy, completely mystified the 'coon for awhile by sliding through his mobile, monkey-like paws. Eventually he discovered to his delight that fish were meant for coons to eat. At that moment he grew up to full 'coonhood.

The 'coons and wild cats are fashionable in that they winter one place, near Newhall on the San Fernando Boulevard and summer in the cooler land of Big Bear Lake. Getting forty cats up to Big Bear demands ingenuity. They are boxed up in forty apple boxes and hauled via trailer. Anyone disposed to upsetting apple carts would get more than a barrel-of-monkeys' worth of fun if he tackled this particular one. The cats have winter flu, too. This is usually disastrous. It took quite a toll last winter at the wild cat farm. What with flu and the cats escaping now and then—the trapper lost three of his best trained young cats the other day—he is kept busy adding to his collection. As the cats tolerate group life they do not require individual cages. While his charges are summering at Big Bear Ullom trails mountain lions, for which there is a bonus in San Bernardino county—as well as for wild cats. So his enterprise helps rid the country of a pest by putting many wild cats out of circulation—they do much damage killing quail and deer—besides fostering an interest in the lore of the wild.

The Bible That Grew in an Attic

The Long Skirt Conspiracy

By Ellis Parker Butler

That night I met Overbury K. Sputtz under a temporarily disused milk wagon in a vacant lot in Flushing.

MILLIONS of papas and husbands were dazed and knocked silly this spring by the about-face of skirts, which for years have been growing shorter and shorter and suddenly began to grow longer and longer. No one could understand it. Reason tottered. Strong men ran hither and thither—and sometimes thither and hither—jabbering like apes, and the insane asylums have been rapidly filling with mental wrecks ruined by trying to figure out why the unblushing knee was rushing to cover and the plump calf was again hiding behind the overhang.

For years the lower rim had been gliding toward the female chin, showing more and more of the underpinning of mamma and sister, and suddenly the knee began to disappear. For well-nigh a decade, dear old dad had been told that skirts must be short lest the poisonous germ grab hold of them from the sidewalk, and skirts shrank till even a young and agile germ needed a spring-board or a step-ladder to reach a hem. Then suddenly all this was mere blah and tush. Were the germs all dead? Was the fatted calf feeling the chill breeze? Was the knee turning blue with cold?

"Why?" asked millions. "Why long skirts?"

"Paris decrees them," cried the press of America.

"But why does Paris decree them?" asked Overbury K. Sputtz.

It was then that I was brought into the mystery. I was seated in my office combing the tangles out of the long white beard I wear when disguised as Billy the Boy Scout, when my telephone bell rang sharply.

"Is this Butler the Detective?" asked a voice. "Good! This is Overbury K. Sputtz, president of the Extra-Long and Extra-Thin Silk Stocking Manufacturers' Chamber of Commerce of North, South and Central America, including the Canal Zone and Alaska, speaking. Butler, the manufacturers of extra-long and extra-thin silk stockings, including shin-shaped, double-width and—"

"I know," I said. "Skirts have been lengthening and the silk stocking industry faces ruination. You want me to solve this mystery. I will."

That night I met Overbury K. Sputtz under a temporarily disused milk wagon in a vacant lot in Flushing, Long Island. We were both disguised. Overbury K. Sputtz was disguised as James L. Jones, Mayor of Middle Bridge, Ohio, and I was disguised as Jimmy Walker, Mayor of New York, N. Y. As I crawled under the milk wagon, I gave the countersign, "Mary has a little limb," and Overbury K. Sputtz gave the answering words, "It has a dimpled knee." I then placed the little finger of my left hand on the tip of my right ear and said, "And everywhere that Mary goes," to which Overbury K. Sputtz answered, "The knee we freely see." He then sighed and said, "But we won't see it much longer, Butler."

As a result of the conversation that followed, I immediately set my entire staff of operatives to work on the case. Eighteen of these I ordered to shadow Monsieur Pajoo, the famous Parisian dressmaker, who was at that time in America and smoking ten-cent cigars recklessly, a fact I considered suspicious. To Paris I sent Mazie May, the famous international spy, whose affair with Hauptgeneral Krautfresser led to the suicide of Oberkapitan Glutz and the defeat of Napoleon Bonaparte at Bannockburn. As soon as she arrived in Paris, she cabled me, "The Parisian Dress Designers' and Style Shifters' Association building new headquarters twelve million francs this looks suspicious to me where did they get it?"

I cabled her, "Make love to somebody and get the facts," and that same day received her reply, "I am and he is awfully cute has one of those fuzzy-end mustaches you know they turn up at the ends like a pair of skis but sort of shredded they tickle when he kisses you."

"He don't kiss me," I cabled back: "if he did he would get a poke in the eye cable progress."

She replied, "New skirts here ankle length send money all dress designers here are rolling in wealth this looks suspicious to me where did they get it?"

Overbury K. Sputtz wired me, "Silk stocking sale decreasing eight hundred thousand pairs daily; twelve thousand stocking looms shut down yesterday; haste in your investigation imperative."

I called in all the operatives who had been shadowing Monsieur Pajoo and ordered them to report.

"We have found nothing suspicious," they reported. "Monsieur Pajoo has attended strictly to business. He has rented the grand ballroom of the Ritz and is showing the new styles there. Thirty-six manikins, beautiful as houris, are displaying gowns—all long. The American women are going crazy over them."

"And nothing suspicious?"

"Nothing, chief, except that Monsieur Pajoo has bought a twenty-thousand-dollar motor car with solid-gold hub caps."

"Hum!" I said, frowning. "Solid gold hub caps! They cost big money, Hawkshaw. It costs money to rent the grand ballroom of the Ritz. Flowers in plenty, I suppose? Music?"

"Yes, he's got music."

"Ben Bernie's orchestra? Paul Whiteman? Rudy Vallee? Vincent Lopez?"

"Nothin' like that, chief," said Hawkshaw. "He's savin' money on the music—got one of them ukulele quartets."

"Hawaiians?" I asked.

"Yeah—one of them oo-loo-oo-lah gangs."

"Hah!" I exclaimed. "Good!"

I sent my shadowers back to shadow Monsieur Pajoo. I cabled to Mazie May in Paris: "Report progress Pajoo has Hawaiian orchestra at style show at Ritz do you know about it?"

To this I received the following reply, charges collect: "Hawaiian music gives me a pain sweetie I am working plays ukulele till I am sick to death."

"Ha!" I exclaimed when I received this cablegram. "Honey," I said to my secretary—I call her "Honey" for short, her name being Smith—"Honey," I said, "get all the reports on Hawaii—government reports, consular reports, all kinds of reports. Have them on my desk tomorrow morning."

For three days I read those reports. I read about pineapples—sliced pineapples, whole pineapples, grated pineapples. I read statistics on the increase of sales of pocketknives in 1927 as compared with the fiscal year ending June 1, 1887. On the third day, a paragraph under the heading of "Incorporations" met my eye: "The Hula-hula Dancers Benevolent and Protective Association of Honolulu—Capital increased from $50,000 to $3,000,000." This was dated January, 1929. I turned over the pages of the reports in feverish haste.

In the consular report for March, 1930, I found this brief item: "Steamship companies report that the slump in tourist arrivals, which has been serious for some years, is now ending and greater numbers of tourists are arriving in Honolulu on each ship from the United States."

I had solved the long-skirt mystery! Shorter and shorter skirts in the United States had threatened the grass-skirted hula-hula industry of Hawaii with destruction. Why go to Hawaii to see knees when more and better knees could be seen at home? So Hawaii had bribed Paris. American knees must be hidden again. Long skirts came back. Paris decreed them!

Now millions of papas and husbands know why skirts have been growing longer. I know, and you know, and Overbury K. Sputtz knows.

"But what," Overbury K. Sputtz asked me, "can the silk-stocking industry do about it?"

"Sputtz," I said, "the silk-stocking industry can go to Hawaii and make grass skirts."

Early Railroad Records

As early as 1845 a record was made in England of forty-five miles in fifty-two minutes. At one time the train was proceeding at the rate of one mile in forty-eight seconds, or "at the astonishing velocity of seventy-five miles an hour." In the same year the American Railroad Journal said: "The other day on the London and Birmingham, and on the Great Northwestern railway, a rate of travel at the speed of sixty-five miles an hour was accomplished. The express trains on these lines run at the rate of nearly fifty miles an hour, stoppage included." During 1848 the Antelope engines on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad made a speed of sixty miles an hour.

Understanding

When we are absent from each other, then,
We find our true affinity in words;
The spirit-forces meet and mingle when
The flesh is absent; and the thoughts like birds
Wing out in mating-time.

With pen upon clear paper we express
The concise themes that tongues can never say;
We know what each to other would confess,
Though miles between us stretch so endlessly
And glory in our trust.

But when as mortals we meet eye to eye
Seeking to fathom deeps we know exist,
Our tortured senses silently will cry
For what the moment in its zeal has missed
And longed to understand.

Another period of silence and scrubbing.

"What do you think about women, Mac?"

"I don't," responded the mechanic. "Got no time for women." But the matter of women persisted in his mind, and he added: "Now, you take that young mug, Blaine, f'example. He's always running after some pretty face. Spends all his money on 'em. Goes broke, and he has to get a job stunting—wing walking, plane changing, or wrecking planes for the pictures—so he'll have more dough for 'em. He's what I call a sap."

Jimmy scrubbed, and thought: "I guess I'm a sap, too, to care if she tosses me over for Blaine."

He watched them land, and returned to work.

Esther's gurgling laugh sounded behind him. He stiffened, indignantly, turned. Esther gazed at him in astonishment. Blaine grinned broadly.

"Why, Jim-may!" she exclaimed. "What on earth are you doing?"

"I've got a job."

"Taking the old sponge route to a pair of wings, eh?" asked Blaine, derisively.

"Maybe."

"But," gurgled Esther, "you look so fun-nay! You're all dir-tay!" She was bubbling with amusement.

"Maybe," he repeated, defiantly. "Maybe I'm dirty, but the plane is cleaner. That's the big idea. So run along. Mac and I have to get this plane ready for a job and we've got no time for women." He turned his back on them, squeezed out the sponge.

"Oh, all right!" said Esther, with a sniff. "If that's the way you feel about it."

Out of the corner of his eye he saw Esther and Blaine depart.

"Your girl?" asked Mac.

"Doesn't look that way, does it?"

"It sure beats all how they fall for pilots. And I like him giving you the horse laugh because you're swinging a sponge. That's the way he started."

"Did he?" asked Jimmy, in amazement. "I thought he probably went through Kelly."

McCready laughed. "Naw—he got turned down. He's got flat feet."

"Flat feet!"

"Flat as yesterday's pancake. He's all right in the air, but he walks like a duck."

"Is there anything else to wash down?"

McCready made a tour of inspection. "You can dive into these plugs now," he said, and pointed to a can of gasoline in which the spark plugs were soaking. "Take 'em outside and watch out for some blooming idiot with a cigarette to light."

Jimmy sat in the sun, breathing gasoline fumes and scrubbing plugs for a change. Andy Torrey came along, nodded, and went over to McCready. They talked for several minutes, and once at least they mentioned him, for he saw both of them look at him. Apparently Mac's report was satisfactory. Torrey strolled over, and said: "How do you like your job?"

"Fine, sir!"

"It's yours, then. Mac's willing to keep you on as his helper, so you can report to him at eight o'clock in the morning. Ever been up?"

"Just once. There was pilot giving hops for five dollars a shot at college this spring."

"I'm going to give this ship a test tomorrow morning," said the great Torrey. I'll take you along, if you'd like to come."

Jimmy managed to gasp out a "Thanks!" If he'd like to come! He'd be willing to sit over a reeking can of gasoline and clean spark plugs all night!

The green countryside lay stretched beneath them, map-like, but Jimmy had no eyes for scenery. The other three men who were sandbagging—acting as load while Torrey gave the ship its test—were gazing out of the windows of the cabin; Jimmy had his face against the window of the door which led to the pilots' cockpit, where Torrey and McCready sat. He could follow the movements of Torrey's hands upon the controls, watch the instruments.

To his amazement, Torrey took his hands from the wheel and let the plane fly itself. There was some discussion—he could tell from their gestures—between the pilot and mechanic regarding lateral balance. They came to a decision, and nodded, sagely.

When they landed Torrey asked him. "Did you like that?"

Jimmy nodded. "I was watching you at the controls most of the time."

"Perhaps, later, you'll get a chance to try your hand at it. I'll tell Batch and Peterson—they are your pilots—to look out for you." He went toward the office, and Jimmy stared after him. What a swell guy!

Batch and Peterson arrived in a small plane early in the afternoon. They were business-like men about thirty years old, who shook hands abruptly when Mac introduced him as his helper. The plane was rolled out, engines warmed, and Jimmy sandbagged again. Then there were exhaust streaks to be sponged off. He was sent to Ma Duffy's hash house for a can of coffee, back once more for cigarettes; he stood on his head in the cockpit, wiping up the grime that came from shoes.

He reached home just in time to get washed for dinner.

"Esther telephoned to you today," said his mother. "She wants you to call her."

"That so?" he asked, disinterestedly.

After dinner his mother reminded him of Esther's call.

"After a bit," he said, and lighted his pipe. Presently the telephone rang and the maid came out to announce that it was Miss Towson for Mr. Jimmy. He sighed, got to his feet.

"Oh, Jimmy," came her softly reproachful voice, "why haven't you telephoned to me? You're not cross with me, are you?"

"Cross?" he asked, with a note of surprise. "No, I've just been busy. My ship—that is, the one I'm working on—is going out on a job tomorrow. We're taking some prominent men from here over to Grantstown for a chamber of commerce luncheon."

"Daddy is one of them!" she exclaimed. "Didn't you know? It's so thrilling!"

"It's a lot of hard work, anyhow," he replied. "Of course, we want to have the plane in perfect condition. This is a sort of advertising trip, just before we put the ship into the New York-Planet service."

"Jimmy, I was wondering if you could go to a movie with us. Fred and Ann are going and—"

"Not a chance! Can't work ten hours a day and then run around." He paused, confounded by what he was about to say. "You might see if Blaine can go with you. He usually doesn't have much to do."

"All right," she said, angrily. "All right—I will!"

"And, say—Esther!"

"Well?"

"Do you know why he got turned down for Kelly?"

"Um-m—no. And I don't care." But she waited in silence.

"He has flat feet," chortled Jimmy.

"I think you're horrid."

The telephone clicked in his ear.

"You're not making any plans about giving up college, are you, Jimmy?" asked his mother.

He evaded a direct reply by saying: "I've been too busy to make any plans about anything. And I'm for bed."

"Goodnight, dear."

"Goodnight. And, mother, there really isn't any reason on earth for Agnes to get up at 6:30 and fix my breakfast. I can get it at the hash house on the field. It's pretty fair chow, and it isn't too dirty."

His mother's head shook. "It isn't going to hurt Agnes to get up a half hour earlier, and I feel better if I know you've had a good breakfast to start the day on."

The alarm clock rang at six. A shower and a leap into old clothes; then a day laborer's breakfast, with Agnes a little grumpy just to let him know that a cook's life was not all it should be. A rush for the street car.

He punched the time clock ten minutes early and donned his overalls. McCready was patting the engines, feeling things. Newspaper photographers came and loitered about, waiting for the prominent ones.

The idea of sending a delegation from Planet to Grantstown was something in the nature of thumbing the nose at a rival community which had not yet shown its imagination and progressiveness by becoming a link in the growing airway system. It was Planet making snoots at a neighbor—big snoots, because these were Planet's biggest men. Four manufacturers, one banker, one United States Senator, who was to orate, and the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

The plane was rolled out, put on the line. McCready retired to the door of the hangar and sat on a box in the sun, head in his hands. He was wearing his best suit, for he was to accompany the plane as mechanic.

"Jimmy," he called. "I feel terrible."

"You look it, Mac. What's the trouble?"

"Something I et, I guess. Will you ask the chief to step over?"

He found Andy Torrey, and reported. "He looks pretty bad. Sort of green and yellow around the gills."

Torrey hurried to Mac, found him gagging.

"You beat it for bed and get a doctor," he ordered.

"Let the kid go in the bus," said Mac, weakly. "There's nothing to do except stand by while she's on the field and see that nobody plays horse with her. God, boss, I feel like I'm going to bust in two!"

"I'll go with you to the shack," said Jimmy.

He returned a few minutes later and reported that a doctor was coming out.

"Skin out of those overalls and look like a banker," said Torrey. "All you have to do is to see that people don't handle the machine while it's on the field at Grantstown. Keep the door open and let 'em look inside. Answer all the fool questions they ask. If you don't know the answers, answer 'em anyhow."

"Yes, sir."

The prominent ones arrived. Esther was with her father, and Jimmy loitered about conspicuously, "tuning up an exhaust manifold," until he was sure that she had noticed him. Photographers were shooting pictures of the passengers. Senator Crumley, hat off, smiling benignly, getting into the plane; Jefferson Bains of the B. & T. Machinery Company, waving from a window; Esther's father, standing with the two pilots; Frederick L. Ramsey of the Planet Stove Works, standing in the cabin door.

Jimmy strolled over to Esther. "Looks as though we'll have a good flight," he said, with an expert glance at the sky.

"Are you going, too?"

"Oh, yes. It's better to have one of the mechanical crew along. I wish they'd finish with this flapdoodle and get under way."

Batch, the second pilot, climbed to his cockpit. A starter whirred, and a motor roared into action; then the second motor. They idled, purring.

Jimmy cocked an ear to them. "They're sweet!" he announced, professionally. "Sweet! Have a nice time at the movies last night?"

Esther pouted. "You might have known I wouldn't go."

"Just because a fellow has flat feet?"

"You're perfectly horrid!"

He uttered an elderly laugh. Planet's nose thumbers were getting aboard.

"Well, we've got to shove off. So long." He was stiff-legged with pride as he

The Palamino---a Tribute

By Helen W. King

WE CAN hardly dispute the statement that this is the mechanical age and there is no denying that motor-driven vehicles have chowded the horse from our highways and made him almost obsolete as a means of conveyance. But there is certainly one field, outside that of sport, where he holds his own and will continue to do so, and that is on the stock range.

Here and there, have been folks who have all along held loyal to their genuine love of horses, and who while moving apace with the world, have yet given their old friends due consideration. I am not speaking merely of those who have racing stables or whose enthusiasm for this magnificent animal is linked with the track or with shows of some sort. I refer to people who are developing the best possibilities in draft and lighter breeds of horses, with particular emphasis on those interested in the stock horse.

The cattle business of this country was in pretty bad shape a few years ago, but it has been coming back. As long as there is a cattle business in the United States, we are going to need good stock horses. Just any kind of horse won't do, either. On the range a man needs a horse that is highly intelligent, well-trained, quick in its action, and one that possesses endurance and courage. At round-up time, at branding time, in emergencies that often arise, like the dreaded stampede, a rider's very life and the safety of his herd depend on the horse under him.

Here in Southern California we have several men who are interested in developing fine stock horses. Dwight Murphy of Santa Barbara and Marco Hellman of Los Angeles conduct the most extensive operations of this sort, each having fine stud horses, carefully selected brood mares and a considerable string of horses in training for range work—good, practical enterprises—not just hobbies. It is very interesting and significant that both these men have chosen the once frowned-upon Palamino as their favorite.

The Palamino is not a breed, as many believe, but a color. The Spanish gave this name to a type which occurred, infrequently, in their herds—an animal with a creamy coat and white mane, tail and forelock, and with white feet and forelegs in many instances. Foals of this type were often dropped by mares of all sorts of colors, the get of sires and mares of known breeding, very often. But they were consistently of a type and that made them interesting from a genetic standpoint, if nothing else. They were suspected, and quite unjustly, it is now claimed, of not having stamina and some of the other desirable traits, and in the early days were not considered as valuable as almost any other color of horse. In the course of time, and in the light of considerable research, the Palamino has finally been credited with the fine blood that flows in his veins and which accounts for many of his splendid qualities, as well as his unquestioned beauty.

The slightest aspersion cast upon a Palamino has always been enough to ruffle my serenity, at least since the days when I owned and loved one. I had a world of first-hand evidence that satisfied me as to their keen intelligence and their loyalty. Spirit and gentleness went hand in hand in my own horse's make-up, I could train him to do anything, apparently, and if he had a fault, I never found it.

The Palamino and the paint, or pinto, and the other stock horses of California date back to the animals brought in by the padres and the conquistadores. The Indians native to this part of the country were emphatic, according to old accounts, in saying that they had never seen any horses until these that the newcomers imported. There were no wild horses here until after this period. Occasionally animals escaped from the mission villages or, as sometimes occurred, horses were turned loose when a settlement was abandoned, or the owner went back to Spain. Undoubtedly, when migration started across this country, moving westward, herds of wild horses from the other portions of the country moved too, and eventually the herds mingled. The scientists assert, however, that all the wild horses of this continent originated from importations.

If we would trace anything of the Palamino's heritage we will have to go back to Spain. In an article appearing in the International Review of Science and Practical Agriculture, the agricultural expert to H. M. Alfonso XIII declares that the Andalusian horses, from which the expeditions to this new world were outfitted, date back to Iberian times when the horses brought in were Libyan of origin, "the best horses in the world." The Carthaginians had their troops mounted on Numidian horses, of the same extraction essentially, and the Roman legionnaires were supplied with the same type. This meant that the horses were of Barb and Arabian blood. The Mahometan invasion brought in the same strains and so, this Spanish authority contends, the blood lines of Spanish horses, aside from the short, stocky, Roman-nosed pony of Catalonia, which has been used for breeding purposes, have a very clearly marked line of descent. These horses of the desert were swift, sure of foot, highly intelligent, full of courage and stamina. They had to be. Naturally, they were the kind of horses to send out to a country like this.

There are those who point to the pure white horses that occur and to these Palaminos and hold that their blood has descended through the centuries from the famous Phrygian horses, bred by that ancient king in Greece—the horses of which Homer sang, and the first to be mentioned in literature. The idea may be nothing more than that; at any rate, the ancestry of many breeds and types of horse provides a complicated and baffling study for geneticists.

We know enough, however, to recognize the traits of the Arabian and Barb in these Palaminos. From them he gets the brain that enables him to master the technic of the range horse; from them he gets the strength to carry weight for long distances; from them he gets his gentleness and his spirit; from them he gets his adaptability to varied living conditions. Many of them have a good portion of thoroughbred blood—which ultimately traces back to a large infusion of Barb and Arabian. He's a good horse, of good blood and he is giving a good account of himself.

As a type, he seems consistently to have style and form. He has the stocky neck with the head carried low, when working; so that his rider can have free use of the whirling riata without having to avoid his horse's head. He is broad-chested, deep lunged, with plenty of bone structure and well-strung muscles, a good back, sloping shoulders and he is sure footed. His friends know him as a horse having no equal for safety, weight-carrying and responsiveness.

At the various affairs, during the coming Spanish Days Fiesta at Santa Barbara, in many places, if you watch, you will see this lovely animal. Watch him work and see for yourself that his friends are justified in their affection for him.

They are making headway in breeding to fix the type and increase the proportion of foals of this type. One day, not many years hence, they intend to give this horse a stud-book of his own.

Consistent efforts in breeding carefully selected types of Palaminos have given the gratifying result of a much higher percentage of Palamino foals than was ever thought possible in former days.

The cowpuncher needs a horse he can count on when it comes to branding time. Some of these creatures possess an almost uncanny wisdom. Note that, in the sketch, the mane is carried on the left side. This is characteristic of the range horse, for the riata is carried on the right side, hung on the saddle horn. The drawing is by Bernard Garbutt of The Times art staff.

It's the Air Now!

THERE is the old story about the dog in the manger. The particular dog in the manger we mention today wants to hog the air. It appears that certain interests begrudge California agriculture the little wave band which, before the Federal-State people took it up, had done no useful work, and which, carrying the radio market news service, has saved and will save California farmers untold thousands of dollars, by giving them reliable market news as promptly as the dealers may secure it.

But the radio dog in the manger barked at quite a well-unified phalanx at the commissioner's hearing recently held in this city. There were representatives of all of organized agriculture, representatives of the California State Chamber of Commerce, of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, and of several other active and influential organizations. Briefs were presented. Arguments were made.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." The vigilance of the army of farmers and right-thinking business men who fought this radio "anti-body" may prove the price of keeping to the people of this part of the country that part of the intangible ether which belongs to them, and to which they have put such good use.

The decision will not be reached by the Federal Radio Commission for some time. There is no use dodging a realization of the grave danger which exists. Additional information may go forward to the commission before that body acts, officials of the California Farm Bureau Federation declare.

Arbitrary powers have been handed over to the commissioners. But the voice of the people, if loud enough, is still mighty.

Needless Worry

THE following quotation from the pen of George H. Hecke, director of the California State Department of Agriculture, as published in the official monthly publication of the department, is commended to the consideration of readers who may be unduly alarmed over recent scare articles about milk in eastern publications:

"Recently articles appearing in publications receiving a nation-wide circulation have treated of the danger of milk and dairy products as a source of disease to the consumer. The articles were given a quasi-scientific complexion and presented in a more or less sensational manner.

"For instance, we are told that 50,000 have it (undulant fever) a mysterious disease, inferentially, if not definitely credited to drinking milk; and then we are told if we have a sore throat, that, again, germs lurking in dairy products are probably the cause. Thus a very erroneous picture of the true situation with respect to the possibility of danger emanating from that source has been presented to the public. Instead of spreading information, we have inflammation, created with respect to the effect produced on a fundamental agricultural industry, as well as upon the public, since, in the words of Herbert Hoover, 'the white race cannot survive without dairy products.'

"Probably no ailment of the human is more common than sore throat, which, in the opinion of medical authority, is due to various infections originating from a wide variety of sources. While it is true that septic sore throat may result from milk containing certain strains of streptococci, medical authority is of the opinion that sore throat due to such infection is comparatively rare—yet the article in question would imply that milk was the principal source of so common a condition as sore throat.

"Such an implication invariably results in the loss of public confidence in the milk supply, resulting in decreased consumption.

"The article further implies that the information presented is in the nature of newer knowledge, when, as a matter of fact, the features of the situation outlined have been common knowledge of all milk regulatory programs and necessary safeguards have long been established extensively throughout the country.

"There admittedly is a real health problem in this country in which milk plays a vital part. Such a problem is not one relating to the danger from milk-borne diseases, such as tuberculosis, typhoid fever, septic sore throat, or even undulant fever, but on the other hand is one of malnutrition of the infant and the child. Wouldn't it be a fine thing if writers would emphasize this important health program?

"Nutritional workers throughout the land have agreed that milk is the most valuable aid in overcoming the nutritional ills, and the solution lies in obtaining an increased consumption of milk and dairy products for those so afflicted.

"The public is also very susceptible to adverse milk publicity and information tending to lessen public confidence in the product will invariably retard the efforts of those who are working to overcome our nutritional ills.

"It is a peculiar fact that while in most cases one is considered innocent until proved guilty, in the case of milk or dairy products, the reverse is too often true and milk is considered guilty until proved innocent. The fact that dairy products are invariably found "not guilty" when so attacked does not entirely overcome the impression originally created—and unfortunately inflammation rather than information may be the net result.

Canada Advances

OF INTEREST to Californians is the announcement from official Canadian sources that the field crops in the great country to the north of the United States have increased 282 per cent in area in the past forty years and that the most considerable part of that increase has taken place in Canada's West. The most remarkable progress has been recorded in the growing of wheat in the prairie Provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

"Why of interest to Californians?" one may want to know.

Because anything that contributes to the prosperity of any part of Western America, north or south of our two international boundaries, is reflected sooner or later in all of the Pacific side of the continent. The people of our great continental west are regular gypsies for traveling when they can afford it and business, industrial and agricultural conditions are in a most actual sense reflected in the number of autos plying up and down our western coastal and inland highways and in the passenger travel by rail north and south. When things are going pretty good in California, as, fortunately, they are most of the time, California licenses flash past one on every highway, from well into Mexico on the south to points north and east across the friendly Canadian line. When Idaho, Montana, Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are feeling flush, their fleets of tourists swell measurably on California's travel arteries.

That's why.

Creating Demand

PERHAPS it's the Federal Farm Board which has started people in the East to thinking more about co-operative marketing, but whatever the cause, co-operation seems to be coming in for considerable attention.

The interesting thing about the discussions is that California must almost perforce be mentioned, for a great part of the pioneering of co-operative marketing has been done here.

California orange men are quoting with approval the following statement which appeared, in a recent number of a national magazine, as part of an article by Ernest Elmo Calkins, famous New York advertising expert:

"Orange growers in California have taught us to eat fifty more oranges a year. What do they do with the money they get for them? Spend it for the goods that you and I make and sell for a living. Would we be better off if the Californians kept their oranges and we kept our goods? There would have been no such consumption of oranges but for the co-operative advertising of the orange growers. A larger market was created out of nothing.

"If they let up we would slump back to our old annual quota of seventeen oranges per capita instead of sixty-seven, and the orange growers would have less to spend for tooth pastes and radios, and the tooth paste and radio manufacturers would have to retrench a little, and so on around the circuit. Business is simply goods and money in circulation. When they circulate freely, business is good. When there is restraint, caution, hesitation, business slumps."

A man who is color blind will never make money buying hay.

A country home and income—here for you

—45 minutes from 7th & Broadway ....a beautiful scenic region that can enrich your life two ways—DRIVE OUT AND SEE IT TODAY!

DON'T let another day go by without taking this beautiful scenic drive that may mean new happiness and increased income to you and your whole family.

Plan now to drive out to La Habra Heights this morning or afternoon, and see for yourself this lovely region of foothill homes, just 45 minutes from downtown Los Angeles.

Home Advantages

La Habra Heights' rolling hillsides command inspiring views of ocean, mountains, wooded canyons, flowering fields and green orchards for scores of miles in every direction. It is one of the most beautiful scenic residential districts in Southern California.

Income Advantages

And the same soil, water and climate that make your flower gardens bloom so abundantly will pay you in another, more important way. For La Habra Heights contains some of the finest avocado and citrus orchards in California. Its remarkable productiveness can add greatly to your income, through the raising of these fast-growing fruits.

And you won't be experimenting. Edwin G. Hart, Inc. is Southern California's oldest and most successful orchard income land development company, with twenty years of success built solely on the success of our clients. Our experts will plant trees, care for them and harvest crops for you, if you wish.

Yet with all these advantages, you can own 5 to 10 income acres in La Habra Heights for the price of but a single narrow lot in a good Los Angeles residential district. Easy terms, if desired.

Here life takes on new richness...your own home...leisured country living...your children with every health and play advantage...splendid schools, churches, etc., in a number of nearby cities...the finest type of neighbors, both Southern Californians and retired easterners...a happier, more charming atmosphere.

As these unusual properties are going fast, we advise prompt investigation. Come today ...tear out and use the accompanying map. (Or if for any reason, you can't drive out today, write address below for new 16-page illustrated La Habra Heights booklet giving complete information. No cost or obligation.)

Pigeon Projects Enabling Chaffey Boys to Earn Money

ONTARIO.—"Earn while you learn."

This slogan might well be adopted by the boys of Chaffey Union High School of this city, who, while studying their books, find time to carry out various projects of an agricultural nature and make some spending money in the process.

The Chaffey pigeon station has just closed its most successful year, under the management of Capt. Ray R. Delhauer, a pigeon expert who was in charge of the United States Army carrier pigeon department during the World War.

The boys who are interested in pigeons are taught how to raise the birds economically for the squabs they produce. These squabs find a ready market, and the boys and the school do quite well with them.

Chaffey station has, in fact, been able to maintain itself through the sale of young stock, shipments having been made as far east as Brooklyn, N. Y., and Palm Beach, Fla., and as far west as the Hawaiian Islands.

Thirty home pigeon projects were carried on at the school during the school year just closed and several of the boys built their own lofts to carry on projects. They displayed considerable ingenuity in construction and in providing their birds with running water and other needs.

At the annual Junior College Fair at Chaffey this spring the boys entered over 500 of their pigeons in competition, the birds being judged by E. Jones of Yorba Linda and James Smith of Arcadia. Jack Binnell, Charles Reid and Joe Richtar, Chaffey students, were in charge of the pigeon department of the fair.

In the picture at the right, James Riley of Chaffey High is shown with his loft of White Kings. He is holding the Upland Mutual Orange Groves trophy, awarded him for the best 1930 project. He also had the best project book in school, competing with 200 other boys.*

The typical hen usually lays the greatest number of eggs the first, or pullet year, then drops off about 15 to 20 per cent each succeeding year.

Arizona Has More Land Under Plow This Season

PHOENIX.—An increase of cultivated acreage in Arizona is noted in the preliminary estimate recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. For the current season, ten principal crops in the State show a total of 614,000 acres, as compared with 599,000, the 1929 total. This is a 2.5 per cent increase. The spread of cultivated area is found for the most part in newly-developed territory. The ten principal crops and their estimated acreages are: Cotton, 212,000; all tame hay, 202,000; wheat, 46,000; oats, 20,000; barley, 20,000; grain sorghums, 60,000; corn, 42,000; white potatoes, 3000; beans, 8000, and sweet potatoes, 1000.

The tame hay acreage this year is approximately 104.6 per cent of last year's. Of the 202,000 acre total, 150,000 acres are in alfalfa, the remainder in grain hay, sudan grass, clover and timothy. Although some insect damage occurred during June in the southern irrigated valleys, conditions over the State were in general very favorable.

Grain sorghums are being planted in most irrigated sections where grown, and in a few dry farm sections. The reported acreage total therefore represents a combination of planted and "intended" acreage. With the present outlook, the estimated total apparently will be reached.

Small grains, including wheat, oats, and barley, have been harvested in most of the lower sections of the State, with yields apparently reaching a satisfactory figure. In the higher sections of the State, wheat and oats remain to be harvested later in the season.

Though a pressure cooker for home canning may cost more than a hot-water bath canner, it is economy in the long run because it lessens the waste from spoilage. All nonacid vegetables should be canned under pressure for safety.

A Serious Trouble

The serious character of infectious bronchitis of fowls, and the present hopelessness of combatting it through treatment, are indicated by George Kernohan, veterinarian in charge of the Petaluma Poultry Pathology Laboratory, in a new bulletin, No. 494, entitled "Infectious Bronchitis in Fowls," issued by the University of California College of Agriculture.

Attempts to immunize fowls against the disease failed, and intratracheal injections of antiseptics, designed as a treatmefit, not only failed to benefit infected fowls, but in many instances actually hastened death, Dr. Kernohan declares.

Infectious bronchitis is prevalent all over the State, and while it may attack birds of any age is most frequently met with in flocks between the age of four and eighteen months. It appears suddenly, spreads rapidly and affects at least half the flock, with a mortality of 5 to 60 per cent, and averaging 10 to 20 per cent. The loss in egg-production may equal the loss in birds.

The disease is encouraged, apparently, by parasitism, under-nourishment, and high egg production. It affects not only chickens, but turkeys, pigeons, ducks, wild quail, sparrows and blackbirds. Although it is known, definitely, to be infectious, the nature of the causative agent has not been determined.

The bulletin may be obtained free from any county farm adviser, or from the college of agriculture, Berkeley.

A Bantam Company

Angeles public schools, with a penchant for antique furniture, glass, china and pewter, with cactus gardening as a side line. But the main objective, other than teaching art to the young idea, is bantam culture.

Asked as to "obstacles and discouragements," Miss Jones says that they had a lot to learn and to unlearn. At first they had hard luck with their hatching operations, their hatches only running around 20 per cent, with liveability poor. But after concluding that poultry culture was more or less of a science, requiring study and painstaking attention to details, they have reached the stage where they believe their success is assured.

This sketch would not be complete without mentioning that in addition to their school and "backyard farming" activities, the Misses Hershberger and Jones found time to adopt a little girl of the neighborhood, named Maria, who needed a home and maternal care. Now Maria is a sort of junior partner in the firm.

Agriculture's Strenuous Tariff Battle Rewarded by Schedule of Real Promise to Industry

By R. L. Adams

Professor of Farm Management, University of California

[The author of this article represented the California Almond Growers' Exchange in Washington during the tariff hearing held by Congress, and as a member of the advisory council of the Growers' Tariff League, a California organization, kept in close touch with the disposal of other items of primary interest to agriculturists. He is therefore exceedingly well qualified to summarize the recently enacted Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act in its relation to agriculture.]

THE new Hawley-Smoot tariff bill became law when President Hoover affixed his signature to the lengthy document on Tuesday, June 17. Thus, after a lapse of one year, five months and thirteen days, the long drawn-out revision of the tariff came to an end.

In common with its predecessors, the Hawley-Smoot bill passed through a number of stages in its making. First came the initiation of legislation by the Ways and Means Committee of the House, then discussion by the House and a favorable vote on May 25, 1929. Next the Senate received the bill and referred it to its Finance Committee, which reported back with such changes as this committee deemed desirable. Next the Senate worked over the bill, first as a committee of the whole, then in its status of Senate, and finally voted its passage on April 2, this year. Because of differences in the bills as passed by the House and the Senate, a conference was next appointed and charged with the task of ironing the thing out. The conferee members given the task this year consisted of Senators Reed Smoot of Utah, Republican; James E. Watson of Indiana, Republican; Samuel M. Shortridge of California, Republican; Furnifold McL. Simmons of North Carolina, Democrat, and Pat Harrison of Mississippi, Democrat. Congressmen Willis C. Hawley of Oregon, Republican; Allen T. Treadway of Massachusetts, Republican; Isaac Bacharach of New Jersey, Republican; John N. Garner of Texas, Democrat, and James W. Collier of Mississippi, Democrat.

Complete Schedule

Promptly starting their deliberations, this committee reached and completed the agricultural schedule on April 10 and 11.

The conference report struck some hard sledding and its deliberations had to be revised three times before the Senate (on Friday, June 13) finally accepted, by a close vote of 44 to 42, its conferees' recommendations as set forth in a fourth report. The next day the House accepted the same conference report by a vote of 222 to 153. The bill passed to President Hoover on Monday, June 16, and was signed by him just before 1 p.m. on June 17, to become effective at midnight that day.

Agriculture to Fore

That agriculture has figured well to the front in the bill is evidenced by the rather formidable list of items which are of direct interest to primary producers. This list is comprised of over 140 items.

The great majority of these items are a part of schedule 7, but others occur in the sugar schedule (No. 5,) the tobacco schedule (No. 6,) the hemp schedule (No. 10,) the wool schedule (No. 11,) the sundries schedule (No. 15) and the free list (No. 16.)

Sugar from Cuba went from 1.76 cents per pound to 2 cents, an increase of 13.6 per cent. Sugar from other taxed sources went from 2 1-5 cents to 2.5, also a 13.6 per cent increase.

As for animal and animal products, heavy cattle went from 1½ cents to 2.5, an increase of 66.7 per cent. Light cattle went from 2 to 3 cents, a 50 per cent jump; sheep, from $2 to $3 per head, also 50 per cent, with the same for lambs and goats. Swine went from half a cent per pound to 2 cents, a 150 per cent increase; whole milk, from 3½ cents per gallon to 6.5 cents, a 73.3 per cent increase; cream, from 30 cents to 56.6 cents per gallon, an increase of 88.7 per cent; butter, from 12 to 14 cents per pound, an increase of 16.7 per cent; cheese from 5 cents per pound (but not more than 25 per cent ad valorem) to 8 cents (but not more than 40 per cent ad valorem,) an increase of 60 per cent; live poultry, from 3 to 8 cents per pound, an increase of 166.7 per cent; baby chicks from "no provision" to 4 cents each; eggs, from 8 cents to 10 cents per dozen, an increase of 25 per cent; cow hides, from the free list to 10 per cent ad valorem; wool, from 24 to 27 cents per pound, an increase of 12.5 per cent.

Field and vegetable crop tariffs were revised as follows: green beans, from half a cent to 3½ cents per pound, an increase of 600 per cent; dried beans, from 1¾ to 3 cents per pound, an increase of 71.4 per cent; broom corn, from the free list to $20 per ton; cabbage, from 25 per cent ad valorem to 2 cents; celery, the same; cotton of a staple of 1⅛ inch or more, from the free list to 7 cents per pound; dried cow peas, from the free list to 3 cents per pound; cucumbers, from 25 per cent ad valorem to 3 cents per pound; egg plant, the same; garlic from 2 to 1½ cents per pound, a decrease of 25 per cent; hay, from $4 to $5 per ton, an increase of 25 per cent; hemp, from 1½ to 2 cents per pound, an increase of 33.3 per cent; horse radish, from 25 per cent ad valorem to 3 cents per pound; lettuce, from 25 per cent ad valorem to 2 cents, oats, from 15 to 16 cents per bushel of 32 pounds, an increase of 6.7 per cent; onions, from 1 to 2½ cents per pound, an increase of 150 per cent; green peas, from 1 to 3 cents per pound, an increase of 200 per cent; dried peas, from 1 to 1¾ cents per pound, an increase of 75 per cent; peppers, from 25 per cent ad valorem to 3 cents per pound; white potatoes, from 50 to 75 cents per hundredweight, an increase of 50 per cent; rough or paddy rice, from 1 to 1¼ cents per pound, an increase of 25 per cent; rice straw and fiber, from the free list to $10 per ton; squash, from 25 per cent ad valorem to 2 cents per pound; straw, from $1 to $1.50 per ton, an increase of 50 per cent; tomatoes, from half a cent per pound to 3 cents, an increase of 250 per cent; turnips and rutabagas, from 12 cents per pound to 25 cents, an increase of 108.3; wheat, from 42 cents (by Presidential proclamation, to 42 cents per bushel of sixty pounds, no increase; other vegetables, from 25 to 50 per cent ad valorem, a 100 per cent increase.

Fruits and Nuts

Fruits and nuts were changed as follows: Nnshelled almonds, from 4¾ to 5½ cents per pound, an increase of 15.8 per cent; shelled almonds, from 14 to 16½ cents per pound, an increase of 17.9 per cent; blanched or roasted almonds, from "no provision" to 18½ cents per pound; dried apricots, from "no provision" to 2 cents per pound; avocados, from "no provision" to 15 cents per pound; dried cherries, from "no provision" to 6 cents per pound; cherries in brine, from 2 to 5½ cents per pound, an increase of 175 per cent; cherries with pits removed, from 3 cents (by Presidential proclamation) to 9½ cents per pound, an increase of 216.7 per cent; dates in containers of ten pounds or less, from 1 to 7½ cents per pound, an increase of 650 per cent; dates on a bulk basis, with pits removed, from 1 to 2 cents per pound, an increase of 100 per cent; figs, from 2 to 5 cents per pound, an increase of 150 per cent; grapefruit, from 1 to 1½ cents per pound, 50 per cent increase; lemons, from 2 to 2½ cents per pound, 25 per cent increase; limes, from 1 to 2 cents, 100 per cent increase; ripe olives in brine, from 20 to 30 cents per gallon, 50 per cent increase; dried olives, from 4 to 5 cents per pound, 25 per cent increase; prunes, from half a cent to 2 cents per pound, 300 per cent increase; unshelled walnuts, from 4 to 5 cents per pound, 25 per cent increase; shelled walnuts, from 12 to 15 cents per pound, 25 per cent increase; blanched or roasted walnuts, from "no provision" to 15 cents per pound.

Seeds were altered as to tariff as follows, all on a per pound basis; alfalfa, from 4 to 8 cents, 100 per cent increase; cabbage from 10 to 12 cents, 20 per cent; crimson clover from 2 to 8 cents, 300 per cent; white clover, from 3 to 4 cents, 33.3 per cent; mustard, from 1 to 2 cents, 100 per cent; radish, from 4 to 6 cents, 50 per cent; rutabaga, from 4 to 5 cents, 25 per cent; turnip, the same.

The miscellaneous list includes: bleached bees wax, from 25 to 30 per cent ad valorem, 20 per cent increase; casein, from 2½ to 5½ cents per pound, 120 per cent increase; crocus corms, from $1 to $2 per thousand, 100 per cent increase; lily and other bulbs, from $2 to $6 per thousand, 200 per cent; lupulin from 75 cents to $1.50 per ton, 100 per cent increase; mushrooms, from 45 per cent ad valorem to 45 per cent ad valorem with an added 10 cents per

The Crop Situation

GRAPE AND PEACH PLANS IN SPOTLIGHT

By Ross H. Gast

CALIFORNIA agriculture seems to have hurdled several difficult barriers since the first of the year and to be ready now for the final sprint to the close of the harvest.

In general, the first half of the year has seen growing conditions practically normal and, as a rule, yields will be larger. Indications at this time are that this will be true both for field and fruit crops.

While the organization campaign in the Federal Farm Board program for the California grape industry has not, at this writing, come to the final check of contracts, it is generally considered that approximately 80 per cent of the acreage is under the plan. The Farm Board set 85 per cent control as necessary, but leaders in the industry believe that it will be found that this percentage of the grape tonnage of California is actually under contract with the grape control board, which is set up as a gigantic co-operative bringing together all growing, marketing and manufacturing units of California's huge grape industry.

The growers' organization committee has accomplished the seemingly impossible in securing the percentage already signed—that is certain. Facing apparently insurmountable difficulties, and with a comparatively short period for organization, this group has welded together units of the industry which have hitherto been opposed to any control.

Just what the grape board will be able to accomplish this year if (as now seems likely) its efforts are acepted by the Federal Farm Board, is still a matter of conjecture. Everyone concedes, however, that the psychological influence of the acceptance of the plan will affect the economic stability

"Big Business"

State Tops List for Number of Commercial Poultrymen

It now appears that the 1930 value of the California egg and poultry industry will amount to about $75,000,000, making that industry one of the most important agricultural activities of the State. There are more poultrymen engaged exclusively in commercial egg production in California than in any other State. These statements were made in a recent number of the monthly bulletin of the California State Department of Agriculture, by R. D. McDrew, secretary of the Poultry Producers of Central California.

Mr. McDrew further says in part:

"About half of the State's annual egg output is produced by men and women who gain their entire livelihood from the production of eggs, and from the marketing of poultry, which is only a by-product of egg production.

"Specialized egg production in California is not scattered promiscuously over the State—at least only to a very small degree—but is centered in clumps here and there. Sonoma county (the Petaluma area) alone produces about 30 per cent of the entire annual egg production of California. Then we have small areas of specialized egg production near Napa, Hayward, Santa Cruz, Sacramento and Modesto. In the southern part of the State there is a specialized center of egg production in San Fernando Valley near Los Angeles, one near San Bernardino, and another near San Diego.

"In Santa Clara, San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys, a rather large egg production, in the aggregate, is maintained by fruit growers and other ranchers, who keep poultry to supplement their incomes, and also to provide fertilizer for their ranches.

"The history of egg prices in California, if not in the entire United States, shows that there is a price cycle of approximately three to four years duration. The last down swing occurred in 1927, and we can almost see the next one appearing in the offing of 1931.

"Since the organization in 1916 of the Poultry Producers of Central California, the downward slump of the egg-price cycle has not carried prices so low as to deny a reasonable profit to the careful and efficient egg producer, but it did serve the useful purpose of weeding out the inefficient and marginal producer, leaving improved conditions for efficient poultrymen. We do not expect the lower prices in 1931, if lower prices do come, to be any less than those of 1927, and we are sure they will not be low enough to drive out of the business any poultryman who exercises good management and keeps his financial house in order. It is time now to begin to look forward to the possibility of the 1931 depression, and if all poultrymen in the United States will do that, now-threatened low-price cycle can be avoided.

"Unfortunately, cheap advice such as we are attempting to give here, and such as frequently is given by the State and the United States departments of agriculture, is not generally heeded. It requires the cruel law of economics, working in the shape of lower prices, to adjust production to consumption requirements.

"The greater hatch of chicks this year, and the consequent raising of more pullets, will in all probability not only make broilers and friers considerably cheaper than they were in the last corresponding period of 1929, but may drive egg prices lower this fall and winter than during the fall and winter of 1929.

"The price of broilers in California frequently runs counter to the price of eggs, and we have seen this situation exemplified very forcibly during the last few weeks, with a bearish feeling on broiler prices, and bullish sentiment as to egg prices."

California has a $75,000,000 industry in eggs and poultry, that being the estimated value for 1930. Here is one busy scene in a Southland egg-handling establishment.

Notes From the Field

Nevada agricultural extension agents are reporting good results in the control of chickenpox by vaccination, using the follicular method, whereby the virus is applied to follicles in the wing from which feathers have been plucked. Advantages of this system over the hypodermic method are set down as greater speed, as high as 2000 vaccinations a day often being reported. There is also less resulting illness among the pullets, and smaller expense, since less vaccine is used. Some of the Nevadans have adopted what they think is an improvement, the stiff bristle brush for the application to the follicles being replaced by a small rake-like metal instrument with which the web under the chicken's wing is scratched.

The Adelanto Poultry Association, operating as a common law trust company, is to be incorporated. The association, made up of Adelanto poultrymen, found it advisable, due to rapid growth, to change the form of its organization. The chief advantage, it is said, will be the more easy securing of financial credit. Common and preferred stock will be issued.

Whether Nevada turkeys are better is a moot question, but they are put up in fine shape, and find a market here in the Southland as well as in Northern California. L. E. Cline, agricultural extension agent of Cline county, Nevada, reports that one market catering to exclusive trade sold 3800 Nevada turkeys over the counter without a single complaint. Carload shipments of the big birds from Southern Nevada, for the first time, will probably be made this fall, Mr. Cline declares.

A Bantam Company

Two Schoolma'ams Find Success at Novel Venture

By Paul E. Kennedy

Two rather recent additions to the ranks of bantam breeders of Southern California are Miss Essie Love Jones and Miss Ada Hershberger, of 3050 Inez street, Los Angeles, who have gone in for Silver Sebrights and Rose Comb Blacks. "Hershberger and Jones" is the official title of the partnership, which includes housekeeping as well as poultry activities, both sidelines to active careers as school-teachers.

Both varieties which these ladies have chosen happen to be among the oldest breeds of bantams known to "the fancy," both harking back to long ago in Merrie Old England. Rose Comb Black Bantams are mentioned by the earliest of writers on poultry subjects, and by some authorities it is declared that they were the originals of all bantams. They were first known as Black Bantams, and were bred with and without feathers on their legs. There were also White Bantams. It is conceded that they are of the same blood lines as the Hamburgs, from which they inherit trim, racy lines and alert bearing.

Silver and Golden Sebright Bantams were originated in 1796 by Sir John Sebright, a member of the English Parliament, who first introduced them at poultry shows in 1800. Golden Polish males were undoubtedly drawn upon largely to produce the beautiful feather lacings characteristic of these varieties. Rose Comb Black females were used on the female side, which gave them their beautiful head points and "classy" body lines.

In a surprisingly short time after beginning breeding these two varieties of bantams, the Misses Hershberger and Jones appeared in some of the leading poultry shows of Southern California with some of their best specimens. They did not make the mistake common to many beginners, who waste much time in hesitating, to enter their birds in poultry show competition. They were delighted to learn that their birds had sufficient quality to win the blue in keen competition.

In recalling the beginning of their poultry activities they admit that their rapid advancement as bantam breeders is due to their love of "the fancy," coupled with the advice and counsel of no less a bantam expert than Dr. G. Irwin Royce of Glendale. Dr. Royce hopes that his mantle as a lover and breeder of these two varieties will fall upon capable shoulders and that these two women fanciers will be able to carry on breeding work along the lines followed by him for many years past. He is also able to give advice to anyone interested, regarding the breeding and mating of about a dozen other varieties with which he is experienced.

Misses Jones and Hershberger are also glad to admit that they belong to that great and growing aggregation of happy "backyard farmers" so common in Southern California. Both are teachers of art in Los

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITIES IN THE SOUTHWEST

Pomona Recent hot weather has been ideal for the development of the several varieties of predatory scale pests, common to the local walnut and citrus groves. Local walnut growers have been devoting attention to the dreaded walnut husk fly, using arsenate of lead as a dust or spray, under direction of Converse York, deputy horticultural inspector for this district. Another application will be made this month. Spraying and fumigating outfits are "all set" for the annual campaign against citrus scales. Deputy Inspector York is recommending seasonal alternation of fumigating and spraying for the citricola and fumigation or oil spray treatment for black scale. Big outfits will take the field against the pests as usual. By reason of the continued seasonal scale pest control work carried on in Pomona Valley of late years citrus trees here are in generally excellent condition.

The plant of the Pasadena-Sunset cannery, the only canning plant now operating here, recently completed a successful run on apricots, and is now starting on peaches. The plant will be run to capacity most of the time, packing Tuscan, midsummer and Phillips clingstones and Lovells.

Citrus shipments from the seven packinghouses of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange have steadily continued during the hot weather. The continued record-breaking high temperatures over the country cleaned up the stock of lemons held by the jobbers and created a strong market. Sales of Valencia oranges have been active, but a bit slow on large sizes. In a recent week fifty-two carloads of Valencias and fifteen cars of lemons marked the peak for weekly shipments this year. Satisfactory prices are being received for both oranges and lemons.

Chino At the recent annual meeting of the dairy department of the San Bernardino County Farm Bureau here, R. C. Gerber discussed a survey now being conducted to determine losses of herds from wire and nails in hay or other feeds, and asked dairymen present to report their experiences. It was found that in the past year twenty-three dairymen, owners of a total of 2014 cows, had lost fifty-eight cows in this way. Assistant Farm Adviser A. L. Campbell reported on cost of production studies carried on in San Bernardino county during 1929. Dr. R. E. Duckworth of the State Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Dairy Control, was the main speaker of the meeting, his subject being "How a T. B. Eradication Area May be Established." Discussion brought out that about 12,000 cows have been tested for "T. B." in San Bernardino county during the past year and that this includes practically all the cows in the county.

Harry Cook, R. C. Gerber, Pete Loubet, and A. L. Campbell were appointed a committee to consider with the few range cattlemen in the county, the matter of a "T. B. eradication area."

Los Alamos Grain harvest in this section is well under way, with most of the fields turning out unusually high yields. According to some of the farmers who have lived in this district for many years, the crop is the best it has been for twenty years. Although late rains caused some of the heavier stands to lodge badly, most of it is being harvested without much trouble. Other parts of Santa Barbara county are also showing fine crops of grain and hay this year, as reports come in from Lompoc, Santa Ynez, Tepesquet, and other points that this year's yields are exceeding expectations.

Tulare Greed caused the downfall of three grain thieves here on the Fourth of July. Had their load been smaller it would not have attracted attention of Constable C. C. Castle, while they stopped to repair a tire in Tulare. But the light truck contained thirty-five sacks of grain and the officer, suspicious, investigated, placing the trio under arrest. They are said to have confessed to stealing the grain from a farm near Corcoran, also to other depredations on ranches.

Pilot W. L. Grier flirting with death to carry destruction to citrus pests by spreading dust over the Robert Jeffery place on the big Irvine ranch, in Orange county. The plane, its wheels down between the rows, shoots over the trees at close to 120 miles per hour, with the wings often less than four feet from the tops of the branches.

Tustin Walnut and citrus growers are watching with much interest the chemical dusting of Orange county orchards by airplane, the latest method of attacking insect pests. Pilot W. R. Grier, in a monoplane very similar to Lindbergh's famous "Spirit of St. Louis," recently conducted some experiments on the ranches of Robert Jeffrey and Ralph Mitchell. The plane covered ten acres of grove in seven minutes. Fitted especially for the work at hand, the plane flitted along close to the ground at a speed of 120 miles per hour, loosing about fifty pounds of dust to the acre on oranges, and thirty-five on walnuts. The work is done early in the morning, so that the dew on the trees will retain the material. Mr. Grier recently completed some work on San Joaquin Valley vineyards. Ten pounds per acre proved sufficient on the vines, he says.

Saugus Approximately $2000 worth of damage was done this season by grasshoppers in the Ridge Route area, in the vicinity of Bailey and Quail lakes, it is estimated by Senior Inspector George Murphy of the Los Angeles County Agricultural Commissioner's office. He says that the damage was principally to late wheat and barley, and almost all on one ranch. One grower sustained a loss of approximately $1500, another was damaged to the extent of $500. Approximately 10,000 acres were inspected. Prepared poison was distributed at cost to various growers by G. R. Gorton, deputy agricultural commissioner in charge of quarantine in Los Angeles county. Contrary to the experience of previous years in which the hoppers have been numerous, the infestation did not occur to any great extent east of the Ridge Route. A very good kill was obtained by poisoning, but it is believed that the main solution of the problem was that the grasshoppers migrated to range land or wild growth.

Brawley Francis Heiny, long known as a horticultural "wizard" hereabouts, has perfected a new grape, which he is calling the Purple Seedless Giant. E. Snyder of the United States Experimental Vineyard at Fresno has pronounced it exceptional in size and otherwise outstanding among the seedless varieties. It is early, an almost black purple, and an excellent raisin grape. Mr. Snyder advised Mr. Heiny to obtain a patent on the new variety, since the patent laws now provide protection in the cultural field, and Mr. Heiny is planning upon availing himself of this privilege.

Reno, Nev. To assist rural women in Nevada in the efficient keeping of household budgets and accounts, Miss Mary Rokahr, extension economist in home management for the United States Department of Agriculture, recently spent two days in this State. She conferred with rural housewives in Churchill, Elko and Washoe counties, being accompanied on her visit by Mrs. Mary Stillwell Buol, assistant director of the Nevada agricultural extension service. Miss Rokahr was formerly State leader of home demonstration work in Wyoming and is conversant with western conditions and problems.

Yucaipa Fruit growers of the Yucaipa district are just getting a little breathing spell now, for it is somewhat in between seasons with apricots, cherries, plums and early peaches out of the way and the J. H. Hale peaches coming on. After these will come the Albertas and next the late peaches, as well as the grapes, these being followed by the apples, running the season well into November.

The wayside stands of this district are becoming better and better outlets for fruit as the traffic on the State highway, which is a part of the great transcontinental highway system becomes greater. At these stands the products of the fruit growers are sold attractively boxed so they can be taken into cars and enjoyed on the way. Plans are now being made for a greater sale of apples and cider than ever before.

Colton The first of a series of picnics for farm folk was held recently by the Colton Chamber of Commerce. The surrounding farm territory has been divided into districts, and each in turn will be guest district, from which 100 to 150 farm families will receive special invitations to be guests of the people of Colton. The Grand Terrace district people were the first to be entertained. The Colton chamber acted as host, furnishing part of the refreshments, giving a band concert, keeping "open house" at the municipal plunge, and finally closing with a night ball game. Brief addresses were made by President J. N. Robinson and Mayor Walter A. Pfunder, and a response was given by S. C. Edwards, past president of San Bernardino County Farm Bureau.

Slightly under-ripe fruits make the best fruit pickles.

Redlands There will not be as large a crop of oranges in the Redlands district the coming season as there was two years ago, but will be larger than that of the season now closing, declares County Agricultural Commissioner John P. Coy, who announced that his deputies throughout the county have reported a 90 per cent of normal citrus crop for the coming year. This is the average figure taken from the reports from the Highland, Redlands, Chino, Ontario, San Bernardino, Bryn Mawr, Grand Terrace, Rialto, Fontana, and Cucamonga districts. The crop is estimated as 100 per cent in the Redlands area, but this will not be as heavy a crop as there was two years ago.

An unusually heavy bloom was noted in every district, and the June drop was not heavier than usual. There is just about the right amount of fruit for a good buying season, the commissioner believes. The estimates of the various districts and the men who made them are: Highland, J. F. Bone, 95 per cent: Redlands, Walter B. Hadley, 100 per cent; Chino, 100 per cent, C. C. Delphey; Ontario, George A. Pohl and H. H. Spies, 80 per cent; San Bernardino, Colton, Grand Terrace, W. P. Fox, 80 per cent; Bryn Mawr, W. O. Cook, 90 per cent; Rialto, S. J. Bolsea, 90 per cent; Etiwanda-Fontana, Charles Donnelly, 85 per cent; Cucamonga, B. R. McKennett, 80 per cent, and Upland, J. F. Anderson, 80 per cent.

Reseda Frank Alvos, who has invented an alfalfa conveyor, has his machine in the field and is trying it out. The mower and conveyer are operated on a tractor, and as the green hay is cut it is loaded on a truck for delivery. This combination conveyor and tractor, Mr. Alvos declares, does a neater and cleaner job than was possible before, rides the borders satisfactorily, and is a "hay saver" as well. A large amount of local alfalfa is cut green for dairies and dehydrators, and Mr. Alvos's combination was devised to lighten this work. Representatives of two large tractor companies witnessed recent demonstrations. One of the fields cut was on the Franz Borchard property near this place.

Westmoreland One of the little side dramas of the watermelon season this year was the releasing of a number of men from the local jail to load the melons into cars. A conspicuous shortage of professional loaders was discovered and when these men were tracked down, they were discovered in the lock-up, due to a temporary spree on something stronger than watermelon juice. Justice Cook of the local court allowed them to return to work with the provision that after hours they again be returned to custody until their cases were disposed of. A good many melons were saved from spoilage by this action, and perhaps a little extra money for fines was earned as well.

Porterville The Porterville plant of the Neuhoff Cannery Company started the peach season on July 15, opening on Tuscans. Canning will continue on the different varieties until about the middle of September. The outlook for the peach crop is very good in this district.

The harvesting of cantaloupes in the Zante district north of here is under way. Picking started the first week in July. Most of the fruit has been trucked to the Bay district. The melons are of a good quality and about fifty acres are planted to this northwest of Zante. Several hundred acres of honeydew and honeyball melons are grown in the Porterville, Zante and Strathmore districts. They will ripen probably in August. Shipments are estimated at around 300 cars.

Tipton Cotton in Tulare county is making fine progress, according to the horticultural commissioner's report. The acreage is somewhat reduced from last year's.

Little Farm Homes

Little Town Farm Suits Family From Far-Off Nova Scotia

WITH a half-acre place in a little city as a home and a "base of operations" for a business which keeps him on the road a good part of the time, Leo E. H. Koch, of 1021 South Sultana avenue, Ontario, has found ideal conditions for one whose living is largely made "on the road."

The home place is also producing an income under the supervision of Leo Koch, Jr., in a poultry project designed to produce 3-months-old Rhode Island Red fryers. The equipment includes three units of 500 capacity each, with practically the entire output sold to private trade through local newspaper advertising.

The younger Koch, who is a graduate of Chaffey Junior College, has chosen poultry husbandry as his life work and has already demonstrated his ability. With the head of the family away most of the time, the responsibility for the entire project has been placed with the junior member of the firm, and on a visit to the property by the judges of the recent Farm and Garden-Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce Small Farm Home Contest they found him busy building new equipment.

Mr. Koch's letter, written as a condition of entry in the contest, follows:

"Gentlemen:

"I came to California from Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1917. One week after my arrival in Los Angeles with my family, consisting of my wife, two girls and three boys, Halifax was practically blown to pieces by a big explosion which killed and wounded a large number of its inhabitants. Had I remained there one week longer, we would undoubtedly have met a similar fate.

"For the first six months after our arrival we lived in Hollywood, where I worked for some time in the motion-picture studios. But this work being uncertain, and our expenses high, we decided to seek a place in the country where we could raise chickens and keep a small garden, and finally located in Ontario, which appealed to us at first sight on account of its beauty and charm.

"We have derived great pleasure in developing our farm home to our mutual satisfaction. We grow a great deal of produce for our consumption, and any surplus is sold at a profit.

"Our place contains a variety of plants, fruit trees, etc., including orange, grapefruit, quince, plum, crabapple, fig, almond, loquat, peach, apricot, walnut, etc. There are also three rows of dewberries and several grape vines. These provide us with plenty of fresh fruit in the summer and are a welcome addition to the table during the winter months in the form of preserves.

"The head of the family (the writer) is employed in the manufacture and sale of a proprietary article which takes him away from home at certain periods of the year so that he does not get much time to take an active part in the work of the small farm home, which has to be attended to by the other members of the family. The number of hours spent in the maintainence of the place ranges from four to eight per day, including care of the chickens.

"The one-half acre is laid out as follows: A five-room house facing the boulevard; front lawn lined with California privet hedge; driveway on north side leading to yard and garage; side lawn running full length of house on south side, with fish pond and aquatic plants in center; rose bed and ornamental plants facing the road on the west front of lawn; small path running along the south side of house, and covered by a pergola; large mulberry tree shading entire side of house; around the trunk an aviary which houses some Mexican ring-neck doves.

"The chicken equipment is in the rear and is divided into three units of 500 capacity each. It includes gas brooders and the houses are electrically lighted. Some years we go in for egg production, but we have found that raising day-old chicks to the fryer and pullet stage is far more profitable and of late are specializing along this line. Disposing of the cockerels first to local dealers at the market price per pound, we advertise our 3-months-old pullets in the local newspaper and sell to the private trade at a pretty fair margin of profit. We raise only chicks hatched from good stock, and by studying the market prices, we know when to dispose of them to the best advantage. We find the Rhode Island Reds best for this purpose.

"The tools we find most useful in caring for this place are a wheelbarrow, hand cultivator, rake, hoe, shovel, spade and fork. There are five water hydrants situated in various parts of the garden, and two fifty-foot lengths of hose are sufficient to take care of all irrigation. The chicken runs are fenced with portable panel fencing which can be easily removed and by means of which we may increase or decrease the space as required. The chicken house is connected with the garage, which also serves as a feed room.

"There is an automatic sprinkling system installed on the side lawn. All chicken fertilizer not used on the place is sold to orange growers and brings an extra profit.

"My wife is an ardent lover of flowers and has a plentiful array of these set out where they will prove the most effective. Many ornamental trees and shrubs also surround the place, and if there is any personal satisfaction to be derived in tending these beauties of nature, we are all getting our full share of it.

Leo Koch, Jr., building an addition to the Koch poultry houses at Ontario.

"My sons, two of whom are employed in a local nursery, are always ready to co-operate in a practical way in carrying out the plans of "the head gardener." The third son has made a practical study of the chicken business, covering a period of about five years, during which time he has raised some 10,000 chickens. This makes a pretty good family combination for running a small home farm."

An inspector of the Bureau of Field Crops of the State Department of Agriculture who knows his weeds recently walked through a twenty-acre Sacramento vineyard which had not been cultivated this year. Then he took off his shoes and found the seeds of thirty kinds of weeds. Twenty other weeds which he saw in the vineyard failed to take advantage of his "dogs" as a convenient means of seed dissemination.

Argue Radio Case

Plea Made for Short-Wave Service Before Commissioner

California agriculture presented a solid front in defense of the short wave length radio network, so successfully operated by the California Department of Agriculture, at a hearing in Los Angeles, July 17, before Commissioner E. O. Sykes of the Federal Radio Commission. While the decision as to whether these short wave length allocations will remain assigned to the State Department of Agriculture will not be known for several months, it is generally conceded that the commissioner was impressed by the vital need of this service not only to California, but to consuming areas dependent on California for perishable products.

Practically every phase of agriculture in California was represented in some way or other at the hearing. Among those who presented briefs were R. H. Taylor of the agricultural legislative committee, which brings together all of the co-operative marketing organizations of the State; George H. Hecke, director of the State Department of Agriculture; representatives of the farm bureau, State Grange and Farmers' Union, as well as a number of other groups.

C. B. Moore, managing secretary of the Western Growers' Protective Association, was chairman of the producers' presentation before the commission. Mr. Moore, who has had considerable experience at hearings in Washington, ably argued agriculture's case.

The short wave length radio system of the State Department of Agriculture is operated as a California unit tying in with the leased wire system of the Federal Market News Service. Through this system speedy and complete reports on all consuming markets of the East are available to growers in the larger producing areas each day. At this time, practically all the market news assembled and disseminated in California is handled over the short-wave circuits.

Why Not Raise Our Own?

CALIFORNIA HAS ONLY A THIRD ENOUGH HOGS FOR ITS NEEDS

By Dr. L. F. Conti

Senior County Veterinarian, Los Angeles County Live Stock Department

IT IS a well-known fact that California does not produce nearly enough pork for its own home consumption, consequently it should be an ideal location for those interested in the raising of hogs for the market or the breeding of pure-bred animals which can be used to improve the stock of the State as the industry develops.

In 1919, there were about 1,003,000 hogs on the ranches of California. After 1919, which was the banner year of production, the number of hogs steadily declined until in 1927 the live-stock census showed about 425,000 head, or less than half the number on hand eight years before. It is encouraging, however, to note that the census of 1928 indicated an upward turn, crediting the State with about 650,000 head on January 1, 1929.

In 1919, there were 3,400,000 people in the State of California, while our new census shows around 5,500,000, an increase of over 2,000,000. We were not able to supply our State pork consumption even in 1919, our banner year, so it can readily be seen how "short" we are at the present time with but a little more than half the number of hogs and double the population. It has been carefully estimated that the yearly consumption of pork and pork products in the United States is over ninety pounds per person. There is no reason to believe that the people of California consume less than this general average, therefore, in order to care for our requirements with local stock, we should have over 2,000,000 hogs, instead of our present 650,000 head.

If we consider for a moment that 732,535 hogs were killed under Federal, State, city and county inspection in Los Angeles alone for the year 1929 and compare it with the hog census of 650,000 head for the whole State, we can readily appreciate the shortage. In addition to the slaughter of live animals, which is primarily for the purpose of obtaining fresh cuts, a very large volume of partially manufactured products is shipped in from all over the United States, to be smoked prior to distribution. The tonnage of this product will easily represent 50 per cent of the total live hog tonnage. These figures apply to our local Los Angeles receipts of live and dressed pork and do not take in the shipments to the northern markets or other portions of the State. They serve to emphasize the shortage of California hogs and indicate a greater degree of permanency for the business of California hog ranchers than is evident in other States.

When we consider the number of hogs shipped into our local markets from eastern points and the fact that these eastern producers have heavy shipping costs to bring their stock here, we can safely say that our local ranchers are in an excellent position to compete with them. Most of the outside producers who are taking advantage of our higher prices have a long shipment to contend with and naturally suffer some losses that the local producer should not necounter on short hauls.

Our local markets have been paying a premium that's often up to $1.60 per hundredweight more than some of the eastern markets in order to encourage eastern producers to help take care of our local requirements. This factor gives our local ranchers another advantage in higher prices. However, the biggest point in favor of the local hog raisers is the mild climate. The severe climate in eastern States, which is both hard on the raising of pigs and the growing of crops, brings the cost of pork production there to a higher point than is necessary for the ranchers in our section. It should be emphasized that the climatic conditions in Southern California are not only ideal for the raising of hogs, but also for the growing of crops suitable for the production of high-class pork. An abundance of such crops can be produced in any of the good agricultural sections of this State. It is safe to say that high-class pork can be produced cheaper in this State than in any other in the Union, for while the eastern hog raiser plans on the farrowing of his pigs during certain favorable months in the year, the California producers can have farrowings almost any month and get the maximum efficiency from their breeding stock.

"Bacon" Type Preferred

There are two general classes of swine, the lard type and the bacon type. The bacon type is preferred in this section. Fat is considered more or less of a waste product. The preferred weight on the local market is from 170 to 200 pounds. Larger hogs do not bring the top prices. As far as the crops available for pork production are concerned, it is well to make it clear that California is capable of becoming one of the best corn-growing States. There are also plenty of other feeds that are sucessfully grown, such as sorghums, barley and other grains that in turn are excellent for the feeding and finishing of hogs. California excels all other States in the production of alfalfa, which is a most valuable feed.

Today the pig is usually considered an essential part of farming especially where intensive farming is carried on. In many of our small diversified farming sections we have been able to convince owners of the advantages to be gained by keeping from one to five or more brood sows. There are often sufficient by-products and waste feedstuffs to maintain a few head of breeding animals and their litters until they have reached a certain weight, after which the farmer may see fit to sell his pigs at weaning age or put them on other ranches where they can be fed out on a share basis. Many of these small farmers are raising their litters up to a certain age on the by-products of their farms and then growing them out and finishing them as marketable stock on purchased grains. The production of pigs up to a certain age under these conditions is carried out at a very small cost to these ranchers so that a good margin still remains for profit, even if grain is purchased to finish the animals. On most diversified farms enough feed is wasted to supply the normal pork consumption of the ranch workers with very little investment or additional labor.

Many Feeds Available

Referring to the use of by-products and cull crops for the feeding of hogs, many ranchers are active in obtaining such material as cull beans, cull raisins, whey, fruits, old bread from the larger baking companies and many other materials capable of producing good frames and even fattening, when used along with a small amount of grain sufficient to properly balance the ration. There are sections in which cull crops can be purchased at a very reasonable figure during certain seasons of the year. These cull crops should be salvaged by the local hog growers whenever possible as they afford a means of lowering the cost of production where high-priced grains are the main portion of the ration.

A number of California barley raisers, instead of selling their grain, are buying hogs to convert it into pork. When it is figured that the cost of sacking barley and transporting it to railroad centers for shipment amounts to about 40 cents per sack, a farmer who sells his grain on the basis of $2 barley only gets $1.60 a sack for it on the ranch. At this rate the farmer could get more for his grain by converting it into pork.

The hog produces a given weight of carcass more economically than any other animal. He is easily made ready for the market in a short period of time under proper feeding and housing conditions and therefore allows for a quicker turnover of money than is offered by most of the other types of live stock. He is capable of putting on fat and flesh long before he is mature. Being the most prolific of the larger domestic animals, we find a lower cost for increasing the number of animals, thereby making the propagation of the most efficient types relatively easy.

Educational Work

In many counties adjoining Los Angeles county movements are well under way to increase hog raising. Los Angeles county, through the county live-stock department, has for the past five years carried on a program for assisting ranchers who are interested in this industry by acquainting them with the conditions under which the maximum profits can be made and also planning and supervising the construction of equipment most suitable for the best results in the raising of pigs and finishing for market. Through an educational program in addition to the inspection and supervision of hog ranches, this department has helped increase the raising of local pigs to a point where our ranchers are now producing about 85 per cent of thier own pigs, as against 10 per cent four years ago. Pigs which are raised in the locality where they are later to be fed out go through their growing-out stage and the finishing period more rapidly and with less trouble than those shipped in from another climate, which are in most cases changed to another type of feed too rapidly. It is often these climatic and feeding changes which cause the slow weight gains and death losses and discourage the new rancher who has not been able to raise his own feeders.

There is no reason why the California rancher should not either start raising a few hogs or, if he is already in the business, enlarge his herd and get in on the ground floor for supplying a needy market.

The Los Angeles county live stock department, with offices at 203 Administration Building, Union Stock Yards, Los Angeles, will be glad to give free information and assistance to any person interested in this or any other branch of the live-stock industry.

Community Affair

City Dads Put Up Cash Prizes in Burbank Garden Contest

By Margaret Verl Freyburger

Yard and garden contests are not infrequent in Southern California, but to have a city council that appropriates $200 for prizes was the unusual feature of a contest recently brought to a close in Burbank. The money came from the city promotion fund, the officials considering the contest a worthy bit of advertising for the community.

National recognition is now sought by the first-prize winners. Through the cooperation of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, photographs have been taken of their gardens. These pictures have sent to the Yard and Garden Contest Association in Davenport, Iowa, which will exhibit them about the country with hundreds of others for the purpose of arousing interest in more attractive home surroundings.

Burbank's contest, the first of its kind in the little Southland city, was directed by Miss Octavia Lesueur, who, as chairman of the beautification committee of the Fifteenth District Realty Association in Southern California, and of the park committee of the local realty organization, saw the opportunity for worth-while promotional effort in such an event. Miss Lesueur's first move was to interest the Burbank Realty Board in the plan. Then the aid of the City Council and the Chamber of Comcerce was enlisted. Standard sets of rules, entry blanks and score cards were secured from the association in Davenport and the campaign was opened the latter part of March with the slogan, "You Win if You Lose!" By April 1, about 100 entries had been filed. Then came the task of taking pictures of each contestant's yard so that improvement during the next ninety days could be noted. This was accomplished by a committee of four men: Don G. Ferguson, Frank Wellington, Joseph E. Newcomer, and Earl L. White, each of whom photographed in his own quarter of the city.

As weeks passed, business men with sleeves rolled up and housewives wearing gayly colored smocks and sun shades bent over their gardens early in the morning and late at night. Articles in the local newspaper stimulated them to greater effort.

The day arrived when the judges were to come with a score sheet. Three experts, Leslie Tuttle, Pasadena; R. E. Downing, Glendale, and J. D. Meriwether, San Fernando, accompanied by John Russon, president of the Burbank Realty Board, spent a day and a half grading the 100 yards and gardens, giving due consideration to such points as the hospitality and homelikeness of the front yard, the livability of the rear grounds, and the neatness of the alley. At the conclusion a committee took charge of the scores and figured the percentages.

On the night of June 24 streets near the band stand were as crowded as some of the miniature golf courses on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles. Prize winners were to be announced and everyone was interested. After several rousing selections by the Burbank Municipal Band, Mayor Bruce put an end to the suspense by awarding cash prizes or merit certificates to the winners, as follows:

Class 1—Contestants who did the work on their yards and gardens with their own hands:

First—Mrs. Clara M. Bowen, 717 Fairmount Road, $50. Second—Mrs. Clyde Gibson, 310 Grinnell avenue, $30. Third—W. D. Millar, 132 South Orchard Drive, $20. Fourth—F. V. Denhart, 720 East Fifth street, $10. Fifth—E. Burton, 1719 Grismer avenue, $5. Sixth—Mrs. E. P. Kurtz, 315 South California street, merit certificate.

Class 2—Contestants who employed some one to do part of the work:

First—Mrs. Florence L. Gower, 617 North Angeleno avenue—merit certificate.

Second—J. H. McCambridge, 1051 Fairmount Road, merit certificate.

Class 3—Contestants who employed an expert gardener:

First—Walter J. Price, 806 East Kenneth Road, merit certificate. Second—I. A. Sherlock, 617 East Tenth street, merit certificate.

Class 4—Best church grounds:

First—Nazarene church, Sixth street and Santa Anita avenue, $25.

Class 5—Best improved vacant lot:

First—M. McGuire, 536 North Palm avenue, $25. Second—H. E. Barcroft, 239 South Myers street, $15. Third—Rev. J. P. Barker, Fifth street and Cypress avenue, $10.

Class 6—Best business place:

First—Telephone Company, North Palm avenue, merit certificate.

Class 7—Best garden of Councilman:

First—W. H. Stroud, 919 Harvard Road, merit certificate.

Class 8—Best garden of realtor:

First—J. E. Newcomer, 939 San Jose avenue, merit certificate.

Western Bee Study

A recent appropriation by Congress will permit the United States Department of Agriculture to establish, on the Pacific Coast, a new field laboratory to study beekeeping problems in this area. The locale of the laboratory has not as yet been chosen, but the department plans to place it so that most of the problems to be met with can be studied at close range. In addition to the bee-culture laboratory at Washington, D. C., the department at present has field laboratories at Laramie, Wyo., and Baton Rouge, La. The series of distinct honey flows in California, making migratory beekeeping necessary, will be studied

Exhibits Combined

State Department and County Office Pool Efforts

The exhibits of the State Department of Agriculture and the Los Angeles County Agricultural Commissioner's office will be combined at the Pomona Fair, to be held September 12 to 21, inclusive, according to G. R. Gorton, deputy agricultural commissioner. A sixty-three foot frontage has been allotted for the exhibits. Panels will be used for quarantine inspection, rodent control, apiary inspection, standardization, shipping-point inspection and pest control.

Plate displays of fruits and vegetables will be again exhibited under the supervision of the County Agricultural Commissioner's office. Senior Inspector George Hussey will have charge of this work.

Trees and Their Value

They are very familiar to us and highly favored. The Acacia dealbata, or silver wattle, is a winter bloomer and helps dress us up in our best for the delectation of our winter visitors. It has silvery, fern-like leaves and yellow flowers and is the fastest grower of this family. The decurrens is just about as rapid in growth, with green leaves very similar to dealbata. We wouldn't do without baileyana, with its delicate ferny leaves of silvery blue-green and its masses of sweet yellow flowers in the spring. These varieties are of much more recent use than the black wattle or acia, which has been so extensively used for street plantings. The tree men, however, tell us that some objections can be found against this particular variety. For that matter, someone always seems to find some objection to everything!

This barely mentions some of the most desirable trees at our command in Southern California. There are many others, extremely desirable, too, and, really, the main thing is to plant some kind of tree, or better, trees!

Looking 'Em Over

Fruit Inspection Station Is Opened at Lebec

To take care of inspection of truck shipments of fruits and vegetables now moving from growing districts in San Joaquin Valley, the highway inspection station has been reopened at Lebec. This station, operated jointly by the Kern county and Los Angeles county agricultural commissioners, was opened July 13 and will be operated during a good part of August, according to Paul K. Wilson, deputy agricultural commissioner in charge of fruit and vegetable standardization in Los Angeles county.

Any truck loads of grapes which do not carry certificates showing that they comply with the California Fruit and Vegetable Standardization Act when loaded at point of origin, will be held at the station until maturity tests are made. Other fruits and vegetables will be inspected to see that they comply with the law.

Whenever a load is intercepted at the station which is found not to meet the terms of the law, the load is allowed to proceed to Los Angeles, where it is reconditioned before being sold. The State Department of Agriculture furnishes an inspector who works all night and takes care of the reconditioning in order that the fruit may be sold in the market immediately after the reconditioning is concluded. In this way there is a minimum of loss to the grower.

During the time the station was in operation in 1929, the total number of trucks of grapes passing over the Ridge Route was 1465. This is equivalent to 474¼ carloads. The total number of trucks loaded with other products was 733.

The station has been operated each year at the beginning of the shipping season since 1924. At present several other such stations are operated on similar lines in different parts of the State.

A Big Job

Five spray rigs, three of which are new, are being used in the campaign against puncture vine on Los Angeles city streets in San Fernando Valley, according to Lorne S. Neville, chief deputy agricultural commissioner in charge of rodent and weed control in Los Angeles county.

On one type of rig the mixing is done in the mixing chamber at the rig, and on the other at the delivery point of the nozzle, using two separate lines, one for air and the other for oil.

The "first time over," 727.4 miles of streets were found infested and sprayed. Up to July 15 infested streets to a total of 250 miles had been sprayed the second time over. In the Newhall-Saugus area, 42.3 miles of county roads, found infested, have been sprayed. Thousands of gallons of oil have been applied on city streets in San Fernando. Infestation has been more general than last year, although lighter on most roads. Spraying this season is far advanced over the 1929 schedule, although the starting time was later this year.

Bulk of Sawdust in Crotch Keep Plum Branches Spread

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—What is believed to be a genuinely new idea in orchard practice has been adopted at Col. Dale Bumstead's Tal-wi-wi Ranch, twenty miles northwest of Phoenix, where 5200 young plum trees have had balls of sawdust, wrapped in muslin, thrust into their crotches to spread the limbs apart and start them in the way they should go.

Everyone knows that the natural tendency of plumb branches is to grow straight upward. Training them fanwise has always been a matter of careful pruning, expensive and slow. Inside twigs are cut away and outer ones encouraged. In this process much fruit wood is sacrificed and production is lessened in the early years of the tree's life.

Col. Bumstead, when he planted eighty acres of Kelsey and Wickson plums last February, decided to adopt a different method which he believes will avoid this heavy pruning and consequent loss of fruit, and still give his trees the desirable shape that makes for quality fruit as well as ease of picking.

In June, he bought $4 worth of sawdust at a box factory, invested in a few bolts of cheap muslin, and set two boys to making balls about the size of an indoor baseball. Then he had two of his trustworthy men thrust the balls down among the tender, sappy limbs. The whole operation cost only three cents a tree. The balls are too soft to damage the bark but firm enough to accomplish the desired result.

Horticulturists who have seen the Tal-wi-wi plum orchard declare that the idea is as sound as it is simple, and predict its adoption by others.

Blythe Production of alfalfa seed in Palo Verde Valley has increased 100 per cent over last year, 2000 acres now being given over to seed production, with 300 pounds as the average estimated yield. At this rate the production this year will be 600,000 pounds.

They Can't Quit

Once a Dirt Farmer, Always a Dirt Farmer

By Marshall Breeden

C. S. Chamberlain, a first-grade dirt farmer, lives in a delightful old house hidden in a ten-acre portion of Tuckers Grove, about four miles from the Santa Barbara mission. A. C. Edwards, an ex-dirt farmer from Newton, Iowa, now farms the garden around his gasoline service station.

Mr. Edwards found it more convenient to become a purveyor of gas and motor oils to the passing tourist, but even so, he has never lost his love for the soil nor the ability to work it. This industry is much in evidence by the garden he has grown around his station, located on the highway three miles north of Santa Barbara. There are occasional oil stations with gardens around them, but few of them equal this one in point of care, planning and scope.

On one side there are a dozen or so tomato plants. These receive special care, irrigation and fertilization, for Mr. Edwards tries to keep them producing as long, often and prolifically as possible. They are deep-rooted vines and are almost long enough to need all of the six-foot trellis he has built for them. Roses, geraniums and Shasta daisies interlined with a growth of lesser plants are scattered through a rather imposing stretch of grass. A small plot has been sown to common garden vegetables, while another is producing vines which portend an abundance of melons.

In addition to his farm, Mr. Chamberlain manages to keep his front yard beautifully cultivated and flower grown. The house was built almost before the "gringo" came in swarms. It is large, gabled and weather-worn enough to fit perfectly back into its frame of hill. From the highway the yard ascends abruptly, the front yard extends from the fence to the house and beyond on either side. It is terraced with natural rock, found in the near-by hills, and has a diffused growth of many flowers. The march of the swarm of poinsettias is like a battalion of soldiers, so vast are their numbers, but they are almost insignificant compared to the red holly berry shrubs.

Except in actual harvest time, Mr. Chamberlain attends to his ten and one-half acres. Irrigation is by pipes and ditches. The water is secured from a well more than 300 feet deep. There are other fruit trees, but the main crop seems to be lemons which are carefully spaced at wide intervals up and down and around the place. Each tree shows attention to its well-being, and why not? They are his bank account builders. Each lemon tree has a well-defined mulch around its base; fertilizer is used annually, but never placed nearer than a foot from the trunk.

Tuckers Grove is at times exposed to rather high winds. They come racing in from the near, but unseen, ocean. To offset any possible wind damage, Mr. Chamberlain has grown enormous loquat trees.

Big Mustard Crop

Good Conditions Make for Heavy Production at Lompoc

LOMPOC.—The mustard crop harvest is now well under way, with several of the larger growers expecting to finish operations in the near future. It is estimated that when this year's harvest is completed, the figures will show that nearly 90 per cent of the nation's mustard output will have come from the small Lompoc Valley.

Although the mustard acreage has decreased some 500 acres this year, dropping off from 2200 to 1700 acres, the total production will nearly equal that of last year, due to more favorable growing conditions.

Prior to 1928, all of the mustard harvesting was done by means of reapers and stationary threshing machines. Now, however, a few combined harvesters are being used, and apparently with considerable success. Some of the growers in this locality who have started operations are: Lewis Brothers, with forty acres; Bennett Estate, forty acres; Harry Howerton, twenty acres; Lowel Shanklin, eighty acres; and Clyde Houk, forty acres.

The mustard grown in this locality is of two varieties, the Trieste and the Yellow. Both of these are handled in the same way and the seed of both is used for manufacturing meat dressings, and a small amount for mustard oil. During the last few years, there has been some demand for seed of both varieties for use as cover crops. They are more desirable for this purpose than is the wild yellow mustard.

A. C. Edwards of Tucker's Grove finds time for gardening around his gas station.

Twenty-One Varieties of Fruit on One Redlands Tree

REDLANDS.—Twenty-one varieties of citrus fruit may be seen growing on one tree on the estate of Blair M. Boyd, Redlands. From the grapefruit varieties to the tiny kumquats the gaze will wander with interest, but one wonders even more at the several varieties of leaves to be found on the tree. Citrus leaves of different fruits are often indistinguishable, but on this tree may be found the wide leaves and narrow.

The tree is fifteen years old and much smaller than others in the grove half its age. It was budded by Jim Wideman, the second year in most cases resulting in production of fruit.

The original tree was wild stock, but scaly bark has been a serious problem. To give it added stimulus Mr. Boyd has had arch grafting done and the new roots seem to be giving the tree added vigor. Several grafts have been made. The strange tree has always borne heavily. The larger grapefruits prove heavy loads. Last year the tangerines bore so heavily that they broke down limbs.

The varieties of fruit on the tree, as given by Mr. Boyd, are: King Mandarine tangerine, Sweet tangerine, Kid Glove oranges, kumquat, Mexican lime, Sweet lemon, Eureka lemon, Ruby Blood orange, Malta Blood orange, citron, shaddock, seedless grapefruit, Lu Gim Gong, Sweets, Thompson Improved navel, Valencia Washington navel, Sampson Tangelo, St. Michels, Wild Australian sour orange, Homosasa and Seedling.

Fontana The Fontana Union Water Company has agreed to lease several hundred acres of water-bearing land back of the Fontana power house to the California State Fish and Game Commission. The commission and the Izaak Walton League will work together in operating a bird refuge to propagate and preserve the quail in the refuge, protecting them against shooting and such animals as weasels. The quail will be allowed to increase and spread out from the protected parts where hunters can shoot them during the season. Harry Lamb of Fontana, who will assist in the establishment of the refuge, says it will be one of several to be established in the foothills, as the result of feeding arrangements being made by Walton League chapters.

Trees Mean Both Beauty and Value to the Residence Site

LOOKING backward, it seems but a short time ago that the sections of the city generally described as West Wilshire and West Hollywood were decidedly in the making. Streets had been opened up, improvements put in and real estate companies were making a great to do about selling lots and building houses. Throughout a good portion of these tracts, little nursery trees were being set out and I remember thinking that it would be a long time before they added much to the beauty of property or the comfort of the residents. Driving through those districts on one of our recent very hot days, I suddenly realized how much these very trees meant. Yet but a scant handful of years have passed.

Varieties which grow rapidly had been selected and since there are so many different kinds to select from, there was no monotony of effect. Perhaps the most frequently used tree was the European sycamore, with its maple-like leaf and its cheerful way of doing with comparatively little water. Our native California sycamore is a handsome tree, but a good many of them are lost in the seedling period or shortly after transplanting.

On a day equally as hot, I had to drive across San Fernando Valley and in some parts I was impressed with the fact that so many of the small farms being developed there are absolutely devoid of trees of any kind, even around the house. I wonder at the courage of folks who are willing to face rural existence without trees. It seems to me that the first thing I would plant would be a tree of some kind that would give some shade before many years and which in the meantime would console me with the promise of it.

Property with trees on it always commands a higher price than that without, if the object is the building of a dwelling. How else could one more certainly increase the value of his holdings, or better insure a ready sale of a place, than by planting some trees?

In these arid or semi-arid southwest countries the familiar old cottonwood was the tree which people turned to for quick results, putting up with the nuisance of the flying cotton for the sake of the life-saving shade the tree provided. They made fence posts of cottonwood, turned irrigating water on the fields and many times found that they had set out flourishing trees instead of fence-posts. We know more about the poplar family and its adaptability to our uses than we once did and we can completely discard the cottonwood if we will and use other members of the family in its place, still getting those delightfully rapid results.

We can take a lesson from Italy in the value of trees in the summer landscape. Here is a planting of Lombardy poplars, with evergreen shrubs, such as pittosporum, massed at their base and a few Italian cypresses placed effectively before the entrance to the house. This treatment, with a minimum of grass and no flowers, is just such a planting as is found among the better type Italian villas, one that is refreshing and cool and which requires little water and care.

Here is a perfect specimen of the Sequoia gigantea, about thirty-five years of age, fully sixty feet high and four feet through at the base. It is on the property of Mrs. A. Hornby of Redlands, and refutes the general belief that this tree will not succeed in the lower interior valleys. It has, fortunately, escaped the trimming at the base which so many believe necessary.

An oddity among trees, this "Tree of the Gods," Pireunia dioca, a native of Brazil, was planted twenty-three years ago by W. C. Collett of Redlands. There are few specimens of this variety in Southern California although they thrive here. This one is on the Burrage estate at Redlands. The roots are so enormous that they have pushed over a summer house glimpsed on the opposite side of the tree.

The Lombardy poplar is tall, symmetrical, a rapid grower and very suitable for roadside planting. Even more restrained in form is what is termed the Flagpole poplar, but it is a fine tree where the planting must be confined to a very limited spread. The variety known as the Thornber cottonwood is just as generous in its growth as our old friend, but it has no cotton to detract from its charms; it grows just as well under just as difficult conditions. The Carolina poplar is quite indifferent to its location and will thrive equally as well on the desert or along the coast. Then there are the Balm of Gilead poplar and the Bolleana, the latter much like the Lombardy except that the leaves have a grey, downy underside and look like silver fluttering in every tiny breeze. It's a versatile family and a dependable one and as long as we have poplars, we can have quick shade and genuine tree beauty.

Some of our trees really crave alkaline and dry locations and these are worth considering if you have need of a tree in such a spot. For instance, the native black walnut and the Arizona ash, both in familiar use in this part of the State. The black locust, not quite so well known, is addicted to alkaline soils and can get along on a small ration of moisture, but —best recommendation of all to me—it has great racemes of deliciously fragrant blossoms during the spring.

Personally, I'm somewhat partial to trees that bloom. I know they make a litter on the lawn, if you regard the dropping flowers as litter. To me, a catalpa tree, with its great heart-shape leaves and sumptuous panicles of creamy bloom, is a thing of beauty and worth a little bother in cleaning up the lawn. Jacaranda trees, with their clusters of lovely blue blossoms, add a delicate loveliness to the summer scene. They are not so hardy and will not do well in places subject to sharp frost, but look at them in bloom and say they aren't worth the slight trouble they cause the tidy gardener—if you can. Incidentally, this tree belongs to the bignonia family, although the resemblance isn't very apparent.

Some folks greatly dislike the sturdy old Grevillea robusta, with its masses of orange colored flowers set in fern-like foliage against the blue spring skies. It really is "messier" than most flowering trees, but it can be planted in a spot surrounded by shrubs and small trees, where its untidy habits will not matter much. It gives such a fascinating note to the landscape it can ill be spared. As a street planting subject it isn't a happy choice. There is another variety of grevillea which is really classed with shrubs, but which grows in the form of a small tree and is a delightful thing. This is the Grevillea banksi, with a very different leaf form and racemes of crimson that remind me of a tangled skein of gay rope silk. The Grevillea leucopteris is another promising member of the tribe of recent introduction.

Over in Pasadena I have seen some most attractive specimens of the once popular crepe myrtle, heavy with rosy bloom during the hottest season. This well-formed tree from China (and which isn't a myrtle at all!) is of restrained habit of growth and really is highly ornamental. I often wonder just why it isn't used more these days.

We were very slow to try any extensive plantings of the marvelous sequoias, the idea being that they were extremely slow of growth and not at all likely to do well anyway. Scattered around the country are many splendid examples of the Sequoia sempervirens of considerable age and now the nurseries are growing quantities of young trees for our use. The city parks are being planted with them, too. There are very few of the Sequoia gigantea, however. They seem to require the heat of the interior valleys and, it was long thought, some elevation. There is a superb specimen in Redlands on the Hornby estate that offers substantial proof that they will "go" and grow well. Under cultivation, their growth, as is that of our native oaks, the toyon and many other such varieties, is far more rapid than under wild conditions where they have to rustle their own livelihood.

The American elm was long thought highly unsuited to this country, but we find, on thorough trial, that it does very well indeed and no one disputes its claim to beauty. The Chinese elm, far more delicate in appearance, is sturdy and responsive and wonderfully graceful. Speaking of willows, the old weeping willow is too beautiful to overlook. Think of the leafy screen it provides—a perfect place to loaf on hot days—especially when you tuck a tiny pool at its base. And, while we are mentioning "weepers," consider Tea's weeping mulberry, which can be trained over a frame to form a cool arbor and will not give you the worry of guarding against fruit stains. For that matter neither will the Kingan mulberry, a variety which grows rapidly under arid conditions.

Prime favorite among shade trees for street plantings these days is the Carob. It is evergreen, has rather small dark green leaves and maintains a fine symmetry in its growth. It really doesn't seem to have any objectionable traits, where a tree of moderate size is wanted.

Naturally, we can't pass up the acacias.

TOMATOES
without RISKING your CROP
Our Mr. Elmer J. Davis, advisor and vice president, has successfully shown growers how to raise tomatoes for the past five years without a failure. Give us a trial. Our SERVICE IS FREE. If you will follow our instructions we will prove our ability and show you how to get better fruit than you ever had.
Experience has proven that Calispray will control worms, blight and other insects and diseases, thereby invigorating plant growth. Practical experience is worth many times theoretical illusions. Give us a trial and be convinced.

Ball of Sawdust in Crotch Keep Plum Branches Spread

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—What is believed to be a genuinely new idea in orchard practice has been adopted at Col. Dale Bunstead's Tal-wi-wi Ranch, twenty miles northwest of Phoenix, where 3300 young plum trees have had balls of sawdust, wrapped in muslin, thrust into their crotches to spread the limbs apart and start them in the way they should go.

Citrus Oddity

Twenty-One Varieties of Fruit on One Redlands Tree

REDLANDS.—Twenty-one varieties of citrus fruit may be seen growing on one tree on the estate of Blair M. Boyd, Redlands. From the grapefruit varieties to the tiny kumquats the gaze will wander with interest, but one wonders even more at the several varieties of leaves to be found on the tree. Citrus leaves of different fruits are often indistinguishable, but on this tree may be found the wide leaves and narrow.

JAPANESE MADE MONEY ON TOMATOES

By Iva M. McFadden

TODAY when vitamines are the mode, and vegetables have really entered society, it is hard to reconstruct in our imagination that time of our grandmothers or great grandmothers when there were many prejudices against some of them. Picture if you can, the odd decoration of bright red tomatoes dotting the old-fashioned mantel, but never to be eaten, child, because they were "poison." And all the time, in that pork-eating age, those vitamines were ready to be used, just waiting for a chance to round out diets too excessively meaty. We have often wondered just who did have the temerity to experiment, to lay low that old prejudice, and give us the tomato we enjoy today.

Indeed, so popular is the tomato nowadays, that every effort is being made to provide it the year 'round. In the Who's Who of the vegetable world we doubt if any other outclasses it. When our own producing centers are idle the west coast of Mexico takes up production, keeping the product faithfully on the market. Yet the locally grown stuff is always the more delicious and when it comes forward the Mexican pretty well has to take a back seat.

The 1930 season in Imperial Valley, source of our early home-grown tomato, was one of surprises and inconsistencies, of good breaks and of bad. Its highlights were the tales of "big money" that came from the earliest patches. Suddenly, when only a few growers had supplies, the market went to $4.25 a crate (consisting of four baskets.) That meant a worth-while increase in accounts for some folks.

The biggest returns were those from a 15-acre patch managed by a Japanese vegetable wizard, U. C. Kojima, on a ranch belonging to Edward Bolger west of Westmoreland. The land, just within the boundaries of the irrigated territory, had made records before, for it lies close to the desert, a situation that seems somehow to encourage early production. The sales from this one tomato patch are reported to have amounted to $20,000, and though there was certainly a lot of luck in hitting the market at its peak, intimate knowledge of the crop and hard work contributed to the "killing."

Had Own Methods

These tomatoes were planted the 20th of October and watered by the 26th. Instead of planting parallel with the ridges on which the crop is always grown, seeds were put in a little vertical row up the side of the ridge for each hill. This, according to Mr. Kojima, is sure to give some of the seeds exactly the right amount of moisture to make a healthy plant at each place. By November, when the plants were about an inch high, they were protected by the brush and paper wigwams which are so much a part of Imperial's winter vegetable industry. By December plants were thinned to four. Plenty were left in case of unseasonably cold weather that might destroy some of them. By February, the plants had been cut down to two and by March to one. On March 25, the first crate was picked.

This was not the first of the vine fruit to leave the valley. Mr. Kojima's brother-in-law, K. Kuramochi, sent the early record crate March 19. It was grown in the Westmoreland area, on the Earnest Edwards ranch, also near the desert.

Usually, the very earliest tomatoes do not bring the best price. There nearly always meet with competition from the Mexican crop and returns do not stiffen until it is out of the way. There is, however, an interval after the exit of the Mexican and before the entrance of the heavy desert crop when prices advance. It was at this time that Mr. Kojima had many tomatoes to sell. A few others, among them boys from the Westmoreland school gardens, were also fortunate. While the initial price this year was $2.25, the $4.25 top proved a "winner," and Mr. Kojima had as many as 400 crates a day going out, which was something to dream about.

Of course, the peak did not last long, only four days in fact, but it was long enough to prove a bonanza to the few. Prices after that lowered so that the late crop only little more than paid expenses. The quality throughout has been exceptionally good. While the early tomatoes are given a fancy pack in four baskets to the crate, when the low prices are in order, many growers ship in ordinary lugs. A good yield is about 600 crates to the acre.

Though a few Americans undertake to grow tomatoes, the crop is pretty much under the management of Japanese, who seem to have an especial aptitude for this work. Picking and hard manual work, however, are nearly all done by Mexicans, who, at the top of the season, camp on the ranches. It costs about 25 cents to get a packed lug picked so that when prices drop to a low point, the margin of profit is cut very close.

In the packing sheds where the patches are comparatively small, the Japanese family does much of the grading and packing. It is a very ordinary thing to find the wife grading tomatoes while the husband packs. The children in the meantime play around the brush-covered sheds getting their maximum share of fresh air.

So accustomed are we to seeing the rural Japanese in the role of growers moving from place to place that we may not realize that many of them have come from a different environment entirely. The poorly made American houses in which they live compare not at all with the really charming backgrounds that some of them have left behind. Mr. Kojima, for instance, has a delightful paternal home in Japan, which he is going to visit this summer. It is a house roofed with the ornamental tile of the Orient and set in a bower of greenery, a place far removed from the sketchy structures of the Japanese in rural California.

Many of the hard-working California Japanese farmers and farm managers, living an almost nomadic life in America, came from homes like this in Japan. U. C. Kojima, successful tomato grower of Imperial Valley, was born in this picturesque old place and before the summer is over, expects again to sleep under the paternal roof.

Hot Crop Thrives

WEEVIL CONTROL BOON TO PEPPER MEN

GARDEN GROVE.—The biggest chili pepper crop in the history of Orange county is expected this year, following early surveys of the pepper fields in the Garden Grove and Talbert districts. The plants are said to be in excellent condition, with a heavy setting of peppers at this time.

While the acreage this year will be slightly under that of last year, a record crop for the acreage is expected, according to J. A. Knapp, a leading Garden Grove chili pepper grower. Last year the pepper crop was valued at more than $1,000,000 and more than 5500 acres were planted to peppers in the county.

This year approximately 5000 acres are in peppers, but the crop is expected to run well over a million dollars.

The pepper-growing industry has revived considerably during the past few years. Several years ago huge sections were planted to the crop. Then the pepper weevil put in an appearance and several years were spent in vain attempts to curb the pest.

Now ranchers of the district believe they have effectually halted the ravages of the weevil. While the process is costly, they say, it is more than worth the cost. The method of control is simply to spray weeds in drainage ditches with a fine Diesel oil.

Specially constructed trucks carrying tanks and straying apparatus every year cover the many miles of drainage ditches in the pepper growing area. Night shade, a commonly known weed, which is the winter home of the pepper weevil, is destroyed by the oil.

The treatment of the ditches serves two other purposes in that it kills all weeds in the ditches and keeps them free and open, also spreading a scum of oil over the top of the water that effectually solves the mosquito problem.

A yearly habit of chili-pepper growers in the Garden Grove and Talbert districts of Orange county is to cover weeds in and along drainage ditches with a heavy coating of Diesel fuel oil. The work serves three purposes in that it kills pepper weevil, which breed in such places; destroys the weeds, and, by spreading a scum of oil over water, effectively abates the mosquito nuisance. Here is one of the truck spraying outfits which annually go over more than 150 miles of ditches.

Beating the Worms

SPRAY OR DUST WILL STOP TOMATO PESTS

By Roy E. Campbell
U. S. Bureau of Entomology at Alhambra

THE tomato fruit worm is a pest which causes some damage every year. It is also known as the corn ear worm and since early sweet corn has been badly infested this season it is not unreasonable to expect damage to tomatoes This damage can be prevented to a very large extent by the careful application of the proper insecticides at the right time.

The adult is a moth or miller varying in color from a light brown or olive green to pale yellow, and has a wing expanse of about 1 1-3 inches. The females are capable of laying from 300 to almost 5000 eggs, which hatch in from three to eight days when the young worms immediately begin feeding. The worm becomes full grown in from two to three weeks, and during the last few days of its life consumes large quantities of food. It is during this period that it is most destructive. When full grown it burrows into the ground and changes to the pupa and then to the moth. This requires two to almost three weeks, or longer during favorable weather. During the winter the insect may spend several months in the pupal stage, emerging as a moth in the spring and is soon ready to begin egg laying. A new brood, therefore, can be produced in from three and one-half to seven weeks during the season. As a matter of fact, in this region, although there are a number of broods produced each year, they overlap to a considerable extent, so that definite broods are not always distinguishable.

On account of the large number of eggs produced, the number of worms becomes very much greater with each succeeding generation. It is therefore important to take steps to prevent this rapid multiplication and increasing damage. This can be done by early treatments of the tomato field.

The eggs are laid on the foliage and the young worm on hatching crawls about and feeds on the leaves. If a fruit is encountered, the worm may eat into it, but it is possible for the worm to attain considerable size by feeding on foliage alone. Also, the worm may feed to a slight extent on a tomato, or bore clear into it, and then leave that fruit and wander about until another is encountered. This wandering habit results in several fruits being damaged by the same worm, but it also renders the worm more vulnerable to attack by poison.

Arsenicals Used

The tomato fruit worm can be controlled by the proper application of arsenicals. As a liquid spray, three pounds of lead arsenate to 100 gallons of water should be used. The addition of a standard spreader of the casein type is desirable.

For most control work on tomatoes, dry dusting has become the established practice. Whether done with hand dusters, traction or power dusters, it involves much less labor than liquid spraying, and if carefully done the results are as good.

Eggs of fruit worm on tomato leaf. Above, worms at work on tomatoes, showing the feeding habits of the pest.

Some carefully conducted experiments in Mississippi gave the following results: Dusted June 5, 14 and 30, 2.4 per cent infestation; sprayed June 2, 14 and 30, 1.5 per cent infestation; check, no treatment, 11.5 per cent infestation.

Several years ago a field at La Habra was dusted according to the writer's recommendations as contained herein. Very few tomatoes had to be discarded on account of worm damage, but, in a near-by field in which conditions were the same, except that no dusting had been done, picking had to be abandoned due to the large number of infested fruits.

For dry dusting, powdered calcium arsenate is the best material to use. It contains more arsenic than lead arsenate, dusts better and costs less per pound. From numerous experiments and field trials it has given no more burning that lead arsenate, and that only applied in excessive dosages.

The first application should be made when the first sign of damage is noticed, or about the time the first fruit sets. A second and third application should follow at intervals of a week to ten days.

Since the killing results from the worms eating poisoned foliage or fruit, the applications should be very thorough, covering the entire plant. Also, to avoid waste and danger of arsenical residue, they should be light. Five to eight pounds of calcium arsenate per acre is ample, and more should not be used.

Growers should also exercise care in ceasing all applications before the fruit begins to color, or there may be danger of arsenical residue. If there is any suggestion of such a residue, the fruit should be carefully wiped before packing and an examination of the field made by an inspector from the State Department of Agriculture.

Dusting tomato plants. The lower picture shows the stage of growth when the first application should be made. The upper picture shows a man at work on more mature plants, which can be successfully treated, although more time and material are required.

However, if the suggestions made above are carried out, that is, early applications made thoroughly and carefully, so that not more than five to eight pounds of calcium arsenate are used per acre, there is little danger of a poisonous residue. Although the calcium arsenate ordinarily is used pure, it may sometimes be desirable to degrade it with hydrated lime, in order to keep the application under eight pounds of calcium arsenate per acre. There are several combination dusting preparations containing arsenicals which have been used with success. The advice of a reliable manufacturer can usually be followed, or the question referred to a county farm adviser, agricultural commissioner or inspector.

It should be kept in mind that prevention of damage is the goal to strive for, which can only be attained by promptness in the first treatments, carefulness and thoroughness in applying the dust, and proper follow-up of the later applications.

The above treatment will not only control the tomato fruit worm, but also the large green horn worm, and, to some extent, cutworms.

Fight Pear Blight

Two hundred acres in Antelope Valley were treated for pear blight in April, 5000 in May, and 4000 were retreated in June, according to George Murphy, senior inspector, in charge of that district for the Los Angeles County Agricultural Commissioner's office. G. R. Gorton, deputy agricultural commissioner in charge of quarantine in Los Angeles county, says that the blight damage was restricted principally to blossoms and twigs of the trees. Very few large limbs were affected except in neglected orchards. Prompt action by the growers minimized the damage done.

The disease has been very serious in pear-growing districts over the entire State this season. While it is more serious than it has been for several years in Antelope Valley, conditions there are more conducive to simple control than many other localities, it is pointed out.

Where circumstances warranted, county crews did forced work for the protection of the growers. A county crew of ten or twelve men has been kept busy throughout the season. In addition, there have been commercial and individual crews in the field.

When the cows fall off in production rapidly it indicates lack of sufficient nutriments. Some supplement should be provided at once.

Fair Hall Complete

Finishing Touches Are Put on Unique Structure

POMONA.—Finishing touches are being put on the new main exposition building just completed at Los Angeles County Fairgrounds at a cost of $250,000. The building is 800 feet long and 135 feet wide, with a floor space of 108,000 square feet. Its construction is unique. Instead of resting on supporting columns, the great expanse of roof is upheld by great steel trusses, eighty-five in number, which are bound together by hinged joints, so arranged that the weight of the roof is really sustained by great steel rods which run across the floor of the building and join each end of the truss.

The entire building will be gorgeously decorated in Venetian theme, the work being under the direction of Secretary-Manager C. B. Affierbaugh. Several hundred men are regularly employed at the fairgrounds getting everything in shape for the dedication of the new building and the opening of the ninth annual fair September 13 to 21, inclusive.

In anticipation of the greatest entry list in the history of Los Angeles County Fair, a corps of workers recently mailed approximately 30,000 premium books to prospective exhibitors. The lists are published in five separate books describing live stock, agriculture, poultry and pet stock, women's department, household arts and junior fair. The household arts section also contains the fine arts.

Each of the fifteen or twenty departments into which the fair is divided has developed its own mailing list over eight past seasons, and, adding new names each season, the lists have now grown to include every State west of the Mississippi, occasional points on the east coast and in Canada, and many foreign countries.

pound; olive oil in containers of 40 pounds or less, from 7½ to 9¼ cents per pound, 26.7 per cent increase.

Garlic and cut flowers were the only producer items which suffered a reduction.

Compared With Industry

Considerable interest has arisen as to the average increases that "the industrialists" received compared with the average increases received by agriculture. Such comparisons are of limited application, but are informative. The Tariff Commission has made the necessary calculations, from which we select the following, the first column showing the schedule, the second the rate of increase over those carried in the Fordney-McCumber Act of 1922. The increases are:

| | per cent |
|---|---|
| Chemicals | 2.40 |
| Earthenware | 6.02 |
| Metals and manufactures | 1.30 |
| Wood and manufactures | 2.92 |
| Sugar | 9.30 |
| Tobacco | 1.68 |
| Agricultural items | 14.14 |
| Cotton manufactures | 6.15 |
| Flax, hemp, jute and manufactures of | .98 |
| Wool and wool manufactures | 16.79 |
| Silk manufactures | 2.57 |
| Rayon manufactures | .24 |
| Papers and books | 1.32 |
| Sundries | 6.42 |
| Average of all | 6.86 |

Average protection granted under the provisions of the new act when reduced to an ad valorem basis, indicates the following for each of the various rate schedules: (It does not necessarily follow that, to be a parity with industry generally, agriculture must have the same rates. The table does show, however, that agriculture stands tenth in the list, higher rates applying generally to chemicals, earthenware, metals, sugar, cotton, wool and silk., all including many manufactured items.)

The advalorem rates in the present act are as follows:

| | Actual or computed per cent |
|---|---|
| Chemicals | 31.40 |
| Earthenware | 53.64 |
| Metals | 35.01 |
| Wood | 19.49 |
| Sugar | 47.21 |
| Tobacco | 64.78 |
| Agriculture | 34.00 |
| Beverages | 47.44 |
| Cotton manufactures | 46.42 |
| Flax, hemp, jute and manufactures | 19.14 |
| Wool and manufactures | 59.82 |
| Silk manufactures | 59.13 |
| Rayon manufactures | 53.62 |
| Books and papers | 26.66 |
| Sundries | 27.39 |
| Average of all | 40.08 |

No Debenture

The House, following a recommendation of its conferees, voted 231 to 161 on May 3, 1930, to eliminate the export debenture provision which was written in by the Senate.

On May 19 the Senate voted (43 to 41) to release the Senate conferees from their pledge to hold out for the debenture plan.

Thus in the new tariff bill as finally accepted, the debenture provision is eliminated, following an agreement by the conferees effected May 21, 1930.

The authority granted to the President by the 1922 law whereby rates may be raised or lowered up to 50 per cent by Presidential proclamation on recommendation of the Tariff Commission, a provision retained in the House bill but eliminated from the Senate version, resulted in a disagreement among the conferees. The House voted 236 to 154 on May 3, 1930, to refuse acceptance of the Senate modified flexible clause withdrawing executive authority to make emergency changes in the rate-structure. On May 19, the Senate by a close vote—43 to 42—the deciding vote being cast by Vice-President Curtis, agreed to release the conferees from their pledge to insist upon this Senate provision.

Release of the Senate conferees paved the way for further negotiations with the managers for the House and resulted in retaining in somewhat modified form the flexible provision as it was written into the Fordney-McCumber bill.

The new act retains the provision requiring the marking of every imported article, its immediate container, and the package in which imported is retained, with some changes in the authority vested in the Secretary of the Treasury as affecting articles incapable of being marked, which cannot be marked without injury, or the expense of which would be prohibitive.

More Work Ahead

The Growers' Tariff League may now write "finis" to its activities in connection with the tariff legislation that now becomes the law of the land. Members may feel that they have played a part in bringing about the new tariff act. Agriculture certainly gains under the provisions of the new act.

But, since tariff revisions crop up on an average of once in seven years, while we may rest on our laurels for the time being, new revisions in whole or in part are bound to justify the continued existence and steadfast support of the league. There is work still to do and the league, interested and experienced, can well continue to function in order to be prepared when the time again comes for agriculture to speak up on its own behalf.

In the meantime members may well study the provisions of the new act, as briefly set forth above, and prepare to gather to themselves all possible benefits from the provisions of the new Hawley-Smoot tariff bill.

Some California farm products favorably affected by the recently enacted tariff law. Avocados are protected for the first time, with a tariff duty of 15 cents per pound. The lemon, a chief sufferer from the importation menace, benefited by an increase of duty from 2 to 2½cents per pound. California "hen fruit," which has long borne the brunt of the handicap brought about by importation of the noisome Chinese product, gets a little "break" in the schedule. Foreign olives pickled in brine will now pay 30 cents per gallon instead of 20 cents. The duty on almonds, unshelled, was raised from 4¾ to 5½ cents per pound; on shelled, from 14 to 16½ cents; on blanched or roasted, heretofore not provided for in the tarif, it was placed at 18½ cents per pound. Tomatoes coming in from the outside will have to jump a 3-cents-per-pound hurdle instead of a half-cent barrier.

The Crop Situation

of the industry materially and in the right direction.

The grape crop is uniformly good throughout nearly every producing section of California, with the State average per cent of the full crop placed at 88 for all three classes—wine, table and raisin. However, this percentage must be predicted on the present total of 527,000 acres, which is the estimate of a recent check by the California co-operative crop reporting service and which represents a material decrease in acreage abandoned or taken out during the past two or three years.

Peach Men Unite

Another important influence which should work toward agricultural stability in California this year, particularly in the northern section, is the development of a plan to control the canned peach output, at the same time giving growers a fair return for their product, considering the size of the crop.

Canners and growers representing practically 100 per cent of the northern peach industry formed an organization designed to eliminate 30 per cent of the first-grade northern peaches. According to Charles Winkler, secretary of the Southern California Canners Association, canners will endeavor to pack no more than 13,000,000 cases for 1930. This amount, based upon statistics for past years, is believed to be what the market can satisfactorily absorb. In fact, it represents the maximum pack which has been successfully merchandised. The crop of peaches this year is estimated at 480,000 tons, which, according to canners, would be sufficient to pack between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000 cases.

The plan, as briefed by Mr. Winkler, provides that all No. 1 cling peaches in the State not under contract will be purchased on the basis of $20 a ton at the receiving points, with a deduction of $7 for the cost of picking and handling in those instances where the fruit is not picked. The price was determined upon after a thorough analysis of present business conditions, together with the volume of business and sales price for the finished product in the past. Much of the data on which the final determination of price was based was prepared by the Gianinni Foundation of the University of California from records of canners' volume of business, sales prices, etc.

Although the price of $20 a ton is low, it is generally accepted by growers as being the best that can be obtained considering the size of the crop and the economic conditions of the country today.

A committee of growers, together with representatives of banks, has been formed to administer the plan. Under the arrangements, the canners will pay $26.50 a ton to the committee on every ton they actually pack. Of this, $6.50 will be used to build up a fund of $1,750,000 to purchase the surplus, or the difference between 13,000,000 cases to be packed and the potential crop of 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 cases which is now on the trees. Thus 30 per cent of the crop will be left on the trees, but paid for at the same price as that which is packed.

This plan is operative only in the north, as Southern California does not have enough peaches this year to figure. It is estimated that the crop will run between 8000 and 10,000 tons in Southern California districts this year and few northern peaches will be packed by southern canners. These will be purchased through the committee. Southern California canners have made no offers to local peach growers at this writing, although the Chino peach pool has requested bids.

'Cot Pack Smaller

The apricot canning season closed the last week of July in Southern California. The crop was about normal or a little above. The canned pack is estimated to be around 50 per cent of the 600,000-case pack of 1929. A much larger volume of fruit went into fresh fruit markets this year and although prices for dried apricots were very unsatisfactory to growers, a considerable percentage of the crop went through the dry yard. The State-wide production of apricots this year is forecast at 209,000 tons, which may be compared with 215,000 in 1929 and 175,000 tons in 1928.

Although pear blight was very active early in the season, climatic conditions have been more satisfactory during the past few weeks and it is now estimated that the crop will be around 227,000 tons, as compared with 190,000 tons in 1929. Early pears are now moving into markets. The California Pear Growers' Association set a price for No. 1s from $40 a ton down to $38, according to district.

The citrus market is in good shape on the whole and promises to continue on a satisfactory basis throughout the remainder of the marketing season. Competition from summer fruits is reported to have had but little effect on the situation so far and the consumer demand for orange juice, which is the big factor in the marketing of the Valencia crop, is expected to continue active for at least another month or six weeks, which will see the bulk of the Valencia crop moved.

Estimates for production of California field crops are generally higher this year, with the exception of grain hay and possibly cotton. The cereal crops do not show an appreciable increase in production, however, according to forecasts, with the wheat crop now placed at 13,566,000 bushels; oats, 4,928,000 bushels; barley, 29,854,000 bushels, and rice, 5,940,000 bushels.

Estimates for the California cotton crop acreage under cultivation on July 1 have been released by the State Department of Agriculture. These show a planting of 273,000 acres, which is approximately 86 per cent of the revised acreage standing on this date a year ago.

Although there have been no estimates as to production for cotton for this year, it is generally conceded that because of elimination of marginal lands, acre yields will average higher and the total out-turn will approximate that of the 1929 season when 257,423 bales were ginned.

The price outlook for cotton is still far from favorable as compared with the past few years. The total cotton acreage of the United States this season is estimated at 45,815,000 acres, as compared with 47,067,000 acres in cultivation a year ago, or a reduction of 7 per cent.

Lima Crop Late

Lima bean plantings in Southern California are approximately the same as those of last year. Due to rains during the planting season, considerable replanting was done and it is expected that the crop will be practically two weeks late. Acreage of all beans in the State is placed at 364,000, which may be compared with 334,000 estimated at this time last season.

Sugar beet plantings are well above those of 1929, with an estimate of 69,000 acres under cultivation as against 46,000 last season.

While grain hay acreage is below that of last year, alfalfa acreage is now estimated at 1,010,000, an increase of 49,000 acres over 1929. However, the total production will possibly be under that of the previous season, with the State Department of Agriculture forecast at 4,040,000 tons, as compared with 4,175,000 tons in 1929.

Alfalfa prices in Southern California are still quite low. In fact, the price to growers is generally $6.00 to $8.00 a ton below that of a year ago in near-by producing areas.

This condition is brought about largely by the restrictive demand from dairymen coming as a result of poor credit conditions and lower prices for dairy products. Today, the buying power on the part of the dairymen, from all indications, is the lowest at any time during the past twelve months. Except in a few instances, it is declared that supplies on hand are ample to last until new hay next spring.

Truck-crop movement is light at the present time, with the principal activity being in late melons. The Imperial cantaloupe deal did not turn out satisfactorily due to severe losses of crop from disease and low prices due to the inferior quality from weakened vines. However, this condition did not pertain to later plantings and an extremely fine quality of miscellaneous melons is now moving at satisfactory prices.

CONTROL OF DISEASE VITAL TO INDUSTRY

By Dr. J. P. Iverson
State Department of Agriculture

AT THE present time the domestic animal "population" in California is placed at 7,430,000. Its value is $241,093,000. These figures show that the livestock industry constitutes an important factor in the wealth of the State.

To maintain and develop this great industry it is essential that constant attention be directed toward the prevention, control and eradication of disease, the greatest obstacle to progress in every branch of animal husbandry. It is obvious that success depends upon the prevention or removal of any preventable cause of loss.

While it is true that efforts to prevent disease are as old as the human race, it was not until the present era that the value of newly acquired principles of disease prevention was demonsfrated. Now, many of the serious plagues of man and animals have been subdued and the outlook appears most promising for even greater achievements in the field of preventive medicine, the only means of defense against certain types of diseases, particularly in the communicable diseases in domestic animals.

This fact was clearly demonstrated to live stock owners during the prevalence of blackleg, anthrax and hog cholera. Fortunately, through various avenues of research, biological products were discovered which produce immunity against these diseases, thereby preventing enormous annual losses which threatened the destruction of these important branches of the industry.

Great Progress

This means of protecting the health of animals illustrates the astonishing progress made in medical science during recent years. Despite these splendid achievements, there still exist other serious incurable maladies which have made heavy inroads into our animal population. Happily, however, their modes of transmission have been discovered, thus making it possible to establish barriers that will prevent their spread.

The procedure in combatting these maladies is sometimes drastic, as, for example, in dealing with such diseases as foot-and-mouth disease and tuberculosis. Slaughter of the affected animals is still the most logical method of exterminating these infections. Foot-and-mouth disease appeared in this State twice during the present decade, but each outbreak was eradicated by the establishment of an effective quarantine and the slaughter and burial of diseased and exposed animals, followed by proper disinfection. If this serious plague had not been promptly and vigorously exterminated, there would have been grave danger of its spreading to such an extent that the consequences might become a catastrophe.

A course somewhat similar to that employed in the extermination of foot-and-mouth disease is employed in combatting tuberculosis. However, the procedure is rendered more difficult because of the frequently slow and insidious nature of the disease, which, in various stages of development, can be diagnosed in animals only by means of a most searching test with the product known as tuberculin.

It can be reported that this great menace to California live stock has been practically eradicated under the area plan of tuberculosis eradication in the following six counties: Modoc, Lassen, Tehama, Plumas, Shasta and Siskiyou. Many pure-bred and high-class herds also have been made free of the disease by the slaughter of reactors under the "accredited herd plan," which also provides for adequate sanitation. Many dairymen who have had their herds tuberculin-tested under the provisions of the pure milk law have been successful also in eradicating the disease, thus presenting further assurance that live stock owners realize that a full measure of success in this enterprise cannot be achieved while a perceptible toll is being exacted by the presence of a preventable disease.

Live stock sanitation is no longer to be regarded as a mere detail of animal husbandry. It comprises principles which are fundamental in the rearing of healthy animals. A lack of knowledge concerning these essentials, in many instances, has been found to be the reason for ailments in live stock which could have been avoided by judiciously applying the simple, homely rules of care and management so familiar to our present-day progressive owners of live stock.

It should be borne in mind that all diseases are not caused by germs. An animal may become sick when overfed or when not provided with a ration containing sufficient body-building ingredients. Improper housing, exposure to inclement weather, contaminated feed and water, or a poor grade of feed and many other deleterious factors must necessarily be considered in efforts to ward off disease.

With the large amount of literature available in bulletins and other free publications on all phases of animal husbandry, animal husbandmen should endeavor to inform themselves on the methods of dealing with preventable diseases. If this important problem is accorded a reasonable amount of serious attention, the results will more than justify the time, cost and energy expended.

Bulbs to Rescue

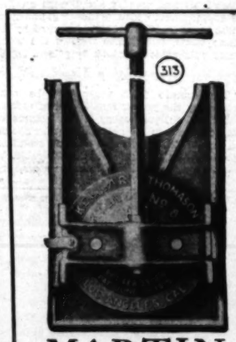
CHULA VISTA.—When the chicken and egg market grew dull three years ago, many persons went out of the business. A good many others held on and waited until better times came. Others devised some different means by which they could make a living while waiting for the market to improve. Among these latter were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hicks of Chula Vista. Mr. Hicks was connected with the University of Wisconsin agricultural department before coming west. He had more land in his National avenue ranch than he was utilizing for poultry. Now he looked to that surplus acreage to provide funds. Bulbs seemed the "best bet."

So we find Mr. and Mrs. Hicks growing gladioli on their extra land, and renting additional land near their ranch. The fertilizer from the chicken houses enriched the soil; the men who were hired to help with the bulbs were at hand to help with any extra work to be done for the chickens. The little sign on the Tia Juana highway before the house, "Eggs and Cut Flowers for Sale," helped to sell the produce from the ranch.



MARTIN
Cam Pressure Gate

This Gate is in almost universal use throughout the Southwest for controlling irrigation water. It has a machined seat on the frame, while the slide is fitted with a hydraulic packing gasket. All moving parts are made of solid bronze, accurately machined. Its operation is simple—a short turn of the handle releases the gate slide. The slide is then raised or lowered by hand, and can be locked in any position.

MARTIN VALVES AND GATES

The original line of irrigation appliances. Martin Outlet Valves and Cut-Off Gates are the most efficient and economical devices for controlling irrigation water that has ever been devised. The advice of our experts is available without obligation in laying out new irrigation systems or checking upon the old ones.

LONG TARIFF BATTLE BRINGS REWARD

On May 19 the Senate voted (43 to 41) to release the Senate conferees from their pledge to hold out for the debenture plan.

Thus in the new tariff bill as finally accepted, the debenture provision is eliminated, the debenture being a method of paying farmers a bounty on exported products. Instead, the bill provides for an "equalization fee" to be collected on imported products, which will be used to help the farmer.

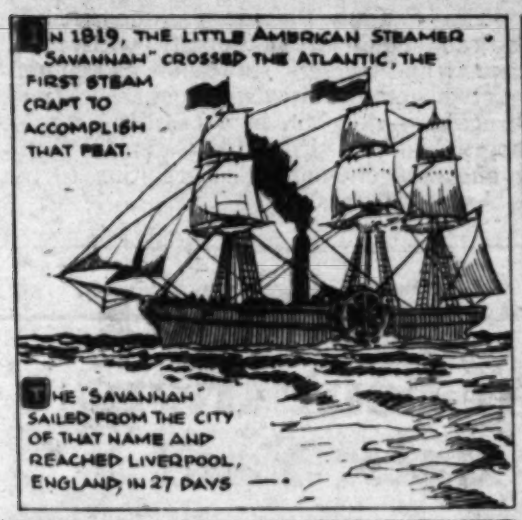
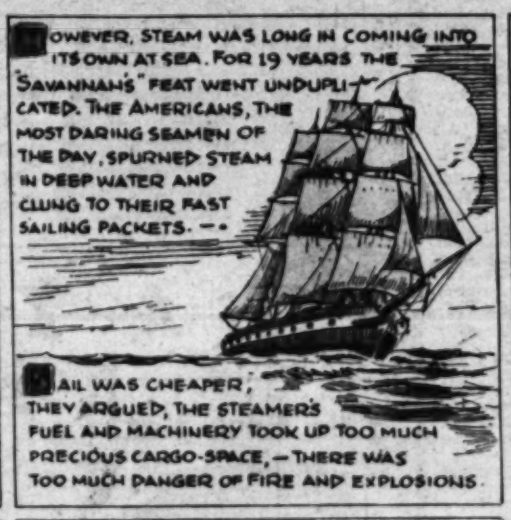
HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY — Early Transatlantic Steamships — By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD



IN 1819, THE LITTLE AMERICAN STEAMER "SAVANNAH" CROSSED THE ATLANTIC, THE FIRST STEAM CRAFT TO ACCOMPLISH THAT FEAT.

THE "SAVANNAH" SAILED FROM THE CITY OF THAT NAME AND REACHED LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND, IN 27 DAYS —•



HOWEVER, STEAM WAS LONG IN COMING INTO ITS OWN AT SEA. FOR 19 YEARS THE "SAVANNAH'S" FEAT WENT UNDUPLICATED. THE AMERICANS, THE MOST DARING SEAMEN OF THE DAY, SPURNED STEAM IN DEEP WATER AND CLUNG TO THEIR FAST SAILING PACKETS. —•

SAIL WAS CHEAPER, THEY ARGUED, THE STEAMER'S FUEL AND MACHINERY TOOK UP TOO MUCH PRECIOUS CARGO-SPACE, — THERE WAS TOO MUCH DANGER OF FIRE AND EXPLOSIONS.

THE "GREAT WESTERN"

THE ENGLISH SAW GREAT POSSIBILITIES IN TRANS ATLANTIC STEAM NAVIGATION AND, AFTER IMPROVING THEIR STEAMBOATS IN HOME WATERS, IN 1838 SENT THE "GREAT WESTERN" AND "SIRIUS" ACROSS THE OCEAN TO AMERICA. —•

TWO YEARS LATER, THE "GREAT BRITAIN," THE FIRST IRON OCEAN LINER, WAS LAUNCHED IN ENGLAND

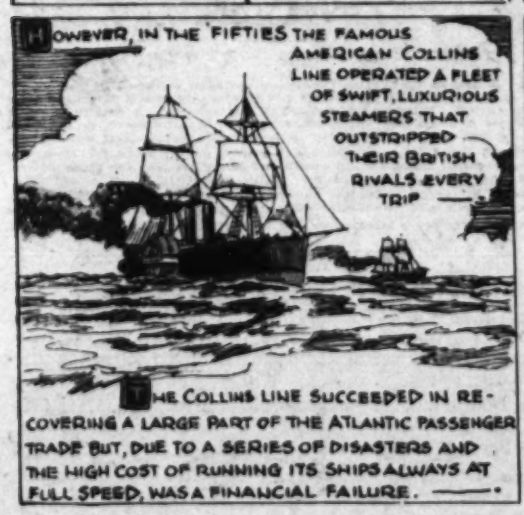
THE "GREAT BRITAIN" ALSO HAD THE DISTINCTION OF BEING THE FIRST STEAMER DRIVEN BY A SCREW PROPELLER TO CROSS THE ATLANTIC

IN 1840 THE CUNARD LINE OBTAINED THE BACKING OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT IN THE FORM OF A MAIL CONTRACT. —•

IN THAT YEAR THE CUNARDER "BRITANNIA" ARRIVED IN BOSTON, THE FIRST OF A LINE OF FINE SHIPS THAT HAS PLIED THE ATLANTIC FOR NINETY YEARS.

IN THE LATE "FORTIES, AFTER THE CUNARDERS HAD TAKEN THE BEST PASSENGER TRADE AWAY FROM THE SAILING PACKETS, THE AMERICANS WERE CONVERTED TO STEAM POWER. —•

AMERICAN STEAMERS WERE BUILT FOR TRANS ATLANTIC SERVICE, BUT PROVED TOO SLOW TO SERIOUSLY COMPETE WITH THE ENGLISH LINERS. —•



HOWEVER, IN THE FIFTIES THE FAMOUS AMERICAN COLLINS LINE OPERATED A FLEET OF SWIFT, LUXURIOUS STEAMERS THAT OUTSTRIPPED THEIR BRITISH RIVALS EVERY TRIP —•

THE COLLINS LINE SUCCEEDED IN RECOVERING A LARGE PART OF THE ATLANTIC PASSENGER TRADE BUT, DUE TO A SERIES OF DISASTERS AND THE HIGH COST OF RUNNING ITS SHIPS ALWAYS AT FULL SPEED, WAS A FINANCIAL FAILURE. —•

STEEL SHIPS DATE FROM 1875. EXPERIMENTS PROVED THAT STEEL HULLS WERE STRONGER, LIGHTER AND MORE BUOYANT THAN THOSE OF IRON.

THE FIRST STEEL-HULLED TRANS ATLANTIC LINER WAS THE CUNARDER "SERVIA" (ABOVE), BUILT IN 1880.

THE NEXT INNOVATION WAS THE TWIN-SCREW VESSEL, HAVING TWO PROPELLERS AND TWO SETS OF MACHINERY, - EACH CAPABLE OF DRIVING THE SHIP BY ITSELF IN AN EMERGENCY ASSURING GREATER SAFETY.

"AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS"

By Jules Verne

(Reviewed by Richard Slade, Los Angeles)

How many of you crave excitement, thrills and adventure? It is not necessary to peek into a haunted house or to climb a dangerous glacier to find them. Just read a copy of Jules Verne's astounding masterpiece, "Around the World in Eighty Days."

Jules Verne was one of France's greatest contributions to the literary world and due to his marvelous imagination he has developed stories unparalleled by any other human being. His book is one of a series of astounding revelations. In Verne's time, the airplane, the balloon, steam engines and steel formed boats were unheard of, although in his stories he wrote on all of these subjects like they were common as a mode of transportation and all of his thoughts have materialized. But to our story.

Fogg, a rich London philanthropist, who lives in a mysterious house in a dark corner of London, is very adventurous and he makes a bet with several of his colleagues that he can traverse the world in eighty days. The bet is on and Fogg leaves abruptly. Three days out of London, Fogg is accused of having robbed the Bank of London of a great sum of money. A detective is sent to trail him. Does the detective succeed on his mission? Is Fogg really a criminal in disguise? Does Fogg win the bet he had made?

The answers are all unfolded to you in this fascinating book by Jules Verne.

THINGS TO KNOW

By Eugene Gross, Long Beach

In making plate glass, the molten glass is dipped up from the tanks in big pots attached to cranes, and poured out upon iron tables, which have adjusting rims as high as the desired thickness of the glass. There it is rolled out smooth like dough under a rolling pin. The coarser grades used in skylights and the like is then ready for cooling. The finer grades for shops, windows, mirrors, etc., are carefully ground under iron blocks, then polished with felt and a powdered oxide of iron called "rouge." Thus glass is obtained which is uniform in thickness and does not distort the view such as does ordinary glass.

Paints are a mixture which contain a coloring matter called "pigment." There are two kinds of paints, Water colors and oil paints. White lead, the most important of paint bases or body pigment, is prepared by several different processes, but the most and best quality is produced by the "Old Dutch method." Lead in thin sheets are rolled up and put into earthen vessels with weak vinegar. Around these jars is wrapped some such material as tan bark which ferments easily, producing heat and carbon dioxide. After about six weeks the lead is either thickly coated with or entirely changed to white carbonate of lead. There are about forty white lead factories in the United States. For coloring pigments, metals, various kinds of earth, coal tar and prepared bones are used.

STICKTOITIVENESS

By Ed Buttler, Jr.

It may seem absurd to liken a postage stamp to a man or woman, yet the postage stamp has one of the traits that go far in making fame and fortune for everyone. When you stick a stamp to a letter, you expect it to stay there. You want it to stick to the letter until it has reached its destination, for without the stamp the letter will go to the dead-letter office, and probably end its life in a waste basket. In other words, you want the stamp to stick to its job until it's finished.

The same applies to a man or woman. When your boss assigns you to a job, he expects you to stick to that job until it's done. If you start some place with an idea, and then suddenly jump to something else; if you start a job and do not finish it, you, too, will probably end your days in the waste basket of life.

An old proverb says, "a rolling stone gathers no moss," so you, like the tiny postage stamp, must have that trait of "stick-to-it-iveness," to get to your goal.

Aunt Dolly's Letter Box

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I am sending in Laura Brock's Arabian doll that I colored. I surely am glad when I see your blue envelope in the mail. I love Squirmy, he is so cute, and Snoop's Adventures in Do-Do-Land. I wish that you would have a paper doll of Spain next.

Your loving niece,

Our little pal, Helen Squires of Riverside, writes: "Snoopy in Do-Do-Land is marvelous. I'm just waiting impatiently for the story of 'The Black Ace,' with the mask and the black ace over his heart. It surely sounds thrilling."

Mary Yardley of Corona has this to say: "I like all the stories, editorials, and every word that is printed in The Junior Times. It is all so helpful. I'll tell you I about busted when I saw my name third on the honor roll. A thrill went up and down my spinal column. Snoopy is my favorite character; only wish we would hear soon from Twink."

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I am sending the paper doll, all colored with the brightest of colors, and I'm hoping for points. You write the most interesting stories, Aunt Dolly, and I don't see how you do it. Snoopy is so exciting I can hardly wait until next Sunday.

Your loving members,
[Signed]
JACQUINE FRIEDRICH,

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I am sending you my color chart, and I hope you like it. I am also sending in my coupon, which shows what things in The Junior Times I liked best. Snoopy is so darling. Goodness, you know how to write good stories. Congratulations for your Snoopy; wish he was mine!

Your niece,
[Signed]
STELLA SARFATTY,
Los Angeles.

---

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

Until today I've been awfully ashamed to write, I haven't been a very enthusiastic member, but after reading Snoopy as usual today, I got an inspiration or something, I don't know what to call it, and now all I want to do is write poems and stories for you, as well as letters to you, Aunt Dolly. I am sending you some of the results of my efforts in the past few weeks. Hope you can use some of them, as I want to help you all I can. I think the criticism in the honor roll column one of the most wonderful things in your paper.

Lovingly,
[Signed]
MARYALIS HADLEY.

Eleanor Harlow writes: "I am following Snoopy's adventures in Do-Do-Land, and I think it's too cunning for words. I like it even better than Snoopy Long Ears."

"DIZZY" AND HIS LONDON

All lovers of the primrose will want to see something of Lord Beaconsfield when they are in London. Disraeli's statue is in Parliament Square and like other famous men he has many birthplaces. No. 22 Theobald's Road, Bloomsbury, seems to have the best tradition. He worked at 6 Fredericks Place, Old Jewry, four years before he startled the world with his "Vivian Grey." Then he lived at 29 Park Lane, opposite Grosvenor Gate, until 1872 where he wrote "Coningsby" and made his climb to political power. Later he lived at 2 Whitehall Gardens. His last London home was at 19 Curzon street, where he died, and where, "'tis said, he gently declined to see Queen Victoria because 'she only wants me to give a message to the Prince Consort.'"

GETTING AHEAD OR STEPPING UP

BY JOSEPHINE SALERNO

It is the one who knows what he wants, and goes right after it, who gets it; and, furthermore, he deserves it, to be able to see more than one side of something.

To choose the course which is best, and then to go ahead, and travel that course, that's the thing to do. Each time one makes up his mind to do something, and does it, he is that much stronger, provided, of course, that he does what he honestly thinks is right.

Each time one makes up his mind, and backs out, he is that much weaker; it is will power that has brought many a man across rivers of difficulties, fighting mad, hurling currents, every inch of the way. Every step toward his accomplishment helped him afterward in meeting other problems; for remember, it is the hard jobs that make us. You can be only what you make yourself to be, no matter what you are.

Keep in mind that success means downright hard work. What do you say? Have you the courage and moral strength to meet it?

A KING PRAYS

By Eloysa Eisenhauer

Give me a bright day of breathless surprise,
Give me the gold flung about at sunrise,
But not—give me not, the dream light in your eyes,
That I may forget—may forget,

Teach me the song of the birds, winging high,
Teach me the tune the wind sings to the sky,
But, spare me your voice, with its low searching cry,
For I must forget—must forget.

Show me—ah, quickly—the crown I must own,
Show me the kingdom I must reign alone,
Would I command, if you knelt at my throne?
Oh, could I forget—just forget?

THE GOLD PIECE

By Betty Godbe, Woodrow Wilson High School, Long Beach

One nice, sunny June afternoon old Jacques decided to take a stroll and exercise his poor old limbs. He walked erect and rigid—not by choice, however, but because he had to. He had what was known as a stiff back and he had to stand straight for he could not bend over. His clothes were shabby and patched, but his old face was lighted up and his gentle gray eyes seemed to be alive with vitality. It was in this mood that old Jacques cast his eyes on the ground and beheld something bright and shiny. With his toe he turned it over and over, scarcely able to believe his good fortune. Yes, yes! It was a gold piece! A gold piece—oh, what a wonderful thing to find lying in the street. Jacques's heart beat faster and faster.

He reached out his hand to pick it up, but alas, alas! His back he could not bend, and the gold piece he could not get! Whatever was a poor soul to do? A nice shiny gold piece before his eyes, yet he could not get it. Oh, dear, oh dear!

But look! All was not lost, for when Jacques looked up the street he beheld a boy walking slowly and carefully toward him. Oddly enough, he had his hands before him. Jacques hailed him joyfully.

"Little boy," he called in his best French, "oh, little boy! Look—I have found a gold piece, but alas, I cannot bend over to fetch it. If you will get it for me, I will share it with you. See, here it is," and Jacques pointed eagerly.

The little boy turned a pair of big, blue eyes toward Jacques, while his face turned a crimson red and he said not a word. Jacques became impatient.

"Why do you hesitate? Will you not fetch me the gold piece?"

Still the little boy was silent.

"Speak! Are you dumb?"

The little boy's lip quivered as he answered old Jacques.

"Ah, Monsieur, I would pick up your gold piece, but I cannot," he pointed to his eyes, "for I cannot see—I am blind."

Jacques gazed at him in surprise. Could it be that those bright eyes were sightless? Yes, it was so, for they bore a far-away look. Jacques turned away in shame as he gazed sorrowfully at the gold piece. What could he do?

Then came a little girl running down the street. When she saw old Jacques and the boy she stopped and stared in curiosity. Being just a small girl, you will have to pardon her seeming lack of manners, but to Jacques she was a godsend.

"Little girl, look! I have found a gold piece! Will you pick it up for me? See, it is right over there. I will share it with you—" Jacques pointed to the gold piece.

The little girl looked at the gold piece and blinked. How funny, thought she, that the old man did not pick it up. My My! Maybe he was trying to tell her not to pick it up—perhaps it was a bad gold piece and would turn anybody into stone, like in the fairy stories. The little girl stood there, fascinated, as she thought of all the possibilities, while old Jacques was looking into her eyes.

"You aren't blind, too?" he inquired with a shaking voice.

The little girl looked at him in a puzzled way, then she laughed and cried:

"Oh, no, sir, I won't touch the gold piece. You needn't fear!" but alas for poor old Jacques, she spoke in English—a tongue that he did not understand.

"Don't you speak French? Can't you understand me?" he questioned but the little girl merely laughed. He pointed at the gold piece and made signs to tell her to give it to him. Every time the little girl only laughed and clapped her hands.

"I shan't touch it, sir," for she believed he was trying to tell her not to pick it up.

Old Jacques hardly knew what to do. There was the gold piece, right before him yet he could not get it. And how he did need a gold piece! There were so many things he could buy for little Marie and her mother—oh, he needed it so badly.

Then came a rich English lady in a big car. She stopped by Jacques and called the little girl. "Nancy, Nancy."

The little girl ran to her mother and told her about the gold piece. Her mother shook her head and got out and came to old Jacques.

Is there anything I can do for you, Monsieur?" she inquired in French.

Old Jacques's face lit up joyfully when he heard the French, and he explained his finding of the gold piece and how he could find no one who could get it for him.

"I cannot stoop over; the little

The rich lady laughed and picked up the gold piece.

"Here you are. A gold piece for you, and—" she put her hand in her handbag and drew forth another gold piece, "one for you, young man." She pressed it on the little blind boy's palm.

With a shout of joy the little boy thanked the lady, scarcely able to believe it. Old Jacques, however, turned home, and with the gold piece jingling in his pocket, wondered what the little Marie and her mother would say when he brought them home some good food and a warm coat for those cold nights. It would be just like Christmas!

A WRITER'S LAMENT

By Mary Belle Racca, Whittier

"Originality," demands Aunt Dolly.

"Originality," I repeat.

Follow nights of reflection and days of thought. Afternoons spent at my window. Evenings passed in day dreams. Absolutely blank mind.

Then I take to the outdoors. Rides. Days in the country. Solitary walks. Picnics with Paul. All of no avail.

Shopping day. Traffic. Crowds of people. Newsboys. The busy humdrum of the city. An inspiration! Hurry, hurry, hurry.

Home again. Typewriter uncovered in frantic haste. A mad search for paper. Then my work begins.

Outlines. More outlines. Corrections. The whole thing revised. Finally chucked into the waste basket.

I tear my hair.

More paper rolled into the typewriter. A whole page done. Another. A third. Too long! Boil it down. Boil it down. Good words taken out. Peachy adjectives cut out. Finished at last. It must be good now.

I read the thing over. Splendid plot, good style. But—too abrupt. Not enough good words. Scotchy, I murmur. Sounds of tearing paper.

Hours of work. Meals missed. Sleep lost. A story completed at last. Corrected and slipped into an envelope to be mailed.

Rest at the last minute. A whole holiday A show to see. A plot so like mine that I actually feel guilty. Play-day ruined.

Why didn't I stay home?

I trudge home remorsefully. Disgusted. I read the story over again. Splendid, I realize. Too good to destroy. What to do?

"Originality," demands Aunt Dolly.

"Originality," echoes the Junior.

"Originality," I mutter, and a perfect story finds its way into the fire.

A little exaggerated, I'll own, but it has happened time and again.

ILLOGICAL ENGLISH

By Richard Slade

We'll begin with box; the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes;
One fowl is a goose, but two are called geese,
Yet the plural of mouse should never be called meese.
You may find a lone mouse or a whole nest of mice,
But the plural of house is houses, not ice.
If the plural of man is always men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be called cows or kine,
But a bow, if repeated, is never called bine.
And the plural of vow is vows, not vine.
If I speak of a foot and you show me two feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is a tooth, and a whole set are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular's this, and the plural is these,
Shouldn't the plural of kiss be kees?
Then, one may be that, and two would be those,
But the plural of hat should never be hose.
The plural of cat is cats, not cose.
Then the masculine pronouns, the he, his and him,
But imagine the feminine as she, shis and shim!
So the English, I think you will all agree,
Is the funniest language you ever did see.

"THINGS EASY TO MAKE"

BY WILLIAM W. KLENKE

LAWN TEA TABLE

Boys, let's surprise mother by making her a lawn tea table, so that she will be able to entertain her friends on the lawn in some shady retreat, serving afternoon tea. This piece of furniture you will find mighty handy to have around during the vacation days, and what is more, it is easy to make.

If you follow these directions as to materials and construction, you will not have to worry about leaving the table out in the rain, as no harm will come to it. White pine, cypress, fir and chestnut are all good woods to use; they stand outdoor weather conditions well and work easily.

You will require the following pieces of wood, called stock:

Four pieces for the legs, 1 3-4 by 1 3-4 by 29 1-8 inches.

Four pieces for the rails, 1 1-8 by 4 by 20½ inches.

One piece for the center support, 1 1-8 by 4 by 21 1-4 inches.

Two pieces for the diagonal braces, 7-8 by 4 by 28 inches.

Two pieces for the top, 7-8 by 4 by 28 inches.

Eight pieces for the top, 7-8 by 5-16 seant by 28 inches.

Twenty-seven pieces for voids, 1-4 by 7-8 by 2 inches.

Step No. 1, the stock: Get out the various different pieces of stock to the sizes indicated and dressed smooth (planed) on all sides. Your lumber mill or capenter shop can easily get these pieces out for you, ready to assemble.

Step No. 2, the legs: Plane the taper on all four sides of the four legs.

Step No. 3, the joints: Lay out and bore the various holes for the dowels, using a No. 6 auger bit and bore the holes just a little deeper than the length of the dowels.

Step No. 4, assemble: The assembling must be done in two separate operations. First glue together two legs and one rail of the opposite pairs. Use casein glue, which is waterproof. Be sure to line up the legs. When the glue has set hard, assemble the entire framework of the table.

Step No. 5, diagonal braces: First cut and fit the bird's mouth joint at the ends of both pieces; then lay out the center, half or cross lap joint by putting the two braces in place, one above the other. These braces are securely screwed to the four legs with 3½ No. 14 screws. Now fit and securely fasten the corner braces in place to stiffen the top frame work.

Step No. 6, the top: You will notice that the two end pieces are wider than the others, so as to get a bearing on the rails, due to the overhang. Use narrow strips and lay them with a one-fourth-inch space between to allow the water to have a place to run through and to prevent splitting or warping. These spaces are filled in at both ends and the center with small strips, 1-4 by 7-8 by 2 inches, nailed to the other strips. Fasten the top pieces to the framework with 1¼ No. F.H.B. screws, using two screws at each bearing and the screws staggered to prevent splitting. Plane a small chamfer around the top edge as shown on the drawing.

Step No. 7, cleaning up: Remove any excess glue with a sharp chisel and sandpaper all parts thoroughly with No. 1 and No. ½ sandpaper; slightly round all sharp corners.

Step No. 8, the finish: Apply a prime coat of white lead paint or lead and zinc paint, mixed with raw linseed oil and about 1-3 turpentine and sufficient dryer; should you prefer to do so, buy a ready mixed outside paint instead. When the paint is dry, putty all nail holes and defects with white lead putty. Apply a second coat of paint, which should contain more oil and less turpentine. When dry and hard (allow about a week or ten days,) give the table the final coat, being careful to brush out the paint to prevent runners.

THE MAN WITH THE CRUTCH

By Edward Bailey

Alongside one of our theaters,
A man with a crutch may be seen.
As he sits there, he smiles at the passers-by,
On his pillow, timeworn, but clean.
In his hand are arrayed many pencils,
Of various colors and hues,
His suit is torn, frayed and dirty,
There are numerous holes in his shoes.
Many times as I pass this poor fellow,
A moment I stop there and stand
Wishing I had a few coins
To drop in his thin aged hand.
Sometimes, when my pockets aren't empty,
I spare just a little, not much,
To drop in the cap that is outstretched to me,
By the pitiful man with the crutch.
It's a lesson to see he is smiling
As if it's no problem to beg,
As if he is not the least handicapped
By a twisted and shattered leg.

HAWAII

By Kaisuichi Yamaoka

Hawaii! There is no place like it! Here, flowers are blooming every day of the year, for in Hawaii it is spring all the year round. It is beautiful everywhere.

The Hawaiian Islands, commonly called Hawaii, are composed of eight large and four small islands. The island on which I am living is third in size and is called Oahu. Honolulu, the capital of the islands, is on this island. In recent years it has progressed very much and has a population of about 150,000.

Hawaii is the Paradise of the Pacific. It is the center of commerce in the Pacific Ocean. In Hawaii, the United States has a great asset. On every island there is a beautiful spot. On Hawaii, the largest island, is Kilauea, the most active volcano in the world. On this same island stands the highest single mountain in the world. And on Maui, which is second in size, lies the world's largest crater. It is twenty miles wide. In this crater is the unique plant called silver sword. Nuuanu Pali, which is known the word over, is in Oahu. From this place one could look down and see a wide plain with many rice patches and scattered houses. There are many other scenic spots besides these.

As for education, there are both public and private schools. There are over ten high schools, five junior highs, a university, and of course many elementary schools. The University of Hawaii every fall produces a strong football team. They go to the mainland every year and play against the strong teams of the Pacific Coast. There are many kinds of sports in Hawaii. Among them are football, baseball, basketball, tennis, soccer, polo, swimming, golf and track. There are various champions for these sports. Every year many noted men of athletics come here.

Over 100,000 tourists visit here annually for pleasure.

SALMON IN NORWAY

No other country in Europe possesses anything like such natural possibilities for angling as Norway. From the Swedish frontier in the south right up to the Finnish frontier in the north, salmon go up in practically every river all along the coast. Altogether there are no less than some 200 rivers where salmon go up regularly. Some have been let on long leases to English and American sportsmen, and several hotels have fishing rights on nearby streams. If you do not stay at one of these hotels, you can find many less known rivers where excellent sports may be had, and boats are obtainable from villagers nearby.

BILL BENNETT'S JEFF

BY SAMUEL A. DERIEUX

"No, you can't beat mother's fried chicken," big brown-faced 19-year-old Bill Bennett agreed with me, but for all that he didn't touch the choice piece he had left on his plate—a tender slice of juicy breast with a bit of crisp golden-brown skin hanging from it.

I found him a few minutes later, after our noon dinner, sitting on the back step feeding that delicious slice of chicken, in carefully broken-off mouthfuls, to decrepit old Jeff, his straw-colored setter. Bill turned red under his brown when he looked up and discovered me watching him but he didn't say anything, just went on feeding the pampered old pup in a sort of defiant silence.

I grinned and walked away. I had been the Bennett's summer boarder long enough to know that Jeff was the uncrowned king of the household, but I wasn't one of his devoted subjects. The old setter had spoiled too many nights' sleep for me.

Jeff did his own sleeping in the daytime. He was stiff with age and infirmity, and his sole occupation was to shamble sideways from the shade to the sun when it was cool, and from the sun to the shade when it was hot. He slept all day; then he stayed awake all night!

And the sight of the moon rising over the fields seemed to stir him to righteous but futile indignation, which he expressed in a wailing howl. From the rear of the house he greeted the rising moon; from a position underneath my window he poured out his protest to the moon in its zenith; and from a certain spot in the front walk—he had worn a little cup-like hollow there—he celebrated the final retreat of his enemy. I think the old nuisance firmly believed he had driven it away over the dark western hills.

Somehow I couldn't bring myself to protest. I liked the Bennetts and I could see how much they thought of the old setter. If ever dog was spoiled, Jeff was spoiled. Mrs. Bennett, a quiet and otherwise sensible widow, past the prime of life, looked after him as solicitously as if he had been her grandfather. Big strapping Bill couldn't pass the dog without stopping to give him a pat—or a piece of chicken. He was really Jeff's worst spoiler.

I had come to admire Bill very much. He was a steady hard working young fellow who successfully managed his mother's farm; he was devoted to his mother, and proud of the younger brother and sister whom I hadn't seen because they were away visiting their grandmother. Bill was all right, barring his foolishness about Jeff.

Bill and I sometimes went fishing when the farm work wasn't crowding. Jeff always accompanied us to the river. If he came to a fence he waited for Bill to help him over. Sometimes at a gate we would have to wait for him to saunter leisurely up. I used to grow disgusted with the whole performance, and wish that Jeff's troubles to himself and others would cease forever.

I found myself wishing it in the afternoon of that day when Bill had saved his choicest piece of chicken for the dog. Bill and I had been for a swim late in the afternoon; I was hungry and eager to get home; and Jeff's lagging ways were delaying us. But big Bill was as patient as a mother with the old dog.

"I suppose he's been a fine bird dog," I ventured to remark.

"No, he never was much in the field," Bill replied.

"He has fine blood then," I suggested.

"No, just a plug; no pedigree about Jeff." Bill's eyes twinkled a little as he glanced at me. "You think I'm a fool about that dog, don't you?" he demanded.

As I hesitated, hunting for the right answer, he reddened again. But he laughed good-humoredly.

"Guess I can't blame you," he said. "But I owe Jeff a lot. I'll tell you about it some time when you feel like listening to a yarn."

"Tonight," I told him promptly. "After supper."

So that night on the porch Bill told me the secret of his love for Jeff. Mrs. Bennett had gone to bed early, and the young fellow and I sat out on the front porch alone. We weren't talking; I was waiting for Bill to begin his story, and perhaps he was waiting for me to ask for it. Presently we heard slow padding steps and Jeff came around the corner of the house. He came up on the porch and sniffed me and went over and thrust his nose into Bill's hand. But he wouldn't lie down until Bill got up and found a piece of old carpet and spread it out for him to lie down on.

"Now laugh," Bill said to me, half-grinning, half-shamefaced.

But I didn't feel like laughing. I had begun to realize that something which had been close to tragedy lay back of Bill's feeling for Jeff.

"I've known all along," Bill began there in the darkness, "that it must seem sort of silly to you, the way we take on about Jeff. Mother was saying only the other day that we ought to tell you, so you wouldn't think we're—queer. I've been meaning to do it, but I don't like to talk about it much. It's right to Jeff, though, and it's right to you."

Jeff stirred on his carpet, and Bill leaned over to pat him.

"I remember when dad brought him home," he went on—"a little puppy no bigger than a big rat. I can remember well when dad came in from a hunt—he was a great hunter—and said the dog was no account and he was going to get rid of him. But Sadie and Joe, my little brother and sister that you haven't seen, they begged for him, and dad gave in.

"When I was about 10 years of age dad died and was buried up at Hebron Church. That dog took on so, howling and not eating, we thought he'd die, too. It was then he took to barking at the moon. Maybe you've noticed how he always barks at the moon. He seemed to think the moon had something to

"SNOOPY" MEETS NEW ADVENTURES

MORE ABOUT DO-DO LAND AND STRANGE HAPPENINGS FOR "JUNIOR" READERS

BY AUNT DOLLY

The lizard knotted up his face in annoyance. "So you are runaways from the village of Regrets?" he asked.

Becky, sitting close to Snoop, brought gentle pressure to bear on his side, trusting that he would take the hint and refuse to admit they were fugitives. The rabbit, having passed through perilous experiences, closed his mouth, and looked the lizard squarely in his eye, and this seemed to anger him.

"It was Jeff guided me out, when I had picked 'em up together."

"No use trying to fool me," he warned, "didn't the messenger say, 'one dog and one rabbit'? And aren't you exactly that?"

"No," said Becky, "you are mistaken, "we are extraordinary creatures, and that takes us out of the usual class. These people are searching for ordinary animals, and no one could accuse us of being merely one dog and one rabbit."

The lizard's mouth fell open in astonishment, as he pressed a paw to his forehead.

"Hold on," he said, forgetting to speak in verse, "What's this you have to say? Dogs are dogs, and rabbits are rabbits, nothing can change that fact, and surely there are only two of you."

Snoop felt laughter singing within him, as he saw how confused their friend had grown. Becky was determined to humble him, so she sat on her haunches and said, in a pitying way:

"You don't understand at all. Your education has been sadly neglected. If we are extraordinary creatures, we cannot be rabbits and dogs. Being extraordinary, makes us entirely different."

"But how?" asked the lizard, creeping close to them, "you," he said, touching Snoop's soft fur, "certainly are rabbit. And you," rubbing Beck's back, "cannot be anything but dog."

"We are, and we're not," argued Becky, enjoying the lizard's puzzled expression. "I might be a Jackal, or even a hyena, for all you know. And, as my friend has such large ears, you are not at all certain as to who he is."

"But I am," stormed the lizard, "what's more, I can prove it. I have pictures of dogs and rabbits

Stories: "Water," Richard Slade; "Contact," Weymouth Harding.

Articles of Interest: "Yosemite Park," Iris Eckelberry; "Nicknames of States," Richard Slade.

Group B

With helpful criticisms by Aunt Dolly:

Mignonette Hull: "Autobiography of a Dog" lacks the selling punch we demand in Junior material. Our stories and poems are topnotchers, so study the sort of material we buy.

Aaron Klein: "Firecrackers and Bandits" has a splendid lead, and a good plot, but the bandit dialogue weakens it. Always intimate roughness, but never speak of "dese" and "dose" in a story.

Ed Buttler, Jr.: "It's Ma Who Pays" has any number of good points, but this particular story lacks the usual zip found in your work. Remember, the first three paragraphs must hold the reader spellbound, or children will seldom trouble to look further.

Maryalis Hadley: "Fireside Dreams" has a much-used theme; also meter is ragged, so try us again. You can be an "A" contributor if you are willing to put in the time.

Ann Morton: "The Green Pace", while very clever in many ways, lacks a reasonable plot. Your style could be a great deal better than it is. Make sure your descriptions are true to life, and you'll come sailing into line with "A" credits.

Betty Garvey: "Western Kidnapper" swept me off my feet, with plot, dialogue, descriptive material. For a child of 11, you have a brilliant future, but do choose a simple theme. This particular style of story is hard to handle, but stay with us, Betty, we're rooting for you!

Cecil M. Kyle: "About Fairies", although extremely clever, lacks correct meter. So watch this weak point, then try us again.

Laura McLean: "My Experience with a Rattlesnake" is hardly our type of literature, as an experience of this kind would have to be handled in a masterful way, and that is hard for youthful writers to do. Do not be discouraged, but keep trying.

Dorothy Showalter: "Behind the Wall" deserves a lot of merit. You have tried to handle a big plot, but, due to inexperience, fell down on details, which spoiled the realism of your story. No one, for instance, wishing to guard their safe, would advertise for a stranger, or would the safe be kept in the basement of a building. I have made 1000 similar mistakes in years gone by, so don't let this disturb you at all. Just watch your step, old-timer, and next time we hope to find you in the A class.

Ben Epstein: "Friends" has a lot to it, and so has "Mary," but both these poems need to have their meter improved. Keep an eye on the musical swing of poems, and you'll walk away with lots of points. Best of luck Ben!

Frances Keeley: "The Wise Old Owl" has a lot in favor of it, but the plot is almost too simple, and the reiteration too frequent, to win an A for yourself. Don't be at all discouraged. You can write, and you have talent, but all authors are learning, and this is what you must

By Betty Cooke, Woodrow Wilson High School, Long Beach

One nice, sunny June afternoon old Jacques decided to take a stroll and exercise his poor old limbs. He walked erect and rigid—not by choice, however, but because he had to. He had what was known as a stiff back and he had to stand straight for he could not bend over. His clothes were shabby and patched, but his old face was lighted up and his gentle grey eyes seemed to be alive with vitality. It was in boy is blind, and the little girl does not understand."

The rich lady laughed and picked up the gold piece.

"Here you are. A gold piece for you, and—" she put her hand in her handbag and drew forth another gold piece. "one for you, young man." She pressed it on the little blind boy's palm.

With a shout of joy the little boy thanked the lady, scarcely able to believe it. Old Jacques, however, turned home, and with the gold piece jingling in his pocket, wondered what the little Marie and her mother would say when he brought them home some good food and a warm coat for those cold nights. It would be just like Christ-

DOG WOOD

by ALEX MELANCON

Where did the dogwood tree get its name? I puzzled over this, wondering why, for example, it isn't called cat wood or even cow wood. Finally I discovered the reason.

There was a little dog, it seems, and you wouldn't believe me if I told you what a nice little dog he was. So nice was he, in fact, that a great turtle decided he was just the animal to feed upon.

I needn't tell you that this turtle was a very unpleasant creature; you'll guess that for yourself. The little dog thought him so nasty that he determined not to let him feed upon himself.

"I'll never let you eat me," he said.

Of course, it wasn't as easy as that to prevent the turtle from carrying out his purpose. Oh, no! The nasty creature just laughed, and said he'd go ahead and eat the little dog. The dog ran away from him.

"Catch me if you can!" he challenged.

The turtle did that very thing. When the puppy was sleeping, he crawled silently to where he lay, and took hold of his tail, awaking him. My, that little dog was scared!

"Don't eat me, kind turtle!" he begged.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed his captor.

"The small pieces of wood he bit off nearly choked him—"

"Why shouldn't I feed upon you?"

The little dog was a smart thing, I'll say he was. "I wouldn't taste good at all," said he. "I feed on rats, and I would taste just as they do."

"I never tasted a rat," said the turtle, hesitating.

"I'll tell you what," proposed the dog. "Let me go until you can taste a rat, then you'll decide whether you'll want to eat me."

They made it a bargain, and the turtle hunted till he caught a rat. He was crazy about the taste. He went to the dog and told him so.

"I'll eat you up," he declared. "I'm sure your taste will be grand."

"You must catch me first!" laughed the pup, running off.

And that's exactly what the turtle did. He got the little dog once more when he was sleeping. "I have you now," he said.

But the little dog was smart, as I have already informed you. "Mr. Turtle," he said, "I told you a lie. I don't eat rats. It's birds that I feed on. And I'm sure you wouldn't like the way they make me taste."

So the turtle freed him again, and caught himself a bird. Need I tell you that he liked the taste very much, and became still more determined to eat the dog, if he tasted at all like a bird. He caught the little pup again.

And not only once more, but many other times, too, the little dog put him off by telling him he wouldn't taste good, telling the turtle he fed on all sorts of animals and plants. The turtle tasted all these, and found them to his liking.

"I like everything you eat," he told the dog the last time he caught him, "so I still want to eat you up."

"Aha!" said the dog. "You don't believe I've been telling you the truth, do you? Because I haven't. I really don't eat any of those things. What I actually live upon is wood, and I'm sure you'd never like the taste of that."

"I don't believe you," said the turtle. "That's just another of your lies."

"I'll show you," said the dog. "I'll eat some before you to prove it."

And he led him to a small tree near by, and began to gnaw the bark. Of course, he wasn't really accustomed to eating that sort of tree, but he was prepared to do anything to save his life. The small pieces of wood he bit off nearly choked him, but he continued swallowing until the turtle was convinced he had told the truth.

The turtle took a little piece of the wood and tasted it to see what it was like. "Ugh! It's hard!" he exclaimed. "You mean to say you'd be as hard as this if I ate you?"

"Even harder," assured the dog.

"Then I'll not feed on you," the turtle decided.

And afterward the tree the pup pretended he fed upon was called the dogwood tree.

THE CAT FAMILY

By Jean McCart

In the cat family there are the lion, the tiger, the puma, or panther, the jaguar, the leopard and the lynx.

The lion cubs have black spots on them. When they are three months old, long, soft, tawny hair appears, and their pretty black spots disappear. The mane of a full-grown lion weighs about a pound and a half.

The tiger is about six or eight feet in length. It has no mane, but has big tufts of hair on each side of the jaw.

The leopard, at birth, is about the size of a half-grown cat. When they are full grown, they are about two feet high and four feet long. The cat family all kill and eat smaller animals.

Roars,
And springs into a
Steady hum.
The ship quivers
With life.
The motor roars out
A challenge,
And then,
Like a darting arrow,
The man-made bird
Soars into the sky
To disappear from sight
In the clouds.

THE SUNNY COUNTRY TWINS

BY MARGARET KOSTOWAL

PART TWO

As soon as Jean thought of the doughnuts, she ran upstairs, and rapped softly on Miss Pinkert's door. There was a very feeble answer.

"Miss Pinkert," Jean called, "It's Jean. May I come in?"

"Yes, Jean," came permission after a moment's hesitation.

Jean slipped inside the door. "I just wondered if you would please make us some doughnuts. I want mother to taste them."

Miss Pinkert merely nodded, but Jean felt quite sure that she was pleased and perhaps a little flattered.

So at dinner, when the doughnuts were placed on the table, and mother had tasted them, Jean said excitedly, "See, mother! That's my idea. Why couldn't Miss Pinkert have a little doughnut shop. Just think, the people of Sunny Country have never tasted doughnuts. Miss Pinkert learned how to make them before she came here. They ought to be a big success."

Father, who was wonderful at that sort of thing, busied himself at once with plans and it wasn't long before Miss Pinkert was established in a tiny white shop that bore the sign, "Doughnuts" in lights that flashed on and off at night. But strangely enough, the customers were few and far between. Sunny Country people are slow to try anything new. Jean and Joe were almost broken-hearted over the failure of their plan, and one day Miss Pinkert came home with her eyes all red from crying and said that she had decided to give it up.

It was mother who finally thought of a way out. She carefully dressed herself in her very best, and had father drive her to the City by the Place. She stopped first at the palace itself and then at the newspaper office. When she returned she said to Miss Pinkert, "You must go to the shop in the morning, I think the tide will turn."

So, listlessly, Miss Pinkert went once more to the doughnut shop. And Mother, happy and excited, watched for the evening paper. It had worked! There on the front page, was a picture of the King of Sunny Country, standing at the door of the doughnut shop, with one of the delicacies in his hand, and beside him stood Miss Pinkert, looking fresh and prim in a white apron and cap. Below the picture was a little story of the fire on the knoll, and of the new doughnut store.

After that day, the success of the doughnut shop was assured, and so heartily did the people of Sunny Country take to the doughnuts, that Miss Pinkert was hard put to it to supply the demand.

Buried City and State

In each of the twelve circles is a picture which illustrates a word of four letters. Guess the words illustrated and then arrange them one above the other in such an order that the first letters, reading downward, will spell the name of a certain American city, and the third letters, reading downward, will spell the name of the state in which it is situated. (Answer on Page 8.)

Bertice Owen and Mary Lou Hare were the ten point-winners last week, their charts being so well done that it was impossible to tell which was the better—so, both got ten points. Who'll be the next winner?

Other names on our Junior honor roll follow:

Helen Squires, Tracy Harris, Gloria Johnson, Mary Hartnack, Ray Bloom, Betty Garvey, Evan White, Jr., Merle White, Marjorie Smith.

Hawaii! There is no place like it! Here, flowers are blooming every day of the year, for in Hawaii it is spring all the year round. It is beautiful everywhere.

in my underground home."

"No?" Becky stretched her eyes in pretended astonishment. "I hope such a learned gentleman as yourself, would not tell us an untruth?"

This was too much for the lizard, who declared he would prove his words. So he scuttled into his dark hole, while the dog and the rabbit folded their paws, waiting for his tail to disappear from sight. As it did so, Becky scooped up hot coals from the hearth, packed them into the opening of his hole, and placed a tin frying pan over them. This made a terrific heat, and a splendid lid for the top of the hole. But still they were not satisfied. They piled everything within sight, including chairs and tables, on top of the pan, then they went hurrying through the desert.

"Wasn't that clever?" asked Becky, trotting quickly beside the rabbit, "guess hot coals will fix Mr. Liz."

"Not for long," prophesied Snoop, as he raised his ears upward, in search of wind. "Unless I miss my guess, there's plenty of trouble in store for us," and sure enough, even as he spoke, the earth became alive with snakes and toads, and any number of scaley creatures, who ran from their many holes.

"Where is Lizard" they asked, in [illegible] "What have you done with him?" Becky looked at them, in a bewildered way, then said . . .

BLOIS

An old French proverb says "He who has not seen Blois in lilac time has not experienced the sweetness of living." But it seems better to say that "He who has not seen Blois at any time has missed a great privilege." Here at the Chateau of Blois Francis I inaugurated his career as one of France's greatest builder kings. Blois was the beloved city of Victor Hugo and his father spent the last years of his life here. Ancient lore and legend lurke in every little nook and corner of this historic village, but Blois does not live in the glory of its past. It has kept step in the march of civilization. The stores, or les grande maisons, are up to date, the hotels are modern and the train and bus service is excellent. Nor has nature slighted this beloved city of kings, the profusion of flowers scattered hither and yon, the lilt of the lazy dreamy water of the Loire as it trickles over the little white cobblestones that shine almost as bright as pearls in the sunshine are proof of her generosity.

do. Let me hear from you soon again.

Mary Belle Racca: "Introspection" has a lot to it, and yet does not fill the bill. We seldom, if ever, handle the subject of sickness. Also there are many weak spots in your construction and style. Build these up, and you'll be on top of the world. "College Daze," while every clever, and not too long, is not the type of material we buy. You have tackled a hard subject, one that would stagger a professional, so try us again with regulation stuff. "Speed," by Irving Koster, has attracted world-wide attention. Contributers are asking every day for more stories like that. Study it, and you'll find a great lesson, in the realism of his work; the gripping plot, the cleverly concealed lesson this short story possessed.

NICKNAMES OF THE STATES

By Richard Slade, Los Angeles.

Every State in the Union has a nickname. In some cases the nickname pertains to a certain flower, mineral or plant that happens to grow in that particular State, while in other cases the nickname is merely applied as a matter of custom. You will find it very interesting to look over this list and some day, who knows, it may come in handy with school work. At any cost save it for reference. The nicknames are:

Alabama—Yallerhammers.
Arizona—Apache.
Arkansas—Bowie.
California—El Dorado.
Colorado—Silver.
Connecticut—Nutmeg.
Delaware—Blue Hen's Chickens.
Florida—Land of Flowers.
Georgia—Cracker.
Idaho—Gem.
Illinois—Prairie.
Indiana—Hoosier.
Iowa—Hawkeye.
Kansas—Sunflower.
Kentucky—Blue Grass.
Louisiana—Creole.
Maine—Old Dirigo.
Maryland—Cockade.
Massachusetts—Old Colony.
Michigan—Wolverine.
Minnesota—Gopher.
Mississippi—Bayou.
Missouri—Ozark.
Montana—Bonanza.
Nebraska—Cornhusker.
Nevada—Sage Brush.
New Hampshire—Granite.
New Jersey—Jersey Blue.
New Mexico—Sunshine.
New York—Excelsior.
North Carolina—Tar Heel.
North Dakota—Sioux
Ohio—Buckeye.
Oklahoma—Sooner.
Oregon—Webfoot.
Pennsylvania—Keystone.
Rhode Island—Little Rhody.
South Carolina—Palmetto.
South Dakota—Coyote.
Tennessee—Hog and Hominy.
Texas—Lone Star.

BILL BENNETT'S JEFF

do with it, and he's had a grudge against it ever since.

"But after a while he forgot Dad and took up with me, and he's been my dog ever since. Dad's death had put a big burden on Mother, and of course, when I got to be about 14 or 15, I shouldered some of it. But I was a careless fellow then—thought more about a good time than about crops. I'm nothing to brag on now; but you don't know how I was then. I don't see how we got on at all, but Mother's a fine manager. I used to be fool enough to grumble a lot; but I never was lazy, and we never were exactly in want.

"We came close to it, though, when cotton went down to 5 cents a pound, and it was then that I let Dr. Sloan have Jeff for a bill we owed him. He took the dog off one evening, but Jeff was back next day. The doctor took him off again, but he ran home that night with his broken chain around his neck. When Dr. Sloan came around again, Jeff ran under the house where we couldn't get at him. Somehow he seemed to know he would be needed some day. I surprised up the money and paid the doctor, and Jeff was ours again. That was the best investment I ever made—that money I bought Jeff back with.

"Well, one day there came a message that Grandmother, Mothers's mother, was low. She lived about eighteen miles down toward the flat country. That was before the days when telephones were put in here, and Mother drove off with the man that had brought the message—drove off in a hurry. Sadie and Joe were left with me. An old colored woman came over and cooked the meals and tidied up the house. At night I tried to look after 'em as best I could. But it seemed to me they were a worrisome pair, especially Joe, though I reckon they weren't any worse than most, and that it was partly my fault.

"Grandmother was low a long time, it seemed to me, and I got mighty tired of my job. It looked like everything that I would have gone to happened all at once: parties and dances and a big picnic down the river. At last one Saturday came a rainy blue day; it was in the fall of the year. The kids couldn't play out of doors, and they were restless in the house. I had a hard time with 'em, and got [illegible] and the mush I got didn't help him have distemper. Joe cut up.

"Toward evening it turned cold, and I built a fire. I had hardly settled down to try and pass the time away when somebody hailed me from the road. I went out, and there were two fellows I knew well, one my age, one older. They were in a new rig and driving a fine horse, and were dressed up in their best—wild, harumscarum fellows, the kind I liked and admired in those days. They wanted to know if I wasn't going over to the Marshall's to the party.

"I told 'em about the kids and about Grandmother being low.

"'Oh, come along,' they said, 'just for a little while.' Then Ben, one of the fellows, said he was coming back in half an hour after a young lady, and would drop me off at the house. 'Bessie Thompson's visiting the Marshall's,' he said, 'and she's grown up to be one of the prettiest girls you ever saw. She was asking the other day about you. I told her you had to stay at home and mind the kids. You should have heard Bessie laugh.'

"The Marshalls lived in that house right across the creek there. I said I wouldn't go, but the fellows guyed me. At last I gave in. I ran into the house, got on my good clothes, then ran out to where the horse was pawing and the boys yelling to me to come on. Before I left I built up a good fire and put the big fender in front. I told Joe not to go close to it and not to meddle with the fender. I might better have told him to do it!

"The people were coming to supper when I got there. The big house was lit up bright, all the windows shining, and inside the girls and men were all dressed up and laughing and talking, a jolly crowd. I told 'em I couldn't stay long, and Bessie—she was a fine, pretty girl, sure enough,—when she heard about things at home, told me I mustn't stay.

"I reckon I was a silly fool. When she said that, I made up my mind I'd eat supper right there, that I wouldn't be tied down to a nursing job while all the other fellows had a chance to talk to her. I did go out on the porch every now and then and look over toward the house. But I might have known the children would be frightened to death with night coming on. As it was, though, the laughing and the lights and the pretty faces drove 'em out of my mind.

"We were eating supper when it happened. First I heard a wild sort of barking coming closer and closer; then something ran up on the front porch and bumped into the door. Then a girl screamed, 'He's mad!' and Jeff came running into the room, his tongue hanging out, yelping like he was crazy and running from one to another.

"There was a big scattering, and somebody hollered to bring a gun. But from the second I set eyes on Jeff, and he on me, I knew he wasn't mad. He looked at me just a minute, then ran back into the hall. Do you know, I can see it yet, that look he gave me. I followed him through the hall and out on the porch. Then I saw. Our house was on fire!—the windows were all red!

"I rushed down the steps and across the yard, Jeff barking in front. I didn't even notice the shouts behind me. There was a path through the fields to our house. I never ran that way before; I'll never run that way again. And all the time I cried and prayed like a crazy man, and Jeff bounded in front yelping like he was on a trail.

"When I got to the house the windows were redder than ever and smoke was boiling under the eaves and there was a cracking, popping sound awful to hear. I ran against the door and stove it in. The wall next to the mantel was all afire; the rest was dusky red with smoke and little licking flames, and somewhere the children were crying. It was an awful sound. It freezes my blood now to tell you about it. It seemed that they were crying in my own heart, and that my heart would burst.

"You've heard that animals are afraid of fire? But it was Jeff guided me to Sadie and Joe, huddled up together in the bedroom, Joe with his arms about Sadie, and Sadie hugging and comforting him like a little mother, and praying. It was Jeff guided me out, when I had picked 'em up together. Those arms around my neck in that burning house, those little scared hugs they gave me—I get choked up now when I think of it. Can't help it somehow.

"When we got in the yard the people were running up, with the two fellows that had carried me off among the first. The whole world looked afire now and people's faces [illegible] for the flames had broken out. Even the fellow that had persuaded me to go off to the party was crying like a baby, and the other boy's eyes were big and he was panting as if he'd burst. The others came running, but Joe and Sadie still stuck to me with their arms around my neck, and Jeff stayed close at my side panting and whining. He had saved 'em, but he didn't take any credit. I ought to have been shot for neglect of duty, but Jeff never held it against me.

"No, sir—the old dog's done a lot for the family. He saved the youngsters and made a man out of the fool kid I was. But if he knows it, he's never let on. It was too late after things grew better for me to get much schooling. But I work the farm so that Joe and Sadie can have the best there is. And there's nothing too good for Jeff," he ended abruptly with a little jerky laugh.

"No," I agreed. "No."

Perhaps Jeff, who had been lying there so quietly all through the story, noticed a different note in my voice, for he got up stiffly and did something he had never done before. He came over and thrust his nose into my hand.

I patted him gently, and forgave him all his night-time howling. "Old fellow," I said, "you deserve to be pampered, and if you want the moon, I hope you get it."

Beckman introduces this Alaskan seal coat with flattering white Russian ermine relief, which is a good example of the tendency on the part of the women of Southern California to choose a fur wrap which may be worn for afternoon or evening—the correctness and appropriate accessories for both hours are shown here in a charming manner by Phyllis Crane, charming First National player. This wrap and many extremely smart and original fur creations for early Fall, are now on display at Beckman's Exclusive Fur Shop on West Seventh Street.

Honey Bun Hereley offers here a practical but smart and new imported Fall sports model—cricket flannel skirt with slit pockets and leather belt, inverted plaits and three buttons in front; white chiffon angora sleeveless sweater made in France; white coral necklace just arrived from Italy; white hand woven bag; white cashmere scarf with white clasp, imported by Hereley and Company, of South Oxford, near Wilshire, the "Little Sports Shop Around the Corner."

Adrian, designer of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, declares that the offspring of the long skirt can only be the trousered evening gown—combining the grace of the skirt with the freedom of the trouser, as expressed here by Joan Crawford, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star. This model is fashioned of wisteria velvet with wrap of same, trimmed luxuriously with white fox.

Jean Swartz, original creator of ultra fashions for the matron and young debutante, fashioned this charming dinner dress of imported La France Rose lace—a slight train trails over several layers of chiffon. Mrs. Swartz has conceded to the modern flare for the youthful and flattering effect of the cape.

Sun-tan skin will hold its own during the coming summer months, but it will not be so much a sun-tan caused by "Old Sol" himself, as that applied in the form of a cosmetic, and Doraldina's "Allura" is the ideal cosmetic for this purpose. # VETERAN STAR TALKIE HI

Cyril Maude Brings His Famous Characterization of "Grumpy" to the Screen

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

A camellia is the tell-tale bit of evidence. It serves to convict the diamond thief. And it takes the full length of a talking photoplay for a shrewd old English lawyer to get the fatal flower, so he may free his nephew from disgrace and dishonor, as the unhappy custodian of the huge gem from South Africa.

Maybe, if you have ever seen the play, you will recognize this very brief skeleton of the plot of "Grumpy." With Cyril Maude, doing his famous portrayal of a smart, if aged, sleuth, it has come to the screen as a Paramount production. The Maude characterization will cause it to be chronicled as one of those unique events that belong especially to the talkies.

Maude, of course, enters a highway already opened up by that other veteran, George Arliss. "Grumpy" is Maude's best-known play in this country, and he was chosen to re-enact it for the screen. Some years ago, a silent version was made with Theodore R... but this is the first time the ... tor of the star role has ... on celluloid.

"Grumpy" Bullivant, play... Maude, is a rare old per... He grumbles at a great rate... resists attentions; and resen... lack of them. He sleeps and ... "like kittens" while he is d... ing. And he doesn't doze half ... much as he is presumed to.

was made with Theodore Robert... but this is the first time the cre... tor of the star role has enacted ... on celluloid.

"Grumpy" Bullivant, played by Maude, is a rare old personality. He grumbles at a great rate. He resists attentions; and resents the lack of them. He sleeps and purrs "like kittens" while he is sleeping. And he doesn't doze half as much as he is presumed to.

Maude manages to revitalize the role that he enacted on the stage more than a dozen years ago. He is the life of the party throughout the picture. All his grumpiness yields mirth, and once he is solving the mystery of the missing diamond you are "for him" every moment.

The picture, because it is necessarily shorter than the stage play, indulges in an abrupt transition or two. These throw the character askew momentarily.

Notwithstanding, the plot as adapted is satisfactorily absorbing, and the entertainment as afforded by the central character will be amusing for everybody. As pictures go, therefore, "Grumpy" is exceptionally diverting.

Aside from the star, those who contribute the most to the interest, include Phillips Holmes, Paul Cavanagh, Frances Dade, Paul Lukas and, more incidentally, Olaf Hytten and Doris Luray. Very special mention should be made perhaps before any of these, of Halliwell Hobbes in the role of the old barrister's man, Ruddett.

"Grumpy" was directed by George Cukor and Cyril Gardner. Doris Anderson adapted the film from the play by Horace Hodges and Thomas Wigney Percival.

RUGGLES' SHORE

Wesley, the Director, Entertains for His Brother, Charles, the Actor, at His Attractive Beach Home in Malibu

By GRACE KINGSLEY

"THEY are more like friends than brothers, as Montague Glass used to say of two of his Jewish brother characters in his stories," remarked Stella.

"Who?" I inquired.

"Why, Wesley Ruggles, the director, and Charlie Ruggles, the actor," answered Stella. "Wesley is giving a big party at his Malibu home for Charlie, who has just come out for pictures. We're going with Robert Chisholm and Ivoots Pounds, the English comedians. Wesley and Charlie are so popular that everybody is bound to be there."

We were a little late because Chisholm had had to finish some scenes. We discovered him at the studio, wearing a suit of Alaskan furs, and it had been so hot under the lights that the fur had caught fire!

"But they put the fire out before it did any good," Bob laughed.

He was wearing crepe whiskers, too, and he shed them all the way to the beach because we were in such a hurry to get to the party that he didn't take time properly to remove them. After we arrived, he disappeared, and then returned in a few minutes all nicely shaven!

We found Wesley and Charlie the most gleamingly cordial of hosts, and they were assisted admirably by Kathryn Crawford, Wesley's fiance.

Kathryn was wearing a boy's sailor suit, and looking very cute and pretty.

Charlie and I had a great reunion. We used to know each other in the old Oliver Morosco days, you know, before Charlie became famous.

Richard Dix, wearing his hair very long, which he was bemoaning in the hot weather, was among the first of the guests we greeted.

We went with him out to the back yard of the house, which is fenced in a high fence to the middle line, and there we discovered a lot of games in progress, and most of the guests gathered, either playing them or looking on while seated on the sand.

EDDIE CANTOR was playing deck tennis with Jack Dempsey, and Wesley Ruggles began taking movies with his pee-wee camera, with Eddie Cantor ex-claimed, after he had been playing a little while:

"What—no money?"

Charlie Ruggles is really a champ ping-pong player, however.

Some of the others, including Walter Catlett, Edna Murphy and Robert Leonard, were playing handball.

Lillian Asher, Edna Murphy and many of the other feminine Malibu dwellers were wearing elaborate pajama suits of beautiful silk, and found them most comfortable for beach lounging.

Chisholm, Walter Catlett and Miss Pounds hobnobbed about their London and other English experiences.

Walter told how he was out in the country one day with a picnic party, when one of the girls got thirsty. All the water had been drunk up, but there was a cow near-by in a pasture, which he proposed to milk.

"I observed a crowd of young folks traversing the meadow by going around, and thought how foolish they were. I bounded blithely away with a bucket over my arm, straight across the pasture when, bing! I landed in the water! Surprise was no name for it. You see what looked to me like greensward was really a pool covered with green scum."

A GROUP of us gathered about a table for supper, including Jack Dempsey, Arthur Rosson, Edna Murphy, Ralph Ince, Robert Leonard, Gertrude Olmstead and others, and we spoke of what fine condition Jack seemed to be in.

"Play tennis?" somebody kidded Jack.

"No, as a matter of fact, it's too strenuous," Jack answered. We thought he was kidding back, but he explained that it wasn't at all the right kind of exercise for a prize fighter, and that it overtrained certain muscles.

Jack gallantly passed his plate of food to Stella, and that sweet little Edna Murphy insisted on trotting out to the dining-room and bringing him more from the buffet table.

"I have influence with the cook and servanta," she explained gaily.

Jack made up for it by serving us all with coffee after supper.

Lillian Asher joined us, and told about how all the women at Malibu go fishing every Friday.

Bob Leonard made Kathryn Crawford lift up her voice and "speak" for a piece of chicken, which she did very comically.

Estelle Taylor was to come later. She was working in the final scenes of "Lilliom." She did arrive around 8 o'clock.

She told us that Wesley Ruggles, who is to direct Richard Dix in "Cimmaron," with Estelle playing Dixie Lee, had scared her about the part.

"'Be wholesome and sweet,'" Estelle declared Wesley had told her. "But I told him that the hardest thing I had to do." Estelle laughed, "was to keep down my wholesomeness."

Estelle is looking beautiful and slim these days, with a new radiance somehow.

Mary Lawlor, pretty as a pink, arrived with the handsome young Phillips Holmes. She is Anderson Lawlor's sister, you know.

HAROLD LLOYD was there, but Mildred had stayed at home with little Gloria, who had a slight cold.

Harold told us about his trip to Hawaii, and how he had spoken over the radio to the lepers on Molokai Island. He said it was against all the rules he had made for the trip to speak over the radio, but when the lepers sent word they wanted to hear him, he had not the heart to refuse. Which is just like his kindness.

Ralph Forbes was there, charming and gallant as always, with Ruth Chatterton and Fay Bainter, and the two William Colliers, Senior and Junior, were among the most popular guests.

Ann Pennington, cute and piquant, arrived rather late, and there were Marie Prevost, charming in a boy's sailor suit; William Seiter and Laura LaPlante, Sidney Lanfield and Shirley Mason, Al Hall, Millard Webb and his wife, Mary Eaton, lovely in her white-and-gold beauty; Bert Wheeler and his cute little wife, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woolsey, Neil Hamilton and beautiful Mrs. Hamilton, Eph Ascher, Ilka Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Warner Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. Tod Browning, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dwan, Skeets Gallagher, Rube Goldberg, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur William Green, Ines Courtney, Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, Doris Denbo and Don Eddy, Henry Hobart and Olive Tell, Gertrude Olmstead, Mae Sunday, Anderson Lawlor, Adela Rogers Hyland and Dick Hyland, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Marin, George Olsen and Ethel Shutta, Louis Sarecky, Harry Tierney, Tom Clarken, Lina Basquette, Paul Schofield, Vivienne Schofield, Sam Shipman, Raquel Torres, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tierney, Virginia Valli, Carey Wilson, and others.

John Boles was there with his pretty wife, and we heard from someone present that there is a possibility of Boles appearing in a musical version of "The Sheik," which made Rudy Valentino famous, you remember.

Thelma Todd, looking very smart in a sport suit with a cloak, arrived with Harvey Priester.

Somebody called out "Hello," and I had to look a second time to recognize Kathleen Martin, who used to play leads with Walter Catlett on the stage in New York, and who had arrived with him. She has grown so slim and is looking simply years younger than when I met her at Glenn Tryon's party last winter.

That amazing young genius, Carl Laemmle, Jr., was among the guests, and kept everybody laughing at his cleverness and wit; and William Haines was there, looking very handsome and kidding everybody as usual.

Al Rogell and Marion Douglas, his wife, were to have come to the party, but Marion, Edna Murphy told us, had dropped a hot curling iron on her eye while dressing, and so was wearing her eye in a sling.

Edna told us that, according to her doctor's statistics, such an accident occurred on an average of one a day, whereupon Mrs. Hamilton spoke up to say she hoped it wouldn't be her fate to uphold the average, and we all said Amen.

AGAINST green turf their bodies flash across the court . . . and cheering stands applaud a brilliant volley at the net, while when the set is finished they find new vigor and refreshment in this fine old ginger ale. These are sportsmen, sun-tanned, lithe and active, who find a matching quality of excellence in the crystal depths of "Canada Dry."

No wonder! This fine old ginger ale has basic excellence. Its very foundation is "Liquid Ginger"—which we make from selected Jamaica ginger root by a special process. This process is controlled by us and, unlike any other method, retains for "Canada Dry" all of the original aroma, flavor and natural essence of the ginger root.

No wonder countless homes in this country serve "Canada Dry"! Order it today in the Hostess Package of 12 bottles.
